Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

We were due to get married in Northern Ireland in June this year with a humanist wedding. Due COVID-19 we cancelled our wedding and moved to England to be closer to my family.

Now that we are in England we cannot have only a humanist wedding need to have a registrar. This legal barrier prohibits the legal wedding we want.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

As detailed, we were due to have a humanist wedding in Northern Ireland this June. We have had to move to England only to discover that the sort of wedding we truly want to follows our beliefs is not allowed and would need a registrar to make our wedding legally binding.

This coupled with the monopoly on wedding venues and their exorbitant costs in England means that our £5000 wedding (license, humanist costs, venue costs, food for 100 people) for a wedding in Northern Ireland will now cost twice as much (often 3 times as much) to have a wedding of a similar standing. Needless to say, we have had to cancel our wedding indefinitely due to all of this. This in term, has impacted my mental health.

I want to marry my partner the way that we want and not have to pay a princes ransom for it.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It's an outdated law

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In a modern world makes complete sense. Doing it online in the first instance and then having an interview, possibly when you collect your marriage schedule, makes sense.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

See above. When marriage schedule is collected.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Yes. With technology, remote interviews can be taken. To help with concerns make it a requirement that the interview must be completed by video interview.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes. Many people get married in destinations such as Italy and they can register to marry there and not be a resident. The same should apply in England and Wales.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If a pandemic or another lockdown this would give couples an opportunity to reschedule within the year of notice without the headache of contacting local government.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the Officiant can't attend then a substitute should absolutely be able to complete the wedding.

Please share your views below:

Yes. If the Officiant can not complete the wedding on the agreed upon date, then the couple should not be penalised because of it.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

People should be free to choose who they marry, how they marry and where they marry.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

This should be the choice of the couple marrying, not the church.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

This is an archaic and outdated mandate. A couple should not have to prove they are fit to be married to one another.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

This should again be down to the couple and the relationship they have with the church.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

All weddings should have the same civil preliminaries, this makes legal requirements more streamlined

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, as no as the officiants extend into other beliefs such as humanist.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 22:

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As a member of the humanist society, I want to get married by a humanist celebrant/officiant without needing a registrar

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Humanist

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Point 1: some belief systems do not require people to meet. As a humanist, I have a valued belief system and I am a member of that organisation. Rather than 'meet' perhaps it should be an organisation that can demonstrate its core values and have a determined amount of members.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes. If an organisation promotes unlawful purpose, they should not be allowed to conduct weddings

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes. A registrar has the ability to conduct a wedding because of the position they hold within the council, same should apply elsewhere.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This will also offer protection to a couple, they could search for their officiant to make sure they are legally registered to marry them. A system similar to Companies House perhaps.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed. Humanist Celebrants have to complete a course/qualification and are held accountable by the Humanist Society. The same should apply to all officiants.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage fees should not exceed those charged by the registrars office. These should be government guided but only include the officiants fees, not premise fees, travel expense etc.

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

There should be a cap or clear pricing structure. Ie a fixed fee for being the Officiant set by government plus mileage and preparation time (getting to know the couple). But there should an option of additional services such as writing order of service, writing vows, etc with these being down to the discretion of the officiant and the couple.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be a conflict of interest.

Please expand on your answer:

It should be the choice of the couple where they marry.

Please share your views below:

It should be the choice of the couple.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

Law should profit people getting married anyway. For example, if people was to marry in a church but are non religious they should legally able to, but it's up to the church if they will allow it.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Officiants should be able to determine if a location is fit for purpose and guide the couple accordingly.

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance only. It is down to the discretion of the officiant and/or the organisation they represent.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would give couples the chances to pick their location and officiant based on what they want.

Please share your views below:

The venue should be responsible for completing the process ie registering.

This could be managed in a simile way to Companies House. Each year the venue must complete a form and say they are still active etc. If they don't re-register annually their venue is removed from the list.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes to parts 1 & 2.

No to part 3. Some people are estranged from one or both parents. Some parents are deceased. Perhaps, this could be the name of the witness, their relationship and how long they have known them.

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

Getting married should be done to the individual as long as they are of sound mind.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be a shorter time limit imposed for the notice. If a person is declared terminal ill they should be able to give notice online, it should be check within 5 working days (including interview) and the notice period should be shorter too ie 14 days. This would allow 3 weeks for the schedule to be issued.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

As previously detailed, we cancelled our wedding in Northern Ireland due to Covid and are now living in England (again due to COVID). To have the humanist wedding we want at a similar venue in England we can't. Not only can't we have an purely humanist wedding, or get married outside, but venue priceS has tripled.

As such, we are in a position of not getting married at all (we are already cohabiting) or having a much smaller impersonal wedding.

At present all our plans remain cancelled, and yet I have my dream wedding dress hanging in a bag waiting to be worn. I am at a loss.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

2. The cost of venue hire is astronomical in England. To find a venue that charges less than £3000 (or a minimum number of guests to stay over night) is harder than finding the holy grail. This monopoly on venues is beyond unreasonable. The prices that can be charged would be a deposit on a mortgage. It's this level of pricing that creates a 'poor' mentality and encourages people to get into debt (often a lifetime's worth) just to have a wedding. Even a simple wedding.

5. Currently to have a Humanist wedding in a venue of choice we have to pay the humanist celebrant and the registrar. This alone can cost in the region of £1200. This is unfair and non-inclusive, teetering on discrimination.

2. Being able to choose a venue of your choice gives the couple and not the venues control over where they want to get married and how much they want to spend. As previously mentioned, the cost of venue would equate to a deposit for a mortgage. The average price of a wedding in England in 2019 was approximately £32k. This is an obscene amount of money to spend and is creating an elitist/esquire element to weddings.

3. As detailed above, to have a humanist wedding we essentially have to pay twice; once for the humanist celebrant and once for the registrar.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

5. Getting married is deemed to be one of life's stressful moments, stress that comes from money and not being able to afford or have the legal stand point to have the wedding the couple wants. Stress can kill. It has been documented many times.
This proposal implies a welcome change in the law. The onus is on what the couple marrying wants and establishes laws to support them.

Currently it is not possible to have a Christian same sex marriage in the Church of England. This is prevented by the quadruple lock. It is not possible for Christians to have a church wedding conducted by the established church in this country. This exemption needs to be removed.

Consultation Question 3:

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage tourism happens in other parts of the world and has a benefit for the local economy. Why shouldn't a couple be able to get married at a place of their choice even if they have no connection with the place?

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Giving notice online is helpful for convenience.

An in person interview is essential, both to protect against forced marriages and to prevent fraudulent marriages. If one of the couple does not want to get married but may be under pressure, perhaps from their family an in person meeting could detect this. Also, marriages of convenience or using false documents could be detected.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

Three working days. So an interview on a Friday afternoon cannot lead to a marriage on a Monday morning.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

In person interviews are more likely to raise concerns that may not be apparent from paperwork submissions.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, especially if notice can be given online.

Consultation Question 9:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This depends on how much information is made public. It is important that notice is made public, but who would decide what level of risk is appropriate to expose or conceal? Would the online notices be searchable, for example would an ex spouse or boyfriend / girlfriend be able to troll them as a result?

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Have to allow panning time for those who want a big wedding

Consultation Question 11:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This would mean that couples would have to find an officiant first, even if they changed it later. Getting registered should be the first step, even if there is a proposal that a named officiant had to be put on the schedule within a limited period of time.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Common sense.

Please share your views below:

There should be other valid reasons, for example jury service, family bereavement, arrest, quarantine etc

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Banns are supposed to be the public notice to the community. If they are read in another country then the local community might not be given a reasonable opportunity to object.

I also think banns should go, everyone should go through a civil registration process.

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't understand this. Does it mean that banns can be read in a disused / damaged church or that marriages can take place in a that church after banns elsewhere?

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

No, they should be published everywhere that other notices are published.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes. Preferably the use of banns should be removed. A member of clergy who conducts fewer than one wedding a year is unlikely to be as good at spotting forged documents or a forced marriage as a trained registrar who does this all the time

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes. Best way to guard against fraudulent marriage

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

This is the fairest and safest way to conduct marriage preliminaries. This way everyone is treated equally and certain groups do not have access to privilege and less likely to be taken advantage of.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Ensures safety of all concerned

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Couples who want a faith element to their wedding should be allowed to have this with a registration officer

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why not?

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

They should be treated the same as other Christian denominations, where they have to be designated people and it is not automatic. The Church of England currently claims and defends its right to exclude some couples from church marriage. This exemption means that they will not marry same sex couples in church even though they are the established church in this country and same sex marriage is legal in this country. They can't have the automatic right to marry everyone and at the same time refuse to marry some couples. If they want the automatic right then they must commit to being willing to carry out each and every marriage which is legal. So they must give up the quadruple lock

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sensible

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Although I think it is better to licence individuals

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Would there be any requirement that this 20 was part of a larger e.g. national group? You want to avoid problems such as football fans who 'worship' weekly at their football match and devise a marriage service based around their club.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes they should be excluded. However the reasons should not be too broad. It could be argued that the Church of England should be excluded on these grounds due to its public policies on refusing to solemnise same sex marriages in church and the refusal to ordain those validly married. These are contrary to public policy.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes, although it could cause extra administration

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Central register that standardises everything ensures processes are correct

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be criteria for acceptance, for example retired clergy, MP etc

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Basic duty of care

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is the bare minimum

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, although it is not unreasonable for them to make a modest profit from their labour.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with the first part, preventing conflict of interest. But there should be some limit on exorbitant fees. Perhaps a table of suggested fees would be suitable

Consultation Question 34:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If they are nominated by a faith organisation, then they should be doing it as part of the expression of their faith, so it would be a conflict to do it in as part of a non religious organisation. But doing it in a private capacity would not be a conflict.

2 not allow

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

They know best what they expect from their nominees

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Necessary to maintain the integrity of the process

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is duty of care, so important

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should be a renewal period for the authorisation, to ensure training and quality

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Training is an essential part of it

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Witnessed consent is absolutely essential for a valid marriage

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With certain essential legal formalities

Consultation Question 44:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Jewish and Quaker - yes

The Anglican church, as the established church in this country, cannot simply be allowed to do whatever it wants to do. It already discriminates against certain groups with respect to marriage. It needs to be willing to conduct all legal marriages and not simply do whatever it wants to do

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It makes it much more straightforward. So a poem that has some faith content or song words would be allowed or a favourite reading etc

Please share your views below:

Just that the balance of the service should be recognisably civil

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why propose this?

The religious service would not have a legal meaning, but it could have significant religious significance to the couple

It is what has helped those remarrying after divorce to have a religious ceremony when the church of England uses their opt out to refuse to marry the couple in church. Where the ceremony is not legally binding then the Church of England can exercise a 'pastoral accommodation' to have some sort of religious element to their commitment

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The idea that a marriage should be public is a good one. It was designed to help prevent false and invalid marriages - those who wanted to object could not be denied entry

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided it is safe

Please share your views below:

If people want to do it and it is legal and safe, then why not? Trespassing would not be allowed.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided they are accessible on the day of the ceremony, then no problem

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

Other

Please expand on your answer:

For 1 and 2 there is already a lot of prohibiting of perfectly lawful and reasonable things. For 3, a civil wedding will not contradict the beliefs of the religious venue, but a non-religious one might. There needs to be some sort of opt out clause

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sensible

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again sensible

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Eminently sensible

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Saves a lot of duplicated work. Good idea

Please share your views below:

The venues should be required to show that they meet the standards set out above in

We provisionally propose that guidance should be produced by the General Register Office to provide advice to officiants on how to assess whether a location is safe and dignified for a wedding.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Adding the names and occupations of parents should be optional. They are not necessary for a valid marriage. Some couples may be marrying against the wishes of their families and may find having their names on the paperwork to be painful.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Welsh is important but not everyone speaks it

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sensible

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In 4 the religious governing authority may have given their consent for same sex marriages but they also require the individual church to opt in. For example the Baptist Church. Currently an individual church registers for same sex marriage and without this the marriage should be void. Perhaps 4 could be slightly reworded for local situations

No

Please expand on your answer:

1 yes

2 no, witnesses are a help in preventing forced marriages

3 these things should be done and should be essential, especially the registration. Perhaps a time limit, voidable if not completed within 30 days of the wedding date

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As answered above

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No problem

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage has legal implications and these should not be imposed upon a couple

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Forced marriages are not always easy to get out of

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Their actions have legal consequences for the couple so it should be an offence

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Only fair

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

If it is below cost, who pays for the travel?

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Perfectly reasonable and ordinary suggestion

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This ensures it is fair

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Costs may go beyond merely travel costs and should include the time of the officials etc

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

They should be paid for all the time they spend on the event

Consultation Question 81:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

A modest amount of profit should be allowed, if these are non essential. If the coupe choose to have these discretionary services then the cost could allow for some profit

Consultation Question 82:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That is fair

Consultation Question 83:

(1) the fee should be set by regulation at a level below cost-recovery; or

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be flexibility. Terminally ill does not always mean that death is imminent nor that the person cannot pay some modest sum

Consultation Question 84:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Perfectly fair

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Current law certainly stops same sex couples having religious church weddings. The Church of England does not even allow blessings to take place after a civil marriage. It also has a series of prohibitions and sanctions on those who have a same sex marriage, ranging from losing their licence, to refusal to promote them to barring them from applying for ordination etc.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

There was only very limited opportunity for personalisation in our Civil Ceremony, with the registration service, at an approved premises.

Although it was meaningful (because of our feelings for each other and because we wanted to be married) the ceremony felt very generic - even though at the time I was employed as a Superintendent Registrar by the Registration Service ( or maybe that was one of the reasons why I felt this way?) I knew that the person officiating had used EXACTLY the same script at all of their weddings! I even knew when the 'jokes' were coming!

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

My son is due to be married at a register office this weekend, they have had great difficulty in gaining information from the registrars and the restrictions that they have put in place, allegedly to ensure that the space is COVI-19 secure, seem excessive compared to other register offices.

Despite being limited to 6 guests, having the bare minimum of legal words and the ceremony being held in a waiting room (rather than a designated ceremony room) with ABSOLUTELY no personalisation or guest interaction allowed they have still been charged the 'enhanced' ceremony rate because it is on a Saturday - I don't know how the local authority can justify this fee?

I worked for the registration service for 13 years, beginning as a casual registrar of marriages and working my way up to being a Superintendent Registrar.

I have worked as an Independent Celebrant for the past 5 years. I conducted thousands of weddings during my times at the registration service and have conducted over 150 wedding celebration ceremonies.

I strongly disagree that registration officers should only be able to officiate at civil weddings - or have I misinterpreted your question? Do you mean they should have no place in a religious wedding? In which case, I agree - they should only be involved in civil weddings.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As I have previously stated, I have been a registrar, superintendent registrar and celebrant. If you are well prepared, and arrive in good time, there is no need for two people to officiate.

I think that the General Register Office should hold a list and it should have names that are designated as 'right and proper' and subject to removal from the list if they are found not to be, so no, I don't feel the 'office' would be sufficient - it should be individuals not their job title.

These are the promises that I make to my couples...

I Promise:

To empower and enable you to have a meaningful and memorable ceremony, crafted just for you, held in any venue, at any time, that you choose.

To create a ceremony unique to you, reflecting your personalities, your relationship and your commitment.

To keep listening to you and always be warm, friendly and responsive to your questions, concerns and requests.

To work helpfully with you, and your other suppliers, and provide a personal and professional service, so that you are always assured that you have placed the most important part of your Wedding or Civil Partnership Day in the right hands.

To conduct your ceremony clearly and confidently so that you, and your guests, feel part of a true celebration of your love, full of special moments of pure joy and happiness (and hopefully lots of laughter - and maybe a few happy tears)

I have conducted ceremonies for a large number of couples who live abroad, but have a connection to and want to celebrate their marriage in England or Wales. The current system for residency and giving notice is prohibitive in terms of time and cost. These couples complete the legalities where they live and then travel to the UK for what they consider to be their real wedding.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

we got married last Friday at an informal celebration with our family members as we had to cancel our original wedding due to coronavirus. Prior to the pandemic I already considered that for personal and religious reasons it would have been appropriate to relax the archaic rules of marriage for those who wished to do so. Naturally it should remain open to individuals to get married in a church or registry office in the currently legal way should they choose to do so. Following the pandemic I feel this even more strongly. Due to inability to give notice people were deprived of the opportunity to get legally married at the time of their choosing.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

We have had to book a separate legal marriage and did this prior to the meaningful ceremony.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Due to the pandemic we were not able to get legally married at the time of our choosing as our original notice would have been voided by the change in venue.

Serving notice was farcical anyway as the building the screen was shown in was locked.

Obviously we were aware of this before we undertook our family ceremony but it felt wrong that we would be deprived of getting married at this time particularly given the fact my husband is a front line medic, was exposed to the covid wards and indeed caught covid. If he had died he would have never been able to legally marry his fiancée due to archaic rules.

Apart from my personal experience I believe Christians are treated unfairly over other belief systems as they can get legally married in a venue that is holy to them whereas members of other religions cannot.

However non religious people should be able to choose a venue that is important to them too. This is an equality issue.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Tax

Complications with death in service benefit

Lack of recognition of our relationship

Judgment from other individuals during pregnancy

Requirement to register the person I see as my husband on a birth certificate when this would be automatic if we were legally married.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

None applied to us.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I have already covered this in previous responses however the key issue was that we could not serve notice in our home Borough even when it was possible for us to book a legal wedding with 2 witnesses.

When we did get the opportunity to serve notice it was entirely pointless as our information was displayed on screens in a building that was closed to the public.

Having a restriction on reception party sizes seems fair.

Insisting that wedding ceremonies themselves have to occur at a licensed site is unfair and ridiculous when individuals have already sometimes lost money on the site they had originally booked.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I have no opinion on this point as I do not understand the purpose of the restriction or what benefit abolishing it may have.

I don't think it is a problem for non-resident people to not be able to get married here as we cannot legally get married abroad either.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As previously explained the physical notice was pointless. I didn't have a problem with appearing in person to give notice but was frustrated by (1) not being able to do so when I wanted to due to covid restrictions and (2) the notice itself being redundant by virtue of being displayed in a closed building.

Consultation Question 6:

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 7:

Agree provided individuals are adequately protected

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes respect these circumstances, although take cost into account.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As stated above

Consultation Question 10:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not know what a schedule is in this context

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I cannot see any value whatsoever in having to identify the officiant in advance of the day. It should be easy for changes to be made as we are now capable of amending paper trails more quickly than used to be the case

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

People spend a lot of time and money planning weddings which are sometimes very difficult for guests to attend. Why wreck a ceremony due to no fault of the couple? It is difficult to see the benefit in not allowing substitute officiants.

Please share your views below:

Yes - provided there is a paper trail. Again I can't see the benefit of not allowing this subject to the original officiant still getting paid if the couple cancels late etc.

Consultation Question 13:

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

all weddings should be treated equally.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

seems like a good method of ensuring avoidance of forced and sham marriages or failure to formalise a marriage effectively.

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

people should have their wedding officiated by a person in a role of their choice.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Cannot see the purpose of requiring more than one

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I can't comment as I don't know the current requirement or the religious implications of this.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Every religion or belief organisation should allow any marriage that it recognises to be legally binding in the UK subject to UK checks and balances (ie. Freedom to consent etc) in the same way that Christian weddings are recognised subject to these controls. I would gladly accept a government authorisation process for such representatives to ensure that UK legal requirements to recognise marriages are met (in addition to any religious / belief requirements).

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Definition seems sufficiently wide. Humanists for example should be able to get legally married in my opinion in the same way as members of religions.

However I would also support authorisation of marriages which do not adhere to any belief system.

Please share your views below:

Create an authorisation process based around an understanding of the legal requirements and let authorised officiants build on that framework as required. Charge the same fee for all authorisations.

Allow officiants to affiliate themselves with a specific religion or belief system (so that more people want to use them!)

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

why does there need to be at least 20 people? Provided the second requirement is met and the officiant is authorised, then why not allow the couple to get married in accordance with their own desire to do so and irrespective of any wider belief system?

To me marriage is the union of two people in a family who wish to spend their lives together. It doesn't require any wider more fundamental belief system in my opinion.

This approach does not reduce the meaning of marriage for other groups who choose to have a ceremony in accordance with their own belief system.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes and this is a good example of why it is a bad idea to tie marriage to a wider belief system.

Unlawful/ immoral officiants should not be able to be authorised in allegiance with a specific belief system.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes subject to authorisation ie demonstrating an understanding of the baseline legal requirements

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

makes sense to have a centralised list

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

but this goes against your earlier stated requirements re the requirement for a belief organisation

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

they should have responsibility for vetting their affiliated authorised officiants

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

this is the authorisation process I mentioned earlier

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Couples should be able to choose who they want but the option should remain to always have an affordable wedding for each type of religion / belief system / non-belief based options

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There always be an affordable option

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

People affiliated with a religion or belief system should be able to understand with certainty that their officiant is a genuine member of that religion or belief system

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It is imperative that marriage is not entered into casually or without understanding the gravity of the commitment as this goes to the feeling of unity that it is supposed to represent.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes but the guidance should not be overly prescriptive and should only relate to baseline legal requirements as opposed to any ceremonial aspects arising from specific religions or belief systems

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

yes if they were nominated by an organisation. The proposals potentially allow for individual applicants too. These may have to pay an extra fee to be subject to external monitoring.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

otherwise the authorisation process is rendered meaningless.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

as above

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

yes subject to monitoring

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This the same for multiple other professional bodies or bodies of authority and seems like a reasonable requirement

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

this should represent the bare minimum and be respectful of traditions religions and belief systems (ie it should be as flexible as possible)

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

see previous responses on this point and the decisions and opinions of the couple to be married being paramount

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

treat everyone the same in terms of a baseline requirement for getting married in the eyes of the law.

If additional or modified requirements are required by religion / belief system this is a matter for the couple and their organisation.

For example a marriage that meets the legal requirements may not necessarily meet the Jewish requirements.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

How the couple chooses to conduct their ceremony should be a matter for the couple.

What is required for a ceremony to be recognised by a religion or belief organisation should be a matter for their religion or belief organisation.
So for example a marriage that meets the legal requirements with some Jewish aspects would be a legal civil wedding but not necessarily a Jewish wedding where it doesn't meet the Jewish requirements.

Please share your views below:

I can't see why it is necessary to give examples. The couple should be able to do what they want in a civil ceremony and the couple should accept that their religion or belief organisation will not necessarily recognise the wedding if they "cherry pick" requirements.

It should be open to an officiant affiliated with a religion or belief organisation to refuse to conduct a ceremony that would not be recognised by their religion or belief system.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This doesn't seem like a legal matter provided the wedding is recognised as a civil as opposed to religious wedding.

If the law was changed to recognise all religious weddings as what they are provided they meet the requirements of the religion then this requirement is unlikely to be required

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided the couple and officiant have a plan for any instance where the ceremony is disrupted and accept this risk.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Yes

this seems unnecessary and could dilute the value of a special place for members of a religion or belief organisation.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

there will be a training and engagement framework to enable this. Leaving it to the couple could be confusing and result in formalities not being met

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

safe yes but dignified is too subjective if non religious or belief based weddings are to be allowed.

Provided the venue meets the legal requirements and the officiant is happy to marry the couple there then it seems like it is a matter for the couple not thr state to choose the venue .

Other

Please expand on your answer:

yes subject to the comment above re dignity which would not be state assessed in my opinion

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes although i am extremely uncomfortable with the requirement to treat same sex couples differently. I grudgingly accept this is inevitable for some types of religious ceremony but the opt in should only be required in relation to religious ceremonies in a religion where such opt ins are actually formally required. Such opt ins should not be a pre-requisite for all religious ceremonies.

No

Please expand on your answer:

witnesses and registrarion should be required. If the couple wants their marriage to be recognised meeting these basic requirements seems reasonable.

Errors could be corrected by a declaration by both parties witnessed by the officiant or a substitute officiant.

Consultation Question 58:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes although i am extremely uncomfortable with the requirement to treat same sex couples differently. I grudgingly accept this is inevitable for some types of religious ceremony but the opt in should only be required in relation to religious ceremonies in a religion where such opt ins are actually formally required. Such opt ins should not be a pre-requisite for all religious ceremonies.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This goes to the intention of the couple. The presumption should be confirmed by a witnessed statement from the couple or rectification of the certificate.

I do not believe cohabitation should be a requirement.

Yes

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

current law demonstrates inequality:

Religions aren't treated equally

Religious people have more entitlement than non religious people

Some people get to marry at a location they chose and others don't

The only reason a religious wedding should not be binding is if there is a direct conflict between the legal marriage requirement and the religious wedding. If both sets of requirements can be met then it should be seen as a religious wedding.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Currently good
2. Currently good from a legal perspective but appalling examples of excessive venue charges in some instances. I do not see this as a State matter
3. Can't comment
4. You can't?
5. I am annoyed I have had to split my ceremony and legal wedding and know many other couples who feel the same.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. I dont think there is a change
2. Extremely significant
3. I believe this would no longer be necessary in all cases other than overseas weddings

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

1. I think this law is outdated and should be abolished. Not so much due to costs but more to do with autonomy. Couples should choose their location.
2. We had a good experience in this regard in London.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Is good however I would welcome a removal of the current trend for venues to charge exorbitant costs for an event just because it happens to be a wedding.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Would allow for streamlining and more meaningful practices so effort could be focused on checking consent / shams as opposed to the daft practice of giving notice to shut buildings

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

As above

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I don't feel strongly about overseas weddings needing to be formalised in thr UK

I can see it being difficult and expensive to recognise overseas weddings as having legal status and given the ease and cheapness of registry office weddings I csnt see this as a priority.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

As above

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I would support marriage on UK registered vessels of any kind (provided the minimal legal requirements were met)

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

A good source of income and a new maritime industry!

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

The cost of giving wider choice should sit with the individual - but i consider the widening and increase in competition would bring the exorbitant venue costs down which would even this out

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Government guidance to Local Registration Services was confused and late to arrive without enough scope for preparation.

Govt. refusal to relax the location rules made it more problematic to bring ceremonies back online.

Licensing of a whole property including outside spaces rather than individual rooms would make the process easier to manage.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples should have freedom to choose which district to give notice in.

Currently couples with immigration implications already have choice over which register office to go to. This would rectify this unfairness.

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The safeguarding of individuals which face to face interviews provide is paramount.

Registrars are able to assess the risk of domestic abuse, sham marriage, forced marriage, identity fraud etc and make referrals to the appropriate authorities.

Reducing face to face scrutiny will damage this safety net.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

To allow for immigration checks and other investigations to take place before the ceremony, and to allow for staff planning etc, a minimum of 28 days should be maintained

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

No. This is a dangerous idea and would mean some at risk individuals would not get the chance to be helped, while others would be upset by the implication of being called to a face to face interview while others aren't

Consultation Question 8:

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Impediment may occur between preliminaries and the ceremony, so this should be addressed in the content of the ceremony.

Legally recognised wording (either written as part of the schedule or in the ceremony) to confirm the consent. Allowing couples to change this would cause doubt as to the validity of the ceremony.

Agree with the other parts

Consultation Question 43:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A legally recognised and prescribed element would ensure all present understand the lawful status of the union.

Consultation Question 44:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

no opinion

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Content of the ceremony around the legally recognised elements should be entirely at the couple's discretion.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A couple should have the right to privacy

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Licensing of venues ensures health and safety measures are in place and should continue.

Please share your views below:

A flexible licensing system would be preferable, with discretion of the local SR to allow licenses for individual ceremonies or for longer periods of time. Outdoor ceremonies should be allowed, where there is contingency for bad weather in place.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 65:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There is a temptation by these couples to delay the wedding for various reasons (family attending etc.) This often results in the terminal party dying before the ceremony can go ahead.

It would be preferable to impose a time restriction on these schedules to avoid this issue.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 76:

(1) the same fee as other cases in which the registration officer must travel to the person giving notice, set nationally on a cost-recovery basis; or

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is for the benefit of the individuals concerned, particularly where it involves a terminal patient. Often it is arranged in order to avoid tax liability. Therefore, it would be right for the couple to pay a fair cost recovery price to gain those benefits.

Consultation Question 77:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A more free market would provide ceremonies for all income levels.
register office ceremonies are currently charged below cost recovery.

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 80:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This should be set by the local authority on a fair basis in line with market forces.

Consultation Question 81:

No

Please expand on your answer:

local authorities should be able to compete fairly with the market and set fees accordingly as per their own priorities. This should include income generation pressures.

Consultation Question 82:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 83:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

The fee should be set at cost recovery. Not below.

Consultation Question 84:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Local authority should control this process and the fees involved

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I have seen no evidence that either statement is true.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The fees under the current scheme are generally proportionate to the cost of delivery, except where terminal, housebound or detained are concerned.

Couples should have more choice of venue and be able to marry outside.

Venues should be able to license for a single ceremony or choose to license for longer.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Pre-approval should be maintained to ensure compliance with regulations and safety.

Registrar availability is good under the current scheme.

Religious officiants should only operate on religious premises.

I do not believe the number of weddings will increase.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current law allows for LAs to ensure local venues are safe and that those officiating civil ceremonies are compliant.

Some elements of the current law cause LAs to work at below cost recovery.

Allowing LAs to license officiants and locations (inside and out) would maintain compliance and allow for a freeing up of the market.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Allowing LAs to license officiants and locations (inside and out) would maintain compliance and allow for a freeing up of the market.

The scheme as proposed would push LAs into reducing availability of registrars and cut jobs.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current system stifles competition between LAs and prevents wedding tourism into the country.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Freedom to marry at a location of your choice is welcomed.

competition between local authorities to bring weddings into their area would happen as each wedding has a potential benefit to the local economy.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

1. There is a risk that the proposals will remove an income stream from local authorities at a difficult time.

However there is possibility for casual ceremony registrars to move into the independent sector and work under license which could benefit the industry and local authorities.

2. More venues could benefit from looser venue regulation

3. No opinion

4. independent officiants could improve their professionalism under a licensing scheme

5. couples would have more choice.

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It will allow people to marry in places that are meaningful to them without a major upheaval to life...if you only have a weekend free having to live somewhere else for at least 8 days is impossible.

Getting rid of this role will allow people to get married at scree sites, by the sea, at places that mean something to them

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Think an interview is a good idea but in this day and age, why can't this be by video chat or telephone

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as if the officiant needs to change a new schedule is quick and easy to obtain

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Yes, often there are personality clashes changed of heart and circumstances, these need to be taken into account.

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Should be able to post banks anywhere, no matter where the wedding is

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure what the rule actually says but again, should be great deal of flexibility in order to make marrying easier and less stressful

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

No...See previous answers

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Can meet remotely, see above, some documentation should be needed but kept to a minimum...don't complicate for sake of it

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Think making separate declarations is good but don't need to attend....video, telephone, email...

Consultation Question 18:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

NO- not every one follows the Anglican religion... ie..I am pagan....we are a multi cultural society and should reflect this

Chapter 5: Officiants

Not enough knowledge to make judgement

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The choice of officiant should be the couples0

Consultation Question 24:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure

Please share your views below:

Not all religions/beliefs are recognised....if someone is for instance, a Jedi, then they should be able to be officiated by someone from their groups...anyone should be able to officiate as long as they follow the rules(which should be simple and clear)

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Many practitioners are solitary or in groups of less than 20.... Should be able to officiate anyway

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Unclear.... morality is changes over time and dependent on culture...as long there is a danger to life, or hate crime etc,yes

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes,but also see answers above....the decision as to which officiant should be the couple's

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A record of officiant? Yes..however pleas bear in mind that, for instance not all pagan priests/priestesses belong to The Pagan Federation and not all Interfaith ministers belong to The One Spirit interfaith doundation/miniaters association- thwy should atill be able to officiate...

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes..recognition of what enables them to be officiated should.not however be restrictive... if a person is a solitary pagan practitioner or has under taken a celebrant course,been ordained by something like the Universal Life Church, then they should be able to officiate

Consultation Question 30:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

For members of organisations,yes...

Consultation Question 31:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes but again see previous..do.not make what is the criteria for beingbtrgarded as 'proper restrictive. .Many officiant are solitary practioners and their cintinuungvelopment is there own spiritual practice...Make 1 and 2 but not 3 part of the rules

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Many officiant are independent.. and anglian priests are paid for their services they even get salary.. having a business of being a celebrant is legitimate and can show commitment and authenticity

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes,but what defines a conflict of interest? Ie, if my sister is a pagan priestess I may want her to officiate

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Think they should be able to be part of both...Not all couples share beliefs..come may want s mix if say humanist and Anglican, or a athiest and pagan... the officiate should be able to straddle religious and non religious

Consultation Question 35:

No

Please expand on your answer:

But what does this mean? Marriages should be fun and happy...they should reflect the couple. And the officiate should be free to help them express whatever hey fish,as ling as no harm.is caused to others

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance....Not rules

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If they belong to an organisation..See previous answers re solitary practitioners

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But only if they fail to follow the legal requirements...sndvthese should be a lot more relaxed than.now

Consultation Question 39:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In theory...but the GRO and it's staff should have extensive guidance about different paths,ways if functions etc do they go not penalise officiated who do not fit in a standard box

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

As in the GRO can take as long as it likes to augjorise-no

As in no limit on how long an.ifficuate can be authorised for-yes

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes,dependent on what the CPD is and that it takes into account different paths

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Please expand on your answer:

Should be able to have a mix...why should civil or religious ceremonies be divided....just make it a marriage

Please share your views below:

See above answer + anything the couple want in order to reflect their beliefs

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only if ripples change so no impediment to marriage...ie j7sr bake it a marriage ceremony..no fivisionmiver religious ,civil,whatever

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A marriage can be private..if the couple want that then allow it

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes...if I want to be married in a tree house, at a sacred site, in my garden.. wherever. I should be allowed to

Please share your views below:

No...See previous answer

Consultation Question 49:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes...but again don't divide marriage into civil or religious

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

People should be able to have a completely individual wedding, at any venue they like

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Such a decision should be for the couple and/or the officiant and/or the owner/caretaker of the venue to make

Consultation Question 52:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Weddings don't need to be dignified! They should be free to laugh, act ridiculous etc..

The owner/caretaker of venue should be responsible..although if officiant feels it's unsafe they should be asked to stop ceremony

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance re safety yes...

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

People should be able to get married anywhere so no approval should be needed

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Believe current laws do prohibit...because of standard wording, inability to truly personalise ceremony, inability to have wedding in indoor or outdoor venue of choice and inability to have a wide variety of f officiated available.

If the proposals make weddings more personal, have more freedom as to who does them,where,what is said and how much they cost. Yes

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

A wedding should be personal to the couple. To that end it should be able to be performed anywhere, inside or out, and officiated by someone the couple trust...be that an Anglican minister, pagan priestess who heads a group or who is solitary, family member or not and should be able to mix religious and civil elements

Someone like myself, an independent celebrant, a solitary pagan priestess, an ordained interfaith minister should be able to offer services as a business,

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I believe more couples would have legal weddings if they had more choice in the venue, the content and taking into account their own spirituality. There are those that are of mixed spirituality and want a blended ceremony. There are those that want to dance and sing, play drums, and this can't be in a registrars office.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Some of the approved venues...mainly hotels are very expensive. Lots of added extras pump up the cost. There are those couples that want something different, and not so expensive so in their garden is fine. As long as the legal requirements are observed, the wording is clear, the documents are signed then the cost and venue should be another main factor. The cost of bringing out a registrar to an approved location is often very expensive.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

A pre-approved location or a place of worship should not be the only venues on offer.

We are a venue for wedding celebrations. We have found that many couples who have postponed to 2021 cannot now find space with the Registrar, Couples also come to us because they have completed the legal requirements and want more freedom to structure the kind of ceremony and celebration that suits their style and budget. Freedom of choice is really important and no restrictions on suppliers they must use.

I think it is excellent that an officiant not a venue is the license holder. This will open up many more places in which to marry and bring down the cost to those couples who wait perhaps for years without marrying because it is too expensive.

This new law will encourage couples to be creative in the choice of their venue if they wish and make their wedding very much their own.

We will no longer hear from the 'millenials' the cry of 'oh no not another barn wedding with catering by x who caters most barn weddings in this area...'

Competition will be very good and couples will find a way, rather than having to borrow or be funded by parents.

I think it is not an issue for the venue or should not be and is another level of protection for 'marriage'

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I do think that if a couple want to marry in Tesco that should be allowed as long as they are serious about their vows, the location is personal and if they can organise it, should be allowed. There should be safety considerations built in somewhere if guests are invited to the ceremony

Please share your views below:

Safety considerations should limit more outlandish venues ....

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I believe this law will encourage couples to marry and increase the number of couples who are legally married.

Weddings are expensive and anything which makes them more affordable is to be welcomed.

We often hear from our couples that they are saving to buy a home and to spend £20,000 - £30,000 on a wedding is a huge item. Even if their parents are paying, this is substantial.

We witness a huge demand for 'do it yourself' weddings, cost cutting, not having to use certain suppliers exclusively and so on.

The social media needs to reflect many more home made weddings, rather than exclusive high cost destination weddings that are a dream and a fantasy for most couples.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Couples accept that they need an official marriage licence and the cheapest way is to book a brief attendance with the Registrar. They can then create their own celebration wherever they want, but with some couples the feeling persists that this is not their 'real wedding'.

To have a registrar at their 'real wedding' means a cost of using a registered venue, which is often out of reach in terms of cost per head per guest and averages £15000 plus.

Most couples who come to us to celebrate have 100 - 120 guests. After Covid we expect weddings to be smaller but most couples have perhaps 50 family and 50 friends and find it very hard to reduce this. This might happen naturally post covid and it would be good for weddings to be smaller. But couples do want an after party if not a weekend celebration and that is their dream currently.

Going abroad to a destination is often viewed as way to reduce their guest numbers...

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It is often thought that to marry 'in your back garden' is a cheap option. Having run both sorts of wedding, the back garden variety can be disappointingly expensive....marquee hire, furniture hire, generator, lights, tables, flooring, music system, loos, refrigerator, cooking facilities and so on can rapidly run into £10,000 plus.

So venues are often a cheaper option as they possess all these services included in the price.

These regulations will be a massive help to those on a tiny budget, as it will allow them to marry within the budget they have and not decide it cannot be afforded. They can make it amazing by their own creativity in choosing where they are and that is what guests will remember and enjoy - not yet another 3 course meal with warm wine that is overpriced?

At my sons wedding we had a pizza van that fed everyone for £10 a head and we bought salad and wine from Aldi. He loves food but said that none of his friends go to a wedding expecting great food, for that they go to a restaurant. They come for the music, the company, the occasion all of which can be provided at no great cost if the couple is liberated from licensed venue with a pay bar or corkage. Of course those kind of weddings will still be popular, but the change in law will really help those keen on DIY and happy to have fun in a hay field...or woodland..with a picnic.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

We were licensed for four years and now we are not. We have not seen any reduction in the popularity of our venue as a result of not offering an on site registrar service. We are always fully booked.

What couples appreciate is the freedom to choose what suits their style and budget. But they do want to know that you are professional and a cost attaches to that. They also like being able to choose more easily the time of day or night for their ceremony that is not driven by the availability of registrars.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

These changes will be most welcome by our business (www.thecopsecountryhouse.com) which has been operating this model alongside registrar weddings. As an operator we much prefer celebrant weddings as do couples and guests. They find them more full of joy and the option to choose their own celebrant is paramount.

There needs to be some checks on couples marrying and couples welcome this as they want to feel this is a 'proper' occasion involving some ritual. Progressively our couples are doing away with 'walk down the aisle' and they mingle with their guests as soon as they arrive. They are also doing away with 'the first dance' and throwing the bouquet. Many do not use florists if they choose a beautiful venue.

They do love having accommodation on site and the wedding not just lasting one day. Particularly couples with relatives coming from abroad, they love to stay on site and prepare for the day all together and this reduces the need for staff and keeps down costs for them. We definitely recognise a rise in the 'do it yourself' venue.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think local authorities have to wear too many hats. They have to regulate weddings but also encourage local business and this often does not sit well.

They have to approve premises and this means that many fabulous places are rejected because of the requirement to marry under a solid roof.

Large licensed venues benefit hugely from the current restriction on competition from a whole range of potential venues that would be a) less expensive for couples b) less of an issue for local authorities.

Noise restrictions and number of guests in such venues will have to be regulated and monitored, but the venues will welcome this in order to keep both neighbours and couples happy and safe. But a ceremony on a hilltop or lakeside could be ideal. In our experience only one Saturday each summer season is a total washout and those couples who had rain on their day ended by loving it and having huge fun. Of course if they choose outdoors out of season they will be less lucky with out a wet weather plan. But this will benefit marquee companies and stretch tent vendors.

I thoroughly support these changes as being long overdue, very sensible, positive, money saving but at the same time providing new and exciting opportunities for creative businesses - who deserve to thrive.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Local authorities struggle to communicate across departments in our experience. Having approved venues is a nightmare for them.

They are required to monitor everything to do with weddings in case of local complaints - traffic, noise, light, deliveries - and yet they also need to provide local services and support business that brings job to the locality (hairdressers, waitresses, photographers, caterers, florists...) and brings overseas customers and tourists.

Often difficult to balance and stressful particularly when communication is lacking.

I would think that local authorities would be glad not to have to grant permission to venues to hold weddings - and can thus focus on the health and safety issues at the venue, or business generation assistance that may require their intervention without it being a conflict of interest.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

the current law makes it very inconvenient for residents travelling to marry elsewhere so their family and friends can more easily attend progressively families are spread far and wide and are not 'local'

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think this will be enormously helpful and will really open up the UK as a destination wedding country which it is not currently?

To have a holiday in London combined with a wedding might be ideal for many...

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think they could really promote this, particularly as I feel small weddings are going to be increasingly popular going forward

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I don't know but easing regulation must help. Plus couples will love the idea if they love the ocean...

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

Local authorities will lose income but reduce costs and probably see a net benefit

Businesses will grasp the opportunity and love the change

Religious organisation can offer their lovely buildings and bring back income that might be much needed

Independent officiants will flourish if they are good couples will have miles more choice and guests will have the great relief in weddings 'season' of not going to endless copycat weddings indistinguishable because so much is regulated. Couples are really creative and to have their perfect day is the best start to a married life.

I do not agree with this. Having worked for the council I know where we recognised a sham marriage because everyone had to go for the interview no red flags were raised when this was arranged (it was not considered out of the ordinary) and the authorities could step in. Making this something that only occurs in cases where people are suspected of something would completely and utterly ruin that.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Several friends have had to postpone their weddings due to the closure of places of worship.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think this is unnecessarily restrictive requirement.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Logistically, this seems a reasonable proposal

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

It should be a flexible period

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

In the light of pandemic restrictions, a Zoom or Skype interview should be optional

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Again, this seems a reasonable proposal

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Don't see any reason not to

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Really, it should be 12 months + 1 day, but this is for handfasting as well as marriage

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

All celebrants should be named

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems sensible

Please share your views below:

Depends on the nature of the ceremony

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I have no opinion on the protocols of other faiths

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not applicable

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Not being Christian, i suggest this is a question for CoE worshippers

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

All these questions should be expanded tp include weddings within other faiths

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Sounds a good idea for all weddings

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

There's a good reason for all weddings in any faith or handfastings to be preceded by the civil prelims before the ceremonies. I believe that the Anglican faith has decreased markedly in recent years in terms of worshippers.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Any Anglican conditions should be discarded

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Within pagan handfastings, celebrants should be officially qualified too.

Consultation Question 21:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical to have a reserve, as needed

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Officiants should be trained and recognised, regardless of their faiths. There should not be a bye for CoE or CoW clerks.

Consultation Question 23:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not exactly sure how one defines a relevant governing body, eg for druids, would it be BDO or OBOD? It should be for different faiths to maintain registers of chaplains or celebrants.

Consultation Question 24:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

That's a really simplistic view in respect of pagan pathways

Please share your views below:

The Living with Difference Report set out some interesting definitions on faith and belief, eg is a marriage between two heathen people very different to a marriage between two vegans? Is ecological activism a belief or not?

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agree, providing that handfasting is included within the definition of marriage.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

There is a discussion here on what morality means. The question should not arise if the purposes promoted are simply at variance with the government of the time. However, I feel that any organisation that promotes policies against the Equality Act, should be excluded.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I'd suggest that any religious organisation should be capable of having a training programme and accreditation or register of suitable individuals.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It would allow couples to request particular celebrants

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That should mean trained for purpose, eg no point in having a Wiccan celebrant for a druid handfasting

Consultation Question 31:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Content also to be advised by appropriate religious bodies

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Handfastings are sacred rituals with profits not playing a part = celebrants should charge a small fee and expenses, eg travel. Sadly, the making of profits and the marriage business seem to be a part of Christian culture.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Basic fee + expenses are all that's needed with a cap on excessive fees. Never should be a conflict of interest.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Conflicts of interest should be avoided, but if the same fee structure applied, it would not matter if there was an overlap.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please expand marriage to include handfastings

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With appropriate advice from faith bodies on ceremonial protocols

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Hopefully, each organisation will have a complaints procedure for this type of problem.

Consultation Question 38:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I can foresee possible problems with certain marriage protocols: each such case should be resolved between the GRO and the religious body.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is sensible for independent persons

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Perhaps there should be a review mechanism, as advised by the religious bodies

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It should be incumbent on every officiant to maintain CPD.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The template for handfastings and pagan marriages is not straightforward, eg the cords, the words of consent, use of drums and dances. Usually, the couples are advised by an archdruid at a stone circle or another senior celebrant. Giving details of handfasting ceremonies to the GRO might be problematic, but an approximate schedule might be possible under different pathways, eg heathen, druid, Wiccan, etc.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is each couple's special day.

Consultation Question 44:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I have no views on the conduct of weddings in other faiths

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There's no pagan scripture, but a reading or poem or song seems OK.

Please share your views below:

Well, within the druid tradition, possible extra content might be bardic, eg storytelling, a song, poetry, etc

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be a choice - for some, a handfasting is a personal ritual at a sacred place, but the civil wedding is just to comply with the law.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

From a pagan aspect, handfastings or civil weddings do not need public access

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Pagan wedding ceremonies do not require buildings - registration aside - but the actual handfastings are usually held outside.

Please share your views below:

It should be decided by the couple and the celebrant. Stone circles, yew groves and other sacred sites are good for pagans.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Pagan civil weddings do not need the public there.

Consultation Question 50:

Other

Other

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think the law should make any such prohibition = let the celebrant and the couple opt for a venue and progress from there...subject only to issues such as covid-19 restrictions on venues.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

An archdruid or senior pagan can advise on when a venue might not be available, but the final decision should rest with the couple.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Dignified - certainly. Not sure about safe = a risk assessment would be expected anyway.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Outside venues will be open to discussion, but the GRO and the HSE together might produce something.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

One can never take too many precautions

Please share your views below:

The liability for risk assessment lies with the venue owners and/ or event organisers, but one might have regard to safety inspectors' reports or insurers in certain places. And the results should be available to the celebrant and the couple.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Date and location - OK. Parental stuff - not at all.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems sensible

Consultation Question 56:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Maybe, data security is always dubious

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

No

Please expand on your answer:

1-3 are OK more or less, due to administrative issues. No 4 should be junked in the light of equality = it is an anachronistic condition.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The marriage should not be voided, but a couple should be alerted and able to amend any errors.

Consultation Question 58:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

As with the answer to question 57, my thoughts are to agree with the proposal on consent and also 1(a) and 1(b)(i). 1 (b)(ii) should not be an impediment to a marriage.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No opinion on this

No

Please expand on your answer:

The idea of a common-law spouse is still relevant = should be a choice for each couple

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should not be a limit

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It's a fraud

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

Not sure about legal problems, but there are provisions for guardians and those with powers of attorney.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If it's a terminal, mental illness, I think an interview is a safeguard.

Consultation Question 64:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Let's see the actual proposals

Consultation Question 65:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Medical estimates vary so widely = all schedules should be open-ended

Consultation Question 66:

No

Please expand on your answer:

All schedules should be flexible

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As we've found out this year, too many people had to reschedule weddings due to the pandemic

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It depends on the nature of the emergency

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Cynically speaking, I'd say that the DWP cannot recognise evidence that someone is seriously ill for benefits. Realistically, the risk of death is a better yardstick than serious illness.

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No reason why not

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

Seems logical as to location, subject only to safety issues. One could be married on a RN warship.

Consultation Question 71:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No opinion

Consultation Question 72:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No opinion - a cruise ship might have its own chaplain

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems OK

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

No opinion, but there could be.

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Reasonableness is always the key

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Expenses, not profits

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

I believe in compassion

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Fees, not profits

Consultation Question 78:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Nationally regulated fees, not variable by districts

Consultation Question 79:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Let's lose the cost-recovery bit and put in a non-profitable basis

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Expenses only

Consultation Question 81:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Fees should be by negotiation

Consultation Question 82:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Equality

Consultation Question 83:

(1) the fee should be set by regulation at a level below cost-recovery; or

Please expand on your answer:

No fee is best, but this may not be viable

Consultation Question 84:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Applicants trained and nominated by religious bodies should not need much assessment by the GRO. For independent applicants, perhaps such a fee may be needed.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

No real evidence. My view is that the definition of marriage should be extended to include handfastings.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Handfastings are almost a law unto themselves = sacred open-air locations, nominated and trained celebrants, unique protocols and extra content. The necessity to register the marriage in law afterwards should be a fast or electronic process, unencumbered by a separate ceremony. For pagans, the whole process of recognising handfastings as legal marriages would save a lot of the costs listed above.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Why should a place of worship be a building? It could be a forest glade.

The GRO caused a lot of issues as their guidance was not clear, they were very slow to react and all registration districts worked differently, causing huge confusion for couples.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It makes commercial sense to encourage couples from overseas to marry here and there seems no benefit in the 7 day requirement.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Currently, couples would prefer to give more notice as the popular venues get booked up so early but this would be less of an issue when it is officiants.

In case of situations such as a pandemic, there should be provision for the schedule to be extended. Many couples were charged for extensions, although every district varied.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

1. The schedule should identify the officiant as it will help establish that they are authorised.
2. There would be many reasons that the officiant would be substituted.

Consultation Question 12:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It should be an option to change if the change is needed for any reason. So much could change in the 12 months since the officiant was named - retirement etc

However that change should be made on the schedule before the wedding.

Only due to death, sudden illness etc if it is on the day.

No

Please expand on your answer:

No reasons to restrict this by law.

People would only choose to if they have a compelling reason to.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Under clear GRO guidance. However Independent Celebrants should be more restricted or that will agree to marry people in inappropriate places that others have rejected, for the commercial benefit.

Local Authority.

Small fee to cover inspection if needed.

Licence to last several years, view online and be renewable easily.

This would give an advantage to currently Approved Venues as they could promote that they are pre-approved and reduce hassle for couples.

Chapter 8: Registration

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The most significant impact would be a considerable rise in the number of wedding celebrations taking place in England and Wales which are currently happening overseas.

This is thought to be between 15-30% of weddings, especially second weddings. Many have small legal ceremonies here but have a bigger (outdoor) wedding and the reception - which generates all the income - is overseas. If they could marry where they choose the entire celebration would be in the UK.

We'd attract far more overseas couples to marry here.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Statutory wedding appointments are hard to get, eg Tuesday mornings only in some places to force couples to pay more.
2. Approved premises have been cashing in on couples and have had a monopoly. We have noticed these are the venues massively impacted by the pandemic as so many weddings were booked in APs.
3. Places of worship add on fees so that they are similar to the costs of approved premises.
5. Slightly pointless and needs changing.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Register office weddings should be inexpensive and easily available for those on a genuinely low budget so marriage is accessible to all.
2. and 3. No reason for the cost savings to be a big incentive here; the ceremony is a tiny cost (£500 average) compared to the reception (£16500 average). The reason couples want the change is for the CHOICE, most would be prepared to pay more for that choice.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

In some districts the shortage of registrars has been reported as an issue.

4. Business opportunities will be more diverse - at the moment there is a monopoly with a few approved premises getting a huge proportion of the weddings.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

2. Venues: Our surveys and data have shown that a small number of venues, typically those part of venue groups with 2-15 venues under the same ownership, have not treated couples well during the pandemic and are at the centre of expensive and damaging disputes.

They are all approved premises.

These same venues will be the ones most negatively impacted by these proposals as they currently have a monopoly.

They have formed a pressure group and have instructed a QC to challenge the CMA and may also try to block these proposals.

We have found they are in a minority but they have the loudest voices.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I am a pagan who is not married yet but next year will be having a Handfasting ceremony as well as a registrar wedding.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I understand that paganism is not recognised as a religion but feel that this is wrong considering that it was practiced by our ancestors before Christianity was introduced in this country and continues to this day and that Handfasting should be recognised as a legally binding ceremony as it formulates the union of two people who wish to be together.

No

Please expand on your answer:

Given the chance we would have only chosen to be handfasted.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Both me and my Fiance recognise that in the eyes of the law we would not be recognised as a married and although this makes no difference to us both personally it causes lots of issues when applying for benefits and other legalities.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

As I have written above if we where to just have a handfasting ceremony legally we would not be treated as man and wife and therefore wouldn't be able to apply for certain benefits ect.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Originally we planned to get married May the 9th this year but it was cancelled we rescheduled again for September 19th this year but with the reduced numbers of guests it meant that we couldn't have the wedding we wanted so we re scheduled again for 1st May 2021. We incurred extra charges to give notice again which was annoying as all of this was out of our control.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be more flexible to accommodate for events held in advance of the wedding and preparation time.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

The established period seems appropriate.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

An in-person interview would be more suitable. Remote interviews are by nature much less thorough, reducing protection against forced marriages.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

This should continue, it seems appropriate.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is by nature a public announcement, so in all but rare circumstances this is suitable.

Consultation Question 10:

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be more flexible to the various religious traditions in the UK and give more legitimacy to the chosen officiant.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

No, the above delays cover the scope of a substitute officiant.

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

In this respect the UK should be treated as the united country it is. With many Britons moving around the UK frequently in the modern era, it seems needless to create such a division where it does not already exist.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

These rules seem clearly contextual to 1949.

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

The extant Anglican tradition does not need to be disrupted.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is appropriate to the role of an officiant.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There role would be inappropriate in a religious wedding.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is appropriate to their traditional authority.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would accommodate the various religious traditions found in the UK.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is appropriate to the role of such organisations within the context of a wedding. A civil ceremony remains a suitable option for those whose proposed secular organisation does not meet this criteria.

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is a suitable criteria for whether an organisation is suitable for the role. It is not too demanding and permits small religious organisations.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

If the promoted purposes are in serious breach of public policy, such as the support of violent causes or terrorism, then this is appropriate: our law should not need to legitimise such organisations by recognising a capacity to provide officiants. However, if the promoted purposes are unlawful but not violent or directly dangerous, then it is beyond the moral authority of the law to prevent that organisation from providing officiants on that basis. The promoted purposes should only be excluded if they are indictable offenses.

For example, if a religious organisation also advocated for illegal but non-violent protest activities, say as part of an environmentalist cause, it would be a grave over-reach of the Government to forbid them from providing officiants on this basis. This would be used as undue leverage on religious organisations that also support peaceful protest movements.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

This would accommodate the religious role of the officiant within the organisation, relevant to the couple beyond just being their officiant.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 29:

Consultation Question 30:

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be suitable in protecting the role of the officiant from commercialisation.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The previous proposal in Q32 is more appropriate to the role of an officiant.

Consultation Question 34:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Only if it is within the fundamental role of an officiant to ensure the consent of the couple. Guidance should not extend beyond this, since wedding traditions are right to vary.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is suitable in giving the organisation equivalent responsibility to the CofE in this context.

Consultation Question 38:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If there is a contention about the authorised officiant it should be decided in court.

Consultation Question 39:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If there is a contention about the authorised officiant it should be decided in court.

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 41:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Previous legal training should be sufficient.

I worry this could be used to arbitrarily de-authorise officiants if the professional development is vaguely defined, or that it would unnecessarily heighten the requirements for being an officiant.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

This would suitably accommodate all traditions while maintaining the standard for ensuring a consensual marriage.

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should remain an option to hold a religious service after a civil wedding, to accommodate those who are religious but are unable to secure a religious wedding ceremony for whatever reason.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be the best and simplest way to accommodate the various religious traditions in the UK.
For example, currently it is not permitted for a neopagan druid organisation to hold a wedding outside.

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

There can easily be dispute over the classification of venues. For example, a neopagan druid organisation should not be prevented from holding a ceremony at a prehistoric monument simply due to a dispute as to whether it officially constitutes as religious venue or place of worship. For pagans, many sites are sacred for religious reasons that might also be important to non-pagans for secular reasons, such as megalithic monuments.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I believe many couples are alienated from marriage due to the strict and outdated requirements regarding officiants and locations, which prevent couples from having a marriage that suits their personal and/or religious values.

As a neopagan who would one day wish for a particular local druid organisation to nominate an officiant and conduct the handfasting ceremony for a pagan wedding, the current restrictions on location and choice of officiant are a major and needless barrier to having a wedding according to our traditional values. Given that nearly all pagan places of worship are outdoors, that most are not officially registered as places of worship, and that our traditions hold to a vision of weddings as an outdoor occurrence, the current law makes an adequate pagan wedding all but impossible. This invaluable proposal would change that and accommodate for the wealth of religions traditions found in the UK.

I believe the costs of this proposal would be minimal to each of those parties, and that the benefits in religious freedom and new economic opportunities for venues across the UK would far outweigh those costs.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This should be more flexible. With photo identification and the ability to trace people digitally it is easier to prove identification

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is an excellent way to move forward with how things can be done

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

Seven days is a reasonable amount of time to wait.

I think that anything less unless it a special reason such as terminal illness is not required

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I still think it is important to see people face to face. As a former mental health nurse, I was always able to pick up on so much more this way than by telephone or other means

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

I agree. There needs to be more flexibility around this if someone can be verified by a trusted official and further checks can be made if necessary

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as there are no risks to safety, there is no reason why this cannot be accomplished.

Consultation Question 10:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I am unsure.

There can be lots of reasons why people change dates and there is no reason for such a lead time

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Information should be available

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There are lots of reasons why there can be issues where a delay is unacceptable.
As long as the person is of good standing and appropriate for the role.

Please share your views below:

In the case of funerals and sudden marriage due to illness , yes. It should be the couple's choice where possible of an appropriate celebrant with a qualification / standing in their religious life

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should be freedom to have banns wherever you live, even for an Anglican wedding.
There needs to be more flexibility

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I'm not sure what this means

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

There is no reason to only do this, if other people getting married have to have banns posted elsewhere , it should be the same for all

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes. It should be the same rules for all

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

As above

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This should be mandatory

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

An appropriate religious / qualified celebrant should be able to legally officiate in the place of a registrar

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If all has been verified and there is no risk to that person, especially if the ceremony takes place in the registration office

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It depends what is meant by clerk

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The officiant should be part of a governing authority and be suitably qualified, either religious or non religious. It should be the couples couple's choice of celebrant within such parameters.

Nominations are not a good idea as the couple may not get on with that particular nominated celebrant.

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

That does not make sense. How can a secular i.e. non religious organisation be defined as thus.

Just because an organisation does not adhere / identify with judeo/ Christian/ Islamic beliefs does not discount its validity as a religion.

As fas as I am concerned, a non religious belief system is just that. The humanist society would be able to manage such parameters and officiate accordingly as long as the celebrant was a member and suitably qualified.

Please share your views below:

The humanist society in my opinion would be able to manage this.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I am a member of the Pagan Federation and have had Buddhist friends who would prefer an officiant from their faith to preside.

In regards of the Pagan Federation, handfasting was the original betrothal ceremony before the wedding mass.

I would have preferred my wedding to have been officiated by a pagan celebrant.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

If the body is promoting purposes that are unlawful or contrary to public policy or morality.

If there is discussion required regarding polygamous marriage, I am in agreement as long as all parties are consenting and above legal age.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

There should be couple's choice of celebrant within an organisation as long as they are qualified to do so

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Anyone who wants to officiate as a celebrant should be suitably qualified, be a member of a governing body and be listed publicly and be accountable for their actions

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as they are suitably qualified and on a public list.

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I think that any positive changes to facilitate ceremonies that are more flexible, of the couple's choice with an appropriate celebrant will improve the rate of marriage

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There should be a standard rate across the board for all officiants.

There should be no requirement to have a separate religious and civil ceremony

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Fees and expenses should be standardised for all officiants

Weddings are expensive enough and flexibility and diversity should be encouraged

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

My partner and I were due to be married in August 2020, but were forced to postpone due to the pandemic. We have rescheduled for August 2021.

As our notice of marriage will expire before August 2021 (we originally gave notice in December 2019), we have been forced to attend our local Registry Office again in person and pay the notice fee again (£35 x2), despite my partner being vulnerable to Covid-19 (meaning that we had been strictly limiting all social contact). This seemed nonsensical - the fee is not huge, but why should we have to pay twice? I did enquire about the fee being waived and was told that this had been permitted in some cases but we did not meet the criteria.

Our wedding was taking place in [REDACTED], while we live in [REDACTED]. My parents live in [REDACTED]. Since we don't own a car, not only would it have been very difficult to make the trip (especially if avoiding public transport due to partner being vulnerable), but the extra lockdown restrictions in the North-West meant that we couldn't stay with my parents as planned, so would have had to hire a car and make a seven to eight-hour round trip in one day. To all intents and purposes it was impossible for us to go ahead, even with no guests, despite the fact that weddings were permitted to take place by that point.

It also seemed ridiculous that we had to attend again in person to give notice when they had already checked all of our documents etc. None of our details had changed apart from the date of our postponed ceremony.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current law has absolutely delayed our marriage/prevented us from getting married when we would have liked to. After being unable to go ahead with our planned marriage in August 2020 due to the pandemic, we would have liked the option to have a simple legal ceremony as soon as possible, just to have the legal side/paperwork complete as quickly and cheaply as possible, to be followed by a full celebration with family and friends when possible.

However, our local registry office only offers a couple of slots per week for such basic ceremonies and therefore has extremely limited availability even in normal times (without the pandemic backlog), so we would have had to wait at least several months.

We are choosing to have a registrar marry us at an approved venue. We would much prefer to have a more personalised ceremony, but did not want the extra cost/hassle of having a celebrant (likely humanist) for the "proper" wedding day as well as a separate legal ceremony.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It would be a huge advantage - particularly in terms of being able to have a meaningful and personalised ceremony without extra financial and administrative burden.

I feel it would also allow couples much more choice, and alleviate pressures on venues during the most popular times. Many venues get completely booked up 1-2 years in advance during the most popular times, so this would help couples wanting to get married at shorter notice (like us!).

Similarly, we are planning a small event with around 30-40 people. It was very difficult to find venues willing to accommodate us on weekends, especially during the summer. Having more options of different types of venues would have helped with this. We had to choose a Friday to allow us to be able to get a suitable venue for a reasonable price.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Privately-celebrated handfasting.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Fully aware of the non-recognition in law

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Personal choice. Both had been legally married before.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Have concerns as to automatic recognition of partner as next-of-kin without specific legal authorisation.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

No issues

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I conducted a handfasting (which was non-binding in law of course) for a couple, outdoors (on the beach) with no other persons present. This was by the choice of the couple. A few other potential clients have delayed their plans due to Covid issues.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not a concern for me

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I consider in-person interview still to be a necessity at some point to prevent fraud, forced marriage or other malpractice

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

I would presume that all plans would be published online as well as posted on the registrar's notice board

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

As above, disagree and suggest in-person interview always required except in cases of extreme illness or other very exceptional circumstances.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

No issue

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Risk of harm should be defined so as to exclude any but the most serious cases.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No issue

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems desirable given expanded role of officiant

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Of course

Please share your views below:

I see no reason why this should be so, except as above when original clearly unable to proceed.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Banns should be an optional matter for the Anglican churches, and of no legal significance

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As above, that's the Churches' responsibility not the states

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Not my concern

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Even though is is supplementary to legal preliminaries, any officiant (and of any religion) should have this power if they wish to exercise it.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

I agree, and further that the declarations should be made without the other person present, even though remainder of interview is joint.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

All persons should fulfill the same civil legal preliminaries. Anglican churches may add whatever they wish, but of no legal significance

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Entirely reasonable

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I am a little unsure as to the meaning of this. Clearly a religious wedding in any tradition will involve a religious celebrant / officiant. it is not appropriate to ask a registration officer to perform religious rites. However, the responsibility of registration officers to exclude any religious content in a primarily civil wedding is not necessary.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I see no need for two if proper preliminaries have been conducted to avoid fraud or forced marriage.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think it would be churlish of me to refuse them this traditional right - nonetheless if training is legally required for other officiants (including clergy of other religions) it should surely be required also for Anglicans.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I am unsure as to the likely interpretation of 'religious organisation'. I do not know whether my organisation - the Fellowship of Isis - is so recognized by the state at present. It should be as open as possible and officiants themselves should be provided with adequate training (in the administrative and legal responsibilities) before being recognized.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Do not wish to limit what Humanists etc may do

Please share your views below:

Inclined to agree - there is surely no need for a stamp-collectors' wedding as such...

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In the present day, a group's members may be physically remote from one another. No group with reasonable identity should be excluded. It should be ensured that the officiants themselves are adequately trained for legal / administrative requirements.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

That rather depends on what 'public policy' and 'morality' are defined actually to be. As per previous answers, the state should only be concerned with the proper actions of the officiant, not their views.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I think not. They should be named individuals (with certified training for the legal responsibilities)

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

One trusts that any registration fee will be minimal

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Pagan traditions may not wish to have specific organisational nomination.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but some training as to competence legal and administrative requirements still required

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But I think this should also apply to religious groups. In general, spiritual practice in no way implies administrative competence.

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Up to this point, for small religious groups such as mine, celebrants have been obliged to fund from their own pockets even minimal 'marketing' such as having a website. Furthermore, fees are likely to be taxable on a personal basis. The principle is fine but moderation in application may be necessary.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I suggest that all officiants (including religious ones) should include their basic fee (excluding travel expenses etc) in registration information.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Pagans can readily be part of multiple 'organisations' without conflict and also function 'independently' in a mode separate from and organisation. If the officiant is properly trained / certified then there is no need for this restriction.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure as to what might violate this principle!

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that it does not grossly restrain the participants.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But should also be a mechanism for public challenge if necessary.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Subject to customary rules of appeal and open evidence against the person concerned.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, subject to appeal and open investigation

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No need

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Continuing professional development should apply to all officiants, not only independents

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Re point 4, seems ambiguous. Expression of consent may happen early in the ceremony. So inclined to think the marriage should be legally formed on signing the declaration after conclusion of ceremony.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Can see no good reason why a couple should be obliged to take part in any ceremony not agreed to by them

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not my concern

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It is currently an unreasonable restriction on participants and registrars to be obliged to exclude vaguer forms of religious content

Please share your views below:

Subject to constraints of time etc, should be possible for any participant other than the couple (including religious personnel) to make some form of blessing and some simple form of additional religiously-significant action by the couple.

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not my concern I think since refers to Christians etc - irrelevant once other changes made.

At present, my ceremonies often take place after a basic civil ceremony but once these legal changes made, legal and religious ceremony will be unified.

Consultation Question 47:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not entirely convinced of this. The requirement for open doors / public access suggests that the marriage ceremony is a public declaration, legally recognized, not something purely personal. It is surely so rare for disruption to occur because of this openness requirement that it could be retained.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely. Pagan couples very typically want to be married out of doors (though weather and access complicate this)

Please share your views below:

Should be no restriction - though as above I am inclined to feel that notional right of public access / witness is appropriate even in a private home

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, provided that the public are not actually wholly excluded

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

Smaller religious organisations have problems with ownership of appropriate venues. No need for any restrictions if relevant local parties agree.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Approved by whom? I think the officiant has a right to refuse a location they feel inappropriate. No need for any further approval.

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Safety issues should be a part of officiant training / certification. Ideas of dignity do vary somewhat.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance - no absolute proscription

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Of course, no need to keep getting approvals - this is really just for marketing purposes. But of course if people wish to be married on a beach, at a stone circle, or other 'non-standard' location, there should be no restriction on this.

Please share your views below:

Local registrars should be able to do this.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure of the need to identify parents (and their occupations) except for the interest of subsequent historians. My own parents are indeed deceased (and yet, when applying for Prison Service authorisation I was obliged to state their last residence!) The identification of parents is fine in preliminaries, to prove eligibility etc, and these documents should be archived in the same way as actual marriage certification.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Firmly support Welsh language rights

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But after 40 years of experience in IT, still inclined to think that hardcopy is best for such important legal documents!

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

These rules are quite clear

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that such failure should not prevent voiding of a marriage (which might easily be fraudulent or forced) if parties so wish.

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No issue

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would seem to remove the old 'non-consummation' procedures.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Do not know what legal meaning this 'presumption' may have. Should be legally clear as to what marriage means. Nonetheless, the rights of cohabiting couples, for example with respect to property rentals, or any other joint actions, should not be constrained by whether or not they are married.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Demonstration of lack of consent may be somewhat difficult after any significant time unless also accompanied by charge of rape.

Consultation Question 61:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Of course

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

I think that the maximum freedom should be extended to persons wishing to get married, with relaxation of regulations where compassionately necessary.

With respect to prisoners, I believe that the consent of the prison governor should no longer be required for a wedding to take place - even though other constraints on the prisoner(s) may remain. Some special provision may be needed when both parties are prisoners in separate institutions.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With the necessary prioritization of such interviews

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No need for legal exceptions

Consultation Question 65:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

no issue

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

no issue

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 69:

Please expand on your answer:

no issue

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

no concern

Consultation Question 71:

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

no issue

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

No

Please expand on your answer:

suggest compassion should apply in such cases, costs to be absorbed

Consultation Question 76:

(1) the same fee as other cases in which the registration officer must travel to the person giving notice, set nationally on a cost-recovery basis; or

Please expand on your answer:

but see above, no extra fee

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

of course

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

should only apply to generallocation approvals, not special (eg outdoor) locations desired by the parties

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

should be same for everywhere, not local-authority-specific

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

will diminish, since other officiants will become much more frequent outside register offices

Consultation Question 81:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

but should be consistent

Consultation Question 82:

No

Please expand on your answer:

suggest apply compassion and have the same fee as register office

Consultation Question 83:

(2) there should be no fee.

Please expand on your answer:

inclined to think no fee

Consultation Question 84:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

provided this is modest, within the means of someone (like myself) who only infrequently performs celebrancy work, not set only for resource levels of large (Church) organisations with many weddings

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

In my circumstances, as a Pagan Celebrant, there are some couples who do not wish the expense and complication of double ceremony. I think therefore that these changes would increase the number of legal weddings.

Other couples in my experience do not care for the nature of civil / register office ceremonies at all, so if allowed to have a purely religious ceremony matching their beliefs, would indeed feel able to proceed with legal marriage.

No evidence other than personal discussion with couples.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I note that costs for Handfastings with myself as Celebrant are somewhat lower than those charged by register offices and other venues, and indeed more within the means of the couples concerned. This would suggest that more couples would take up legal marriage under the proposed new rules.

As above. My services seem somewhat cheaper than those currently commercially available

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

I believe that it is essential that the proposed changes do not greatly disadvantage individual celebrants such as myself, with benefits only to the 'wedding industry'.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

My clients have used a variety of venues, including hotels etc. as well as very-small-scale events. Would surely help larger businesses also for rules to change as proposed.

Consultation Question 88:

Undesirable that they should feel they need to do this.

The encouragement of couples to marry at home (or anywhere..) where they might need temporary structures would be a great boost to our industry which is frankly facing decimation by coronavirus. And we are just part of a much wider outdoor event industry, from riggers to event coordinators, florists, furniture suppliers, lighting techies, sound engineers, photographers, catering firms, bands and entertainers, security, power engineers, toilet suppliers - an estimated 1.3 million tax payers who are watching their livelihoods disappear.

The outdoor events industry generates £30.4billion in gross added value to the UK economy, and employs over 500,000 people (www.muta.org.uk). It is worth saving, and any piece of good news would be welcome.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I have however been handfasted (pagan wedding) in the past, and also had a registry office wedding to make it legal. We would have preferred not to have had to organise two separate weddings, but for our handfasting to be legally recognised. It was the handfasting that was the real wedding to us.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

We knew our handfasting would not be recognised by law from the start, so organised a registry office wedding as well.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We had a legally binding wedding as well as a spiritually binding one, but would have preferred them to be one and the same.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

N/a, but there would be consequences regarding inheritance rights and other legal rights if we weren't legally married

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

I didn't feel that the registry office wedding was particularly meaningful. It was a very short and basic ceremony with no spiritual meaning, and we did it purely to have the legally binding side of marriage. It did not reflect our spiritual beliefs which are very important to us, so our main wedding was our handfasting which was a longer ceremony with various friends taking part.

Consultation Question 3:

As a pagan priestess I operate within a variety of belief systems, and when performing handfasting, work with the belief system of the couple to be handfasted. This could be any of a variety of pagan religions, or just wanting something nature-based and Nonreligious. I don't see why a celebrant cannot do both.

I also belong to different pagan organisations as well as having my own pagan path, and if working within the confines of one of the organisations, might not be able to perform a handfasting/wedding for those who follow another path I teach and follow, if this rule is in place, and I see no reason for that.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I am joining this consultation on behalf of my daughter who is a Christian and future son-in-law who is not. They would like an outdoor wedding in a beautiful licensed venue they have already booked but would have liked the ceremony to be performed by the pastor from her former church. It seems absurd in this day and age that no religious content is allowed outside a religious building – after all God is present in nature and creation isn't he?

Other

Please expand on your answer:

My Christian marriage is recognised by law, my daughter's marriage will also be recognised by law if it is a civil ceremony, but my question is why can't some religious content be brought into a civil ceremony if the couple of requests it and the minister agrees? Why can't a Christian minister perform a wedding ceremony in a licensed venue other than a church?

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This for me is not about it being legally binding. It's about couples having a choice as to venue and who is allowed to marry them in which venue.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

N/A

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

This legal barrier to having any religious content in a civil venue/ceremony seems archaic and outdated in this day and age. There are many couples where one might be of a religious persuasion and the other not so, where they would like to compromise as a couple and combine elements of a religious and civil ceremony.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I have two daughters getting married. The one I am speaking about above has her wedding booked for next June so we are hoping and praying this will not be affected by the pandemic. My eldest daughter however was supposed to be getting married in July of this year in Malta. Obviously that had to be postponed due to the pandemic. The venue gave them another date in October but now travel restrictions have been put in place for Malta and the uncertainty over whether these will be lifted in time or whether guests will have to quarantine on their return has put their plans into disarray again.

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think the legal duty to do these things is very important. What I don't understand is why a church minister can't do it at an outdoor venue if they can legally do it in a church. Surely God is present in the outdoor venue as well.

Consultation Question 43:

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, yes, yes to the first part of this question! Please allow religious content at a civil ceremony if the couple want it. As to the second part, why on earth can't you have a religious service in an outdoor/alternative venue? Surely God is present everywhere. Why in weddings is God only allowed if the ceremony is performed in the church? That makes no sense at all to me.

Please share your views below:

For our daughter's wedding which is in an outdoor venue we would have liked her former church minister to perform the ceremony just as she does in church, with prayers, songs and all the elements of the church service but in an outdoor venue. We were horrified to find that not only could she not do this, but that no religious content at all would be allowed at the wedding. Why on earth should God not be able to play a part just because the wedding isn't in the church building? We would be happy for the civil registrar to be there as well to do all the legal bits, but why on earth can't the church minister perform her part as well? Why does it have to be all or nothing?

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't really understand this. Why not have a religious service after a civil ceremony if you want it?

Consultation Question 47:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Within reason - maybe not a brothel?

Please share your views below:

I think weddings should be able to take place in any venue of the couples choice as long as the officiant agrees it is suitable.

Consultation Question 50:

Other

No

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I'm not sure about a non-religious wedding being performed in a religious venue, but if a non-religious couple wanted to get married in a church, say, if they did this in agreement with the minister/vicar of the church I don't see why it would be a problem.

I can't understand at all why you shouldn't be able to have a religious wedding in a "non-religious belief" venue. The venue doesn't have a belief – it's the people that have the belief. I repeat – God is everywhere!

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think there needs to be much more flexibility over who is allowed to officiate a wedding and where it can take place. If the officiant (religious or not) agrees to the suitability of the venue (whether a religious building or not) why can't they be mixed and matched? Especially where a location frequently hosts weddings, why can't a minister of religion (who frequently officiates at church weddings) conduct the wedding? My big question is why is God not allowed in 'secular' venues???

Please share your views below:

If there is a pre-approval process, the officiant should do it in consultation with the venue.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I think if marriage ceremonies were made more flexible more people would get married. I see no reason behind the complications and rules/regulations particularly around outdoor venues and being able to use either a religious or nonreligious officiant or including religious content at a “non-religious” venue.

Consultation Question 86:

The costs are astronomical and should be reduced to make them more affordable for couples.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

My views all hinge around the issue of allowing some religious input in a non-religious setting. It seems ludicrous to me that this is not allowed at the moment and the law should be changed to make it possible.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

The ability of venues to host weddings officiated by religious officiants is really important to me as I'm sure it must be to other couples who might want some religious input in their non-religious venue

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I am legally married.

No

Please expand on your answer:

I understood the law regarding marriage.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It was my choice to marry legally. I wanted my husband to be my next of kin and we wanted to have the right to make decisions on behalf of each other if one of us was incapacitated. We wanted to the legal reassurance being married gives - e.g. property rights, inheritance, etc.

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

40 years ago when we got married, we did not know that there was any alternative to the mainstream Christian wedding. If we were to get married now - we would want a Pagan ceremony so currently we would need a registry office wedding and a separate handfasting. This involves all sorts of unnecessary expense and stress and takes away meaning from the religious ceremony. It would be much simpler and meaningful if the registration could be incorporated into the religious ceremony.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

A friend has tried to organise their wedding - it is difficult for them to make arrangements when the guidelines keep changing.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think that there should be some public declaration of intent so that, if somebody knows of a legal impediment, they can declare it before the ceremony takes place.

Consultation Question 5:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Is an "in person" interview necessary? What would be asked at the interview? What would be the legal status of the interview? Surely all the relevant questions could be answered with the celebrant or registrar.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is a serious issue and should not be entered into lightly - having a week or more to make arrangements gives time for the authorities to consider whether they think somebody is being coerced.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

It should be possible to conduct remote interviews because - if the marriage is conducted by a celebrant - the celebrant is another line of defence against sham or forced marriages. If a celebrant is found to have performed a sham ceremony then the marriages they have performed can be investigated.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes - it should be possible.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This makes sense.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If this means that - from the date of the interview - the couple have a year to organise their ceremony - that seems reasonable.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems reasonable.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

You could also include an arrangement where there can be an emergency celebrant registered if both the celebrants are struck by sudden illness.

Please share your views below:

It would not be very easy to police the reason for the original officiant's non appearance - so maybe it would be sensible for a legally licenced substitute to be allowed anyway.

If celebrants are licenced and given legal status - they will be governed by professional standards so there is a degree of protection.

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think this is up to the Anglicans.

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I am sure the Anglicans can work out their own rules.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

N/A - as a Pagan - I think the Anglicans should decide on any issues to do with Anglican ceremonies - I understand that the Anglican Church is part of The Establishment - but I think they should discuss this sort of issue within their own synod.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

The Anglicans need to decide on this.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Up to the Anglicans.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

All religious and civil groups should be required to follow the same rules so Anglicans/Church of England should follow the same rules in law as every other group.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nothing much to add. The correct completion of the marriage certificate is very important - I don't see why "Anglican preliminaries" are relevant to anybody except Anglicans.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It depends what you mean by a registration officer. Surely if a registration officer is also a member of a religious group, they should be able to officiate there too. I do think it should be possible for people appropriate within each religious (or not religious) organisation to be registered as celebrants and registrars and given appropriate training to conduct the civil side of the ceremony alongside the religious (or humanist etc) ceremony.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as there is a robust checking system to ensure that people are not being forced into marriage, etc - one person is capable of doing the job. I assume that there will continue to be witnesses to the marriage and there will have been the interview so it seems that one person would be able to take responsibility for the ceremony.

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think there should be appropriate training offered to the "priests" or leaders of any religious or humanist group so that they can conduct wedding ceremonies. If Vicars and ministers of the Church of Wales are appropriately qualified and have received the appropriate training - possibly as part of their ordination training - they should be recognised as officiants. I would like to see a situation where there is equality and I think we should stop favouring particular churches over other religious groups.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree that marriages should be undertaken by suitably qualified people and I can see that the government will want to have some way of deciding who is suitably qualified so being ratified by national or local religious groups is a good way to do that. I don't see why the Church of England needs to be exempt from this arrangement - surely they are already doing that by nominating their clergy to conduct weddings.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

I have no strong views about other organisations. As a Pagan, I would like our "religious group" to be able to conduct legally binding handfastings. I would like to see ordinary people being able to have ceremonies that are meaningful to them.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This seems to be a reasonable proposal. Seeing the figure at 20 people may mean that there will be a lot of proposed officiants but that is probably a good thing if it means that people can have the ceremony they want. On the other hand, there may need to be some monitoring of the groups or the officiants - it should probably be necessary to do a training course and pass it to ensure that people are safe and small extremist groups are not being enabled to gain credibility.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

I would agree that the groups who can nominate should be lawful groups who can abide by 2010 Equalities Act, etc. In my previous answer I suggested that it might be wise for celebrants to have to pass a training course and there may need to be some monitoring of the groups or the officiants - it should probably be necessary to do a training course and pass it to ensure that people are safe and small extremist groups are not being enabled to gain credibility..

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

If you are suggesting that the Grand High Whatever is immediately nominated upon gaining that office - I think that is a matter for the nominating groups to decide. It seems more sensible to nominate named individuals who might have some aptitude and talent for being a celebrant but I don't think the government can micro-manage the activities of small groups of 20 people.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be some gravitas and accountability - being a celebrant should not be taken lightly as people's precious memories and their future happiness could be at stake. So even if somebody becomes a fully trained celebrant just to perform one ceremony for special friends - they should still find themselves listed on a General Register for at least a year and they should still be accountable for the work that they do.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think that it should be allowed to ensure that everybody has an opportunity but those independent officiants should be vetted to ensure that they are properly qualified in some way and should pass a training course. People's special memories and future happiness is too important for there not to be some system to hold officiants to account.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This depends on your definition of fit and proper persons. However, I would agree that people who are proposed should have some reason for being proposed so the organisation should be able to offer some explanation as to why they have proposed a particular person.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Celebrants will incur expenses and should be properly recompensed for the time they spend officiating at wedding ceremonies. Currently Anglican ministers charge for their time - there is a fee of approximately £500 for marrying in an Anglican church . Perhaps the government - or the religious groups concerned - could set a scale of charges or publish advice - I am sure that celebrants can waive the fee should it be appropriate. I would suggest they let market forces decide - if people want to charge and other people are prepared to pay - the market will quickly decide which celebrants survive.

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't quite know what conflict of interest you have in mind.

I think all celebrants should be treated the same so whether people are independent or nominated by an organisation, the rules should be the same.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think there should be a limit on how many organisations can nominate an officiant or a restriction on who they use - as long as that officiant has been properly trained and is in good standing with whatever regulatory body governs officiants.

Consultation Question 35:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes - and no. Personally I think that marriage is an important ceremony and should be conducted with dignity and solemnity and I think officiants should refuse to officiate if they think that the ceremony is being treated as a joke. I think the officiant should have responsibility to ensure the marriage is legal and properly conducted. However, if some people choose to have a ceremony which does not seem dignified or solemn to some people, that is their choice and - as long as the marriage itself is legally performed - people should not be restricted if they want to be creative.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as it allows for individual organisations to have their wedding ceremonies conducted as they wish.

Consultation Question 37:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think that there should be independent checking of officiants' work. The organisation that nominated should be able to withdraw their authorisation if they can prove that an officiant is failing to comply with the fit and proper person standardisation but - especially in small groups - there is a chance that there will be internal politicking so it would be best if the General Register had the final say.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think that there should be a regular review of officiants - maybe licencing for five or 10 years .

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Traditionally the moment of marriage is when - the couple having declared that they are free to marry, given consent to the marriage and exchanged vows and tokens - the officiant declares that they are married. I appreciate that there may be a legal moment in case the ceremony is interrupted.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 44:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I would like to see all religious groups treated equally so all groups should be able to impose their own requirements as a matter of their own practice and the rules should be framed so that they are the same for everybody.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

People should be free to choose religious readings and religious music that have meaning to them and also include a reference to religion in their vows - if they so choose.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Repealing this restricts people's choice - if people choose to continue to have civil ceremonies followed by another religious ceremony - that is their choice.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is one way of safeguarding and preventing forced marriages and it is important that participants understand the public and solemn nature of the ceremony.

That said - it would be good for Pagans to have this repealed as we cast a circle and once the circle is cast nobody should enter or leave until the ceremony is completed so a symbolic closing of the doors when we've established that these people have the right to marry and come here by their own free will is a nice moment in the ceremony.

Equally - as some groups can be hostile to other groups - being able to restrict entry to the ceremony is likely to be useful in some circumstances.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

A wedding should take place in a place that is meaningful to the couple concerned.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Although there does need to be some way to ensure that the marriage is not forced - so if this is the case, there needs to be some way to be sure that people are not being taken to inaccessible places and coerced into marriage.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

I found the wording of this question a little confusing - people should be able to have the ceremony they want, in the place they want, with the officiant they want as long as everybody (including the venue, etc) agrees. So I don't agree that - e.g. a church should be forced to allow civil ceremonies but that it should be permitted.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The venue must agree.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I strongly agree that everybody should be safe and personally think dignity is important. I imagine that celebrants will be able to ensure this but I worry about these words being enshrined in law because I think these words are open to argument - e.g. if somebody wants to perform their ceremony in the air during a skydive - that is not safe - and that is the point! Also getting married in a circus tent may not seem dignified to some people so - in the training perhaps - there might need to be a discussion or definition of "dignity" and how it should be applied to wedding venues.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as it is guidance rather than a legal requirements - thereby allowing those who need it some leeway. Obviously any venue should be appropriately insured.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as it is optional. This could be part of the initial interview. This might also be part of a venue's insurance.

Please share your views below:

I am not sure there should be a pre-approval process - public buildings will be appropriately insured and have suitable venues. Other venues might need the officiant to ensure a risk assessment has been conducted to ensure it is safe.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I am not sure - in this day and age - that the names and occupations of the parties' parents is as relevant as it once was but it would be good to continue with the traditions that we have.

I assume we are still including the name and occupations of the parties and their witnesses.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It might be good if couples who speak another language could pay to obtain a certificate in that language too.

Consultation Question 56:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I am not sure that this matters much as marriages are now recorded online anyway. Having a wedding certificate is traditional.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I partially agree. I agree there should be notice to marry to the registration service. Religious groups - including Anglicans - can then also do whatever is necessary in their own traditions.

No 2 - agreed.

No 3 - the knowledge of either party. If somebody is tricked into marriage with an unauthorised officiant, they should have the right to void the ceremony. But equally - if the officiant is unauthorised - surely the marriage is not legal anyway.

No 4 - if same sex marriages are legal - they are legal. I can understand that a church that did not agree with them might be unhappy that the ceremony was performed in their venue but it should not void the marriage as it is legal in law. However the officiant should be heavily reprimanded if something like that took place.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

2 - surely somebody else can stand in?

3 - this is still a serious matter - but can be corrected as soon as the omission is discovered.

Consultation Question 58:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I have no idea why same sex couples would choose to be married in a tradition that does not accept their union but - if the marriage is legal in law - the religious tradition should not be able to stop people being married.

Consultation Question 59:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think people should be required to cohabit if they choose not to but there should be a presumption that they are free to do so and - if they are getting married - they have some reason for wishing to be in an exclusive and binding relationship to each other.

A refusal to cohabit should be a reason for annulment.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We should keep any laws that protect those in a "Common law marriage" - especially the rights of children in a breakup and there should be proper settlements to ensure that the financial interests of vulnerable people - e.g. somebody who gave up their career to support somebody they cohabited with - are protected. People should not be punished for cohabiting without being married.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be no time limit for voiding a marriage where there was coercion or lack of consent - although I appreciate that, as time goes on, it gets harder to prove.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

I hope that the law will be made simple - easy to understand and will support equality.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think that registration officers should have a duty to be prepared for emergency interviews as there may be a very short time frame (hours!) for a deathbed marriage. I think that the interview might even take place just before the ceremony. I also think it is important that the deathbed marriage is conducted in such a way that it has the same validity as any other marriage.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

No

Please expand on your answer:

People who are housebound are often disabled and people with less money.
It would be fairer to charge everybody enough to cover the cost of visiting those people.

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

Frequently the situation for somebody who is terminally ill will involve a rush and the possibility that there will not be much money available - trying to find a registration fee on top of everything else is very stressful.

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Consultation Question 78:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

I think that the proposals would enable people to have the service they want - all in one place and one time - rather than having the stress and inconvenience of having to have two separate ceremonies.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

The current laws prevented couples from marrying throughout COVID - rightly -due to the no of people required to participate at the venue. No easements were made in the Coronavirus Act to maintain the 'flow' of ceremonies, which will continue to impact couples , businesses, the registration service and government departments for sometime. However, If marriage/CPs were permitted outside and we changed to a celebrant model... this may have been managed better with less long term impact.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Its archaic and social mobility can make this difficult for some people to meet.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems to fit in with a number of government initiatives to streamline services. Would there be online verification of information prior to the face to face Interview ? Will the online 'form' start the waiting period? Or will that start after the face to face and sight of documents?

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

I think the current 28 days is reasonable. Especially as there is provision to reduce that period in exceptional circumstances . It's probably an issue for people living overseas though. O

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I think in person interviews should continue with people presenting originals of documents at the interviews. Otherwise I think the opportunity for fraudulent activity will increase greatly. The impact of which may be financially detrimental to the country and there may be a victim who suffers social, personal, financial and Mental health impacts. I believe the opportunities for Sham marriage/ forced marriage etc Would increase without Maintaining face to face , in person Interviews

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Same reasons as above - I think an increased opportunity for fraud may still be present in some cases.
Reasonable to keep provisions for all of the above ... but repeal British Subjects Facilities Acts . However I'm not sure how to manage British nats returning to Marry Here who do not have the 28/30 days available after the face to face notice appointment. But how many of them are there of these notice situations each year?

Consultation Question 9:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I can see the advantage of this - but protections for local authorities and registration officers would have to be tight to ensure they are not open to excessive and unreasonable complaints /queries which may be malicious or have undue impact on their resources .

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems reasonable.

However, could there be a clause to allow an extension of the validity in any future pandemic / emergency legislation in future as this type of easement would have helped a lot of people during Covid and reduced impacts on the registration service

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems reasonable where appropriate- each officiant should also be 'registered' and their unique identifier be included alongside their name ... But like a gmc no for drs

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Will the reasons for a/c placement officiant be exhaustive?

Please share your views below:

If another Officiant attends will validity of the marriage be affected?

As long as officiant who actually attend / witnesses & signs is registered the reason the original one couldn't attend shouldn't matter.?

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think all preliminaries should be civil

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As above

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I think all legal preliminaries should be civil - however the Anglican or others may wish to continue / introduce non legally required provisions.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

I think all legal preliminaries should be civil.

I think all couples should be seen in person and documents checked.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

I think all legal preliminaries should be civil.

There should be declarations made by the couple - and an enforceable penalty for false information

Consultation Question 18:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

I think all legal preliminaries should be civil.

This would support equality.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

All seem reasonable

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be no distinction between civil / religious / non religious - the legal element should be the same Everywhere completed by officiant/ registration officer. Once completed registration officer can leave - then couple have whatever embellishments the venue permits... These could be done by Registration officer if agreed with venue in advance and time / activities are costed.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Equality with CP process.

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think they should be registered as with every other officiant. Standardisation of process Or we end up with a 2 tier system.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Need to build in a provision for Independent religions / non religious belief organisations who do not have governing authority.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think regardless of your belief system a commitment to a legal union under the relevant legislation is key to maintain equality.

Please share your views below:

Remove the distinction between religions / non religious / civil to drive equality .

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Make the system a government led process to drive and support equality.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Make it a civil / government led process

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Make it a civil / government led process

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems the appropriate place as they perform a similar role now.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems correct central place for the work

Consultation Question 30:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

how is fit and proper determined and supported?

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Ensure criteria is very clear.

Ensure provisions in any legislation clearly cover impacts on the ceremonies / penalties for the officiant for falsely claiming the above

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Ooo that's a difficult one - there could be restrictions/ parameters around the non registration officers - officiant hrs / fees they can charge and or location they operate in.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

You would need to clearly define what a conflict of interest is.

I think fees should be capped.

Consultation Question 34:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Make it a civil / government led process

Consultation Question 35:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In principle yes - but Make it like a cp- it's the signing of the document that creates the legal union.

Couple can do What they want after the doc is signed.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Common sense and will maintain consistency and hopefully equality for marriage and CP

Consultation Question 37:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Make it a civil / government led process .... but any complaint will be investigated.

Give registration district authority to oversee Day to day quality on schedules and gro complaints with RG having ability to withdraw the authorisation while complaint pending or based on information submitted. should be clear what circumstances will affect validity of marriage

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

See above

Consultation Question 39:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think local register office in area they are authorised should oversee day to day quality on schedules etc but complaints refer to gro for investigation and final decision.

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

They should have to re register periodically and if they fail to they are removed from the 'list'

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Who will provide the continuing professional development? Will there be cost recovery or fees for the government GRO or registration service providing that Development and certification?

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think marriage should mirror the CP process's. the signing if the schedule forms the union. A ceremony / exchange of vows is optional. Declarations about being free to marry and consenting to marry should be in the schedule for both parties to sign. Also witnesses and officiant should have a similar declaration about legal elements witnessed and couple each signed the consent to marriage.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Schedule signing in a non civil marriage should take place at starts of proceedings so couple are married and everything is equal for all religious non religious and civil.

Embellishments/ rituals do not then form part of the legal union.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Schedule signing in a civil marriage should take place at start of proceedings so couple are married and everything is equal for all religious / non religious and civil weddings.

Embellishments/ rituals do not then form part of the legal union.

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It's important for marriages not to become Secretive or Inaccessible for equality / safeguarding / people trafficking or sham marriage purposes. Is there an issue with this part of the legislation at present?

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

I disagree with 'in the air' Like hot air balloons , planes - underwater etc... but in/on a describable tangible location should be permitted. Must extend to CPs too

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, public accessibility seems to be archaic. If no public access there should be provisions the venue if marriage is 'accessible' by The public on the day for certain purposes eg to lodge a valid objection. But make clear what the parameters are.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

Remove these restrictions to encourage diversity / integration and better understanding and Improved relations between the 'buildings' who wish to avail themselves if the opportunities This may provide

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be a joint agreement/contract between Officiant and the person responsible for the place if marriage.

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Local authority in district where building is located And GRO jointly

Similar to how buildings are currently registered for marriages and APs appointed just stop registering the buildings, start registering the people instead

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This supports other transformation activities within the home office

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Voiding provisions need to be made clear and solid to avoid delays for couples where there is an issue . Process to remedy if marriage found to be void later but couple were unaware at the time.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I'd make the signing of the schedule For point at which the couple are married ( same as a cp).

I agree no:1

But not 2or3

Consultation Question 58:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with I but not I.

If schedule being signed becomes the point the marriage is contracted ... the consent will be signed in the schedule.,

By non qualifying do you mean void ... if so - please make that clear and use the same language through out.,

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Basic clear lines needed to determine this

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provide clear statements regarding this . Include references to marriages under the new provisions - if and what is agreed - Alsoboutside England and Wales or overseas

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There must be clear indication of affects on marriage validity ( voiding provisions) and consequences for the officiant ( Eg revoke registration ).

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

This is to ensure there is valid information available.
I think it should be in public domain too

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Seems to be a modernisation of the marriage laws which is long overdue .
It will make process more accessible and logical
Will bring parity with CPs

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It needs to go further. Stop registering buildings for marriage. Register the person.
This will mean can repeal worship Act 1855.
Don't distinguish between civil/ religious / non religious Marriage - schedule signing married the couple... everything else that goes on doesn't impact validity then regardless of beliefs.
Costs May reduce for some couples who can marry without having to pay venue costs if marriages can take place outside etc. In a marquee etc...

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Increased opportunity for buildings to be used.
Increased choice for couples
More streamlined system for public and government.
No idea in costs

The current system for banns works well and I see no need to replace it. Having officiated at many marriage services and announced banns for many couples, most appreciate the contact with the church and chance to get to know the person who will officiate at their service.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

The current system works well. All Anglican clergy have access to the diocesan legal officer (Registrar) who ensures that documents are checked.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

This does make sense for a Special License.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales; or

Please expand on your answer:

The Church of England is still the established church and the only reason for stopping Anglican preliminaries would be a prejudice against the status of the Church of England. Couples appreciate the personal and pastoral service that we offer.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If a couple want a religious ceremony then they would want a religious person (priest etc) to marry them

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Firstly, it is my understanding that Registers and Marriage Certificates will be abolished.

Everyone I have spoken to is saddened by this. I feel that the signing of the register and presentation of the marriage certificate at the end of the ceremony is a very significant part of the ceremony.

If a wedding will be at a licenced venue (as it is now) then possibly one registration officer could attend but if it is in a private house or other venue there is a huge health and safety issue for the lone worker!

Consultation Question 22:

Agree very strongly

Consultation Question 37:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, in the first instance but I think all officiants should be responsible to GRO and should be licenced accordingly. At the moment the venue is licensed but as in the USA, the celebrant should be licensed.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If a couple would like a civil ceremony but would like some blessing by a religious person during the wedding I cant see that it should not be allowed

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If a person has a lawful reason to object to the wedding surely they should be allowed access?

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It would be good to give couples a choice of venue or location but ANYWHERE? Public toilets?

Please share your views below:

Possibly, but who would be responsible for policing the venues? Private homes can be lovely but could also be flea infested ! If you go up in an aeroplane who would make sure it was airworthy, or seaworthy in the case of a boat. There must be some risk assessment done surely?

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Objections could not be raised. This could also be the case if you allow boats, aeroplanes etc?

Consultation Question 50:

Other

Other

Other

Please expand on your answer:

why would you want a religious ceremony in a non religious location, or vice versa? But if you did I cant see it would make any difference

Consultation Question 51:

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I would think maybe more people would enjoy the freedom of choice but I think things should be taken into consideration regarding alcohol etc if not monitored by a front of house as it is at the present time. Maybe a cost element may also be beneficial if getting married at home but I do not think that this should be at a cost to the integrity of the marriage vows, for example a nude marriage in a mens toilet!

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think couples should be able to get married wherever is most special to them. This will often be somewhere other than where they live. This will enable them to do that.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This will give couples a lot more freedom to choose where they marry, and make the necessary legal administration easier for them to access.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I think it's important to make it possible for interviews to be conducted remotely. Obviously in circumstances like we've had with the Covid 19 restrictions this would be a much safer way of doing things, but even in normal circumstances it would make things easier. People with disabilities may find travel difficult and remote interviews would certainly help with that. Also time/work constraints would be eased.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, this should be possible. There should be as few obstacles as possible to prevent couples from celebrating the marriage they want.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriages are no longer just "local affairs", and so it's useful for anyone who has an interest in the marriage to be able to see the relevant information.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I don't have any strong feelings about the timescale, but this seems perfectly reasonable.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I would think this is essential. A marriage shouldn't be postponed or delayed because of the availability of the named officiant. As long as the substitute is a registered officiant, I can't see why this would be a problem.

Please share your views below:

As long as an officiant is a professional, I think any contribution they make should have a beneficial effect, even a substitute.

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It's going to depend on the changes made UK wide. I think any new marriage laws should be designed to make things simpler for the couples, including geographical considerations.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Any UK law that includes the term "war damage" is probably out of date, and therefore should be changed or amended to bring them up to date.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

As a celebrant, Anglican marriages are out of my area of knowledge. I think whatever is right for the couples involved is the important thing.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

I think this is reasonable, however I think it should be acceptable to do this online if that is easier for the couples involved.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Both parties should make a declaration, but this could be done remotely if needed.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

If the preliminaries are consistent across the board, this should simplify the process. It wouldn't prevent anyone from having a religious ceremony if they choose to do so.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The legalities need to be dealt with, but I feel any officiant with the relevant training should be allowed to conduct a marriage.

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Certainly members of a church should officiate at a religious ceremony, but I think it should be legal to include religious elements in a civil ceremony.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

One person is capable of dealing with the necessary elements of a civil wedding.

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If they've had the relevant training then yes. If not, no.

Consultation Question 23:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The relevant authorities, religious or non-religious, should oversee the legitimacy of their officiants, but the couples should be able to choose who they wish to perform their ceremony from a list of registered officiants.

Consultation Question 24:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

For me, that description has undertones of a religious nature, which may confuse couples looking for a non-religious ceremony. I feel a definition of "no affiliations to any organised religion" would be clearer.

Please share your views below:

I'm not sure this would be necessary. An initial meeting between the officiant and the couple, remotely or in person, should give both parties enough information to decide if the officiant is the right one for the ceremony.

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It's a difficult question. I feel that, if a couple want a specific person to officiate at their wedding, and that person is trained in the required legalities to conduct that ceremony, that should be allowed.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Any organisation or individual that promotes unlawful or immoral purposes should be nowhere near any aspect of a wedding ceremony.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

If the nominees are fully trained, they should be eligible equally.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It's important that officiants should be regulated.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Independent officiants are more likely to be able to give a couple a bespoke, personal ceremony, which is often more desirable. They should definitely be allowed to register.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As with any other profession, there should be regulations and standards that need to be adhered to.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely essential I'd have thought.

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Obviously, very few officiants will be working for free, so most will be "making a business of officiating at weddings". Unless you standardise fees for ceremonies, which would be difficult due to the vast range of ceremonies that will be being conducted, it would be very difficult to regulate.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Ceremonies will vary quite considerably, and the time officiants work on the preparations will also vary, so their fees should reflect that.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If someone is trained and registered to officiate at weddings, they shouldn't be limited to which ceremonies they are eligible to conduct.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It's a serious subject, it should be treated as such.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, guidance would be useful and welcome, but officiants should have the latitude to deliver bespoke weddings as long as the legalities are adhered to.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Although independent officiants wouldn't be monitored this way.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think it's imperative that all officiants keep up to date with any changes to the law regarding weddings, and cpd is very important to anyone serious about what they do.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A wedding is a very personal thing and should be conducted according to the wishes of the couple getting married.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Religious groups should have the right to decide who is eligible for their wedding ceremonies. But the choice of ceremony should be open to anyone.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples may comprise one religious, one non-religious person. This would make it more suitable to both participants. Also, sometimes families and friends of non-religious couples would like to have a hymn or prayer included.

Please share your views below:

Hymns.

Prayers.

Bible readings.

Blessings.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Allowing religious content in a civil ceremony should negate the need for a subsequent religious ceremony, but this should still be an option for couples that want it.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A wedding should be permitted to be held wherever the couple wants.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as the legalities are taken care of, anywhere should be permissible.

Please share your views below:

As above, a wedding ceremony should be permissible anywhere, as long as it's conducted by a registered officiant.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

A venue may hold some personal importance for the couple, regardless of the religious/non-religious designation of the venue itself.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think that should be the couple's responsibility, but the officiant should give guidance on the matter.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Safe definitely. Dignified is a more subjective thing. Maybe inoffensive rather than dignified.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance certainly, but there should be some latitude to customise a ceremony for a couple's specific wishes.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

The venue should have guidelines that the officiant and the couple agree to in writing.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Choice is always important.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

We live in a digital age, some people would probably prefer this. It should be optional though.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think number 2 is something that should render a marriage void.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples often work in different places, requiring them to live apart.

No

Please expand on your answer:

If a couple are against marriage for any reason but have cohabited for a long time, they should have certain rights the same as married couples, but they shouldn't be considered to be married.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If there was a lack of consent, there's no time limit on that fact.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

Allowing any venue to be used as a wedding venue will certainly help people who don't necessarily have access to certain types of venue. As it stands at the moment, limited use of venues could be seen as discriminatory, such as in the case of people who are housebound.

Consultation Question 63:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Difficult to say. It depends to an extent on the life expectancy of the individual. There should be an exemption made for people with limited time left.

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It would simplify the system and the legalities.

Consultation Question 65:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The last few months have shown that we all need to be flexible. This would reduce some of the stresses of the couples intending to get married.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the couple are married according to UK laws and regulations, they should be able to have the ceremony anywhere.

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

As above.

Consultation Question 71:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 72:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Couples may want someone who is not part of the crew as their officiant. They should be able to choose from any registered officiant.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Any UK registered officiant should be acceptable to conduct a legal marriage anywhere in the world for a UK couple.

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

Probably some demand. People are getting more creative when it comes to weddings, so if and when any venue is considered legal, there will probably be a lot more demand for "exotic location" weddings.

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Practicalities would suggest this is a sensible idea.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems the fairest way to deal with this.

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

Shouldn't need to explain that.

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As with everything else, it should be about choice.

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Things like this should be standardised.

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 81:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 82:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Maybe less for people who are housebound.

Consultation Question 83:

(2) there should be no fee.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I think that relaxing the laws on marriage to include independent celebrants/officiants, unlimited venue possibilities, and personalised ceremonies will lead to more marriages. Some of the current laws are outdated and not suitable for modern couples.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Costs can be very prohibitive, and may well put people off the idea of marriage altogether. And if a couple wants a personalised ceremony, having to have a separate wedding is an added cost and inconvenience.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Some couples will want a very small, personal, intimate ceremony, that isn't really suited to current venues, and they don't want to spend a lot of money on their weddings, for various reasons. Being able to hold ceremonies anywhere will enable them to have the wedding they want at an affordable price. There will be more choice when it comes to dates and times, which can be a very important consideration. And it will all be done in one bespoke ceremony, without having to have a separate wedding, which will be easier to organise.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

The last few months have shown that the law on approved premises needs to change. So many weddings have had to be cancelled because of restrictions, and a lot of these couples could have had a smaller but timely wedding if the new laws were in place.

Venue costs would surely come down if anywhere could be used as a venue, which would help a lot of couples. And the venues themselves would presumably incur less costs if they didn't have to register.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

The increase in weddings brought about by these reforms will benefit a lot of businesses, since the wedding market is already huge in the UK. As well as increases in the businesses already involved in producing wedding goods and services, there will be a whole new market for people to provide different venues.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Not really something I've thought about.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There will be financial benefits, due to increased trade for wedding goods providers, and increased venue hire. If marketed well, the local authorities could increase tourist activity based on the new venues and weddings opportunities.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Any laws that have been added to over the course of years, decades or even centuries are going to be much less easy to navigate than one newly consolidated set of laws. Some of the current laws can be quite discouraging to some people.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It's just got to be easier if everything is simplified and standardised across the board, and people are given more opportunities and more choices where their weddings are concerned, wherever they are from.

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I have no knowledge of this.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Again, financially, these reforms could be of benefit to the maritime industry.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

For the government the cost will be mostly in working hours, consulting on and (hopefully) implementing and regulating the proposed changes. A lot of businesses could potentially benefit from the proposed changes. A few registered venues may lose a bit of business once there is more choice available.

The main costs will be in the training and regulating of officiants to a standard level, which will impact the individual officiants and any organisations they belong to.

The costs for the couples may be reduced due to the wider choices available.

Please expand on your answer:

I have been married and am now divorced. I was legally married at a registry office, and later that day we had a humanist ceremony outdoors as this was the closest possible way, to reflect our (and our families' diverse beliefs) to express our love for one another

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Hence we married quickly at the registry office

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It was important to us not to offend our families made up of Catholics, Protestants, agnostics and atheists.

Please expand on your answer:

In principle yes but concerned about the suitability and safety of some potential venues - also the potential for disturbance for local residents which should be considered - particular in public spaces, private homes.

Weddings often continue late into the night and the disturbance potential could be high.

In terms of Health and Safety and parking, some spaces will not be suitable for an event.

Concern that this could provide a officiant with too much power and the ability to veto venues that they do not like.

It also could provide a opportunity for officiants to ask for referral fees or similar in order to approve a given venue above and beyond any fee that they might charge for their duties.

A pre-approved venue should not have to be confirmed by an officiant unless they have concerns about it which should be raised with the Registration Service or equivalent.

A pre-approved venue should not have to be confirmed by an officiant unless they have concerns about it which should be raised with the Registration Service or equivalent.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be extremely important serving both as reassurance to a couple and to avoid issues with officiants.

A annual fee to be on the register would be acceptable to cover administration and other costs as long as it not too high.

It allows far more flexibility to provide the wedding that a couple/family would like and so would be a benefit.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current law does restricts choice but it does help safeguard couples , venues and other residents of a given area.

For instance - currently a couple could love the save but would want to have a ceremony outside but they can not. we can undertake such a ceremony without additional impact on the surrounding area or residents.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Debatable - there may be much more paper work and monitoring required of individuals as well as the possibility of events taking place in unsuitable locations causing safety concerns or breach of the peace.

Consultation Question 4:

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure what difference this makes. Local registrations for ceremonies elsewhere could still be published online.

Consultation Question 5:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The attendance at an interview is essential to ensure that each party is fully consenting and that the relationship has a legitimate basis. Not sure if finding ways around this is helpful. If it is, whom does it advantage, and what could be the potential impact, both positive and negative?

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

I personally think seven days is worryingly short.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

This should be an exception rather than the rule, and there should be exemplar circumstances that would qualify.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Only if the ceremony is to be conducted in the registration jurisdiction.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I welcome the increased transparency. Not including notices online should be subject to considered criteria as to what constitutes harm.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Twelve months seems adequate.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The naming of a specific individual is a bit of a hostage to fortune as things change; unless the issuing of an amended schedule were free of charge, the schedule should not be restricted in this way.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, this needs to have no financial impact on the couple who has such as misfortune.

Please share your views below:

None that I can think of.

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

As this extends into another faith's practices I do not feel it appropriate to respond.

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Again, this is not my faith and therefore I have no view.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I have no opinion on this.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

If couples marrying in this way are not obliged to visit a registrar's office then such actions are justified and necessary to protect the integrity of marriage.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

If it helps protect the integrity of marriage and assists in the avoidance of any form of sham or forced marriage then I have no objections.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

We are in a modern age with limited regular CoE or CoW church attendance. Exempting what is now a minority (i.e. regular Anglican worshippers) from robust standardised preliminaries seems a little out of kilter, albeit that it is technically the state religion.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It is vital that any marriage ceremony is conducted in accordance with the law along with any requirements associated with faith, where applicable.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that they are trained and licensed by their local Registrar, humanist celebrants and other (non-Christian) faith-based clergy should be permitted to fulfil this role where other conditions do not allow for it to be deemed a religious marriage.

Consultation Question 21:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

One individual should be able to officiate alone; however, this need not be a registration officer provided that the officiant is trained and officially licenced by the Registrar.

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No opinion as I do not know enough about these individuals to comment.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In principle, yes. However, within the Pagan community we are quite eclectic and encompass a number of paths, some religious and some more secular. Provided that the Pagan Federation is able to do this for our community, then I would be content. That said, they need to be permitted to do so for both religious (eg Wicca) and secular groupings.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This supports the integrity of marriage as a solemn rite, and not something to be taken lightly .

Please share your views below:

Yes - the examples provided in the consultation document make a good starting point. What is key is that non-religious organisations should have a central focus related to philosophical (if not quasi-spiritual) questions.

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

From a pagan perspective, our most predominant religious grouping is Wicca. Due to historical prejudice, meetings are not the norm and where they are is often cloaked with secrecy. For that reason, many cannot find covens or groves to participate in and so there are many more solitary practitioners than members of covens or groves - albeit that most solitaires do convene regularly online to discuss and further beliefs.

If you were to include the Pagan Federation, which has a nationwide system of moots (but is mixed with religious and secular participants) and treated them as one, this would be acceptable to me personally and most other active pagans.

Note that if the 20 is per active unit rather than at a national level, this is potentially worrying - both for excluding my large sections of my community and the potential for giving credence to dubious cults.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

I have mixed views on this as for me marriage is a solemn rite and should be positively advocated in society. I have no problem with exclusion on the grounds of unlawful purposes. However, public policy is a very broad and frankly meaningless term - it's not the public's policy, it's the government's. Swaying to the tone of an individual government administration is, as history tells, a dangerous thing indeed. Similarly 'morality' is a very loaded term and not easily defined in perpetuity.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

In my view, all officiants should be trained and licensed to conduct such ceremonies. Nomination by office (unless subject to explicit associated requirements prior to practice) does not guarantee that the holder is able to act in line with the necessary legal requirements nor to give the couple the quality of ceremony that they deserve on what should be a very special day.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There absolutely needs to be a formal national register of approved officiants, available for searching by the public. I would personally go further and insist on proof of adequate training in both ceremonies and legal duty prior to enabling them to register to practice.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, provided that their suitability to undertake such an important rite of passage is assessed in the process.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems sensible to put the burden onto the nominating organisation. However, I suspect that lots of additional guidance will be needed to support all the aspects that need to be covered to enable those organisations who have not had this possibility before to do so effectively and robustly.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With respect to point 1, the age of 18 is too young - nut hopefully they will be few and far between. With respect to point 3, this training needs to encompass more than the legal aspects if they are to be truly fit to practice.

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This will help to deter charlatans. However, should a person who is sincere in their beliefs and conducts ceremonies in accordance with them happen to become financially successful because of it they should not be penalised.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This contradicts with the proposal to ban individuals from elevating profit above their beliefs. The GRO should set maximums for fees to avoid inappropriate profiteering and to protect consumers.

Consultation Question 34:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes to 1, as 'independent' means independent. As regards 2, this is a tricky one for my rather eclectic pagan community, which has elements of both.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage should be entered with reverence and an intent for a lifelong contracted bond between the two parties.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be as much helpful guidance out there to support the conduct of ceremonies that are truly memorable to the couple for all the right reasons. A poor ceremony may have a significantly negative impact on that couple's future.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Thinking of organisations that would be new to this, it strikes me that the GRO should provide nominating organisations with appropriate guidance on how this might be undertaken.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, guidance for nominated officiants wouldn't go amiss here.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As with nominated officiants, proper guidance on how to ensure their continuing compliance could be helpfully prepared by the GRO.

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Assuming active CPD, this should not be an issue.

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This is going to depend on the CPD burden imposed and its availability to the individual. If the GRO plans to run a scheme for this, great. It could also be widened to less well-resourced religious and non-religious belief organisations to give wider benefit to both the institution of marriage and the sharing of ceremony experiences and practices across different communities of faith and those without.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

There are often occasional 'religious' words in poems and songs that hitherto would have excluded their use. Sometimes there may be a hymn that is meaningful from a cultural or home nation perspective, such as Bread of Heaven or Jerusalem, and such an inclusion seems therefore acceptable. However, hymns with no such connotations, prayers or scripture readings should be avoided to maintain the civil flavour of the ceremony - particularly if the opportunity to have a wider range of faith-based weddings is enabled.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This really does depend on how wide the net will be opened for religious ceremonies. From my perspective as a pagan, I'd love to have a Wiccan handfasting that stands on its own as a legal wedding, but if not the next best thing is a civil ceremony followed by the religious rites.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With online publication of forthcoming weddings, this negates the need for making ceremonies open to the public.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is impractical.

Please share your views below:

The most important thing is the safety of those who are part of the ceremony and those who are in the nearby area, including other members of the community and any wildlife.

I am unconvinced of the wisdom of generally allowing weddings in private homes as most are too small to provide the space and usually lack parking, which would have a detrimental impact on neighbours. Remote and larger properties are more practical, but it would be unfair to treat people differently according to the size of their property.

On the water or in the air seem a bit odd to the average person, but provided they can be done practically I see no reason why not to permit them.

Outdoors is definitely one that should be available for those of us following Earth-based religions.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With upcoming marriages being posted online the need for public access is negated.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

In practice most will match their ceremony type to the venue type. However, there are a number of reasons to support flexibility. Firstly, religious and non-religious belief organisations are often not well funded and the extra income from venue hire would help. Secondly, couples should be able to choose what is the most practical and convenient venue to make their day special - things like parking, size, nearby accommodation will make a difference. Thirdly, if some religious organisations do not qualify to be recognised, adherents would welcome the flexibility to have their ceremony immediately followed by a religious rite without having to change venue.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Subject to proper guidance from GRO about the criteria to apply, it seems sensible to delegate this legal and responsible duty to the officiant.

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Totally agree .

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is welcome.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is one small aspect of making choices easier for couples at what is a very stressful time and supports businesses for whom this is a key income stream.

Please share your views below:

1. Either the GRO nationally or local registrars, with local information collated and held on a national searchable website.
2. A brief application form with a nominal fee to cover costs (thinking of non-commercial organisations too) leading to a visit where it is inspected by the relevant GRO or local official.

Alternatively, use the network of registered officiants (religious, non-religious, and independent) to build up a list of venues that they have personally assessed and share that online.

I'd prefer a third option of the same fee as for attending any other ceremony not held in the registry office. As mentioned earlier, the ability to pay is more pertinent when it comes to fees. The housebound and the detained have no choice either and may be financially worse off.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Hard to say as a layperson. However I do believe that opening up who can officiate ceremonies to a wider range of faith groups and non-religious belief organisations (and in a wider range of venues) is a better reflection of our diverse society. Enabling couples to have a meaningful experience that will stay positively with them can only help strengthen their bond.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Your proposals are intended to further undermine the Marriage Act.
Currently, those who wish to marry with a religious service are amply catered for.
Those who wish to have a civil ceremony are also fully covered.
There is no requirement for further legalistic involvement.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I do not see a huge impact on these changes, except if the location were to include private houses. In fact, I'm all for them!

However, I do not believe that private houses should be considered for ceremonies, due to the health & safety aspects involved, but also the "solemnity of the occasion" being brought into question.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current law affects a lot of our couples, as they would like to hold outside ceremonies - in our woodland for example, but because there's no "fixed structure" it cannot happen. By changing to the officiant approving the location, we would have much more flexibility to offer our couples. Once a venue has been approved by the registrars, couples should be able to choose a spot anywhere on our land, without the need for some arbitrary pergola or other fixed structure.

I also believe that the myriad of options - religious, non-religious, humanist, celebrant - has made it unnecessarily complicated. Making it simpler will be a boon to the wedding industry, which has been decimated by the current covid 19 pandemic.

Hopefully this is what you meant by this part!

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

1. I still believe a venue should have pre-approval by the local authority/registrars
2. Only needing one officiant would be much better - and therefore a saving for all our couples.
3. A huge benefit to us and our couples
4. I see a change in style/type rather than a huge increase in the overall number of weddings... There may be an increase if there was a reduction in costs

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think our local authority does a good job, within the legal restrictions. Some simplification of the whole process is long overdue!

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I'd say that a decrease in the numbers of officiants needing to attend each and every wedding would make for more availability to carry out weddings...

Difficulties of course when it was unclear when weddings could take place again, however despite restrictions as in the rest of life a relatively normal and meaningful service can take place with fewer people.

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It helpfully links the wedding celebration to a community

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It is already complicated to ensure that couples are not trying to gain fraudulent residency - this will not help.

There is In my personal experience something helpful about the formal act of going to register the marriage that makes it a serious event.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

There is no need to rush this!

Getting married is not a decision to be made without reflection

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

No - it makes it harder to spot sham marriages and makes a formal serious event too casual

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

It would depend on whether it was possible to work in cooperation with local registration services in a Common wealth country or in Scotland

Consultation Question 9:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This is an interesting possibility as it is more likely to be a useful way of catching people out who are already married - however the abusive way in which the internet is routinely used makes me worry that 'trolls' let alone previous annoyed partners etc would abuse this process.

Also this brings us back to why a ridiculously short e.g. three day notification period as seems to be suggested by you is ineffective.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes that's pretty much as present

Consultation Question 11:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It's not clear what the purpose of this proposal is - when a wedding is booked at a venue it is often not clear a year in advance which person will be the officiant - this seems to unnecessarily complicate matters - especially if due to illness there was a last minute substitution.

It seems aimed at replacing venue with celebrant.

Consultation Question 12:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In which case what is the purpose of such naming in the first place?

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Banns are in practice the most positive way of giving notice - especially in e.g. a church in England context where it puts a very positive spin in presenting the couple to the community and their prayers.

It also undermines the ecclesiastical law which serves an important purpose. Archbishop's faculty has been a very useful prerogative also.

Consultation Question 14:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

No because again this undermines the sense of both parties to the wedding being important, and the reality that there is a practical as well as a commendation aspect to the banns

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Your question is not clear as to what documentary evidence you are referring to - e.g. there is a significant difference between inspecting a baptism certificate which the clergyman should be expected to have some competence in and inspecting a birth certificate - this question is too general at present to be helpful.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Possibly - though in practice this already happens as a clergyman is clear when completing the banns form what is an impediment to the marriage.

This seems unnecessarily formally complicating.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales; or

Please expand on your answer:

Yes - previous answers should make this clear.

It is an unnecessary undermining of the established church to remove this power.

It simply adds to the cost for the couple and their inconvenience.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems straightforward - not sure what you are proposing here that is different to the current position

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

That again seems to be the current and obvious position.

They can't take a ceremony which is posited on a belief they don't hold.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Again not sure what you are proposing here.

This seems to be the existing situation of a clerk in holy orders. I would support the continuation of the existing provision that they can officiate by virtue of being a clerk in holy orders.

Consultation Question 23:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I'm not convinced of the need for non religious belief organisations to officiate at weddings.

The state has already seriously undermined the meaning of marriage to an extremely low common denominator - adding in non religious groups to further create different views of what marriage is makes it difficult for the state to have anything to legislate for and recognise

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

I am against this but a list would be necessary if it were agreed to as the government needs to be clear what the couples are agreeing to!

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

This becomes complex.

My basic position would be yes.

With the proviso that one needs to be careful not to thereby remove the traditional concept of marriage between one man and one woman from the concept of a legal marriage. There is also the issue here of gender as a church can not recognise the redefined gender as changing the biological sex of a person.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I have already argued that the existing provision of office in the Anglican churches should be retained.

However this is too difficult to regulate appropriate persons on the extremely enlarged franchise you propose. There would likely be no selection process, safeguarding etc in a group of 20 people.

Consultation Question 28:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If you were to proceed down this route

Consultation Question 29:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Not convinced of the purpose of such 'celebrants' most of whom in my experience are all about making money from people and charging exorbitant amounts.

Compare the price of a 'naming ceremony' to a baptism - which is free!

Consultation Question 30:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes but hopefully not the non religious ones in my opinion.

Consultation Question 31:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Again my concern is while that might well be appropriate for an expanded franchise, I don't think the registrar general should be able to tell the church about their professional development in officiating at a wedding. They don't have the theological training for it.

This is of course quite different from advising about the legal necessities of paperwork, forms of agreed words etc

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In principle yes of course, while thinking this is difficult to regulate.

The Church of England fees are very low compared to prices for venues etc in weddings, but are set to be a reasonable contribution towards the building etc

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is an outrageous suggestion given your previous question.

Why do you think an independent celebrant should be able to exploit people for profit?

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But then the whole point of independent celebrants is that they straddle such beliefs by responding not with any personal authenticity but only reflecting that of their client.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Though there will be a great discussion about what that means.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With the proviso that this isn't used to penalise for and proper views about traditional marriage - which could lead to the inability of traditional Christian and other religious bodies to conduct weddings at all

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Sounds all very reasonable. It depends on what that entails

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The oral declaration is important - and practically and psychologically quite different from signing a document which too many do perfunctorily.

This also completely misses the way in which there are still many functionally illiterate people.

Consultation Question 43:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No

This phrasing undermines the way in which there is a definite content to the definition of marriage especially as understood in the traditional Christian and other religious communities.

Consultation Question 44:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This undermines the existing way in which these groups are dealt with and further attacks the legal position of the church of England as an established church.

Consultation Question 45:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It's disrespectful to the religion

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There is a confusion here between the states recognition of a legal marriage and what is understood by many communities.

It would be viewed as an attack on communities

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If it isn't a public declaration then the state has no business being involved in marriage at all - and neither does the law society

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Again an attack on religious groups for which a venue is often a sacred space and creates conflict with couples who don't always understand this if your suggestion were to be followed.

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

Might be appropriate for some civil marriages but complex for ensuring public safety

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No - see above about the public nature of commitment to marriage if the marriage is to have relevance to society and to be recognised and regulated as such

Leaving aside the religious fact that marriage is about the two of you in relation to the community

Consultation Question 50:

Other

Yes

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I can't see the issue with a civil ceremony - which is already a non religious ceremony - taking place in a non religious ceremony location

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Too nebulous and makes it hard to keep the public safe

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes but again not in an onerous way

Other

Please expand on your answer:

And as I said this 'easing of restrictions' you propose becomes another layer of top heavy bureaucracy

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not only anglicans would have problem with the parent label - mother and father have specific meanings.

This isn't about feelings!

Consultation Question 55:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In principle but the officiant must be conversant in the language!

Consultation Question 56:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Lots of reasons - including the failure of electronic systems

Paperwork with registrars ink lasts hundreds of years

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Absence of witnesses is problematic - they perform a real function in being able to testify the ceremony took place as reported.

Failure to register the wedding is serious - again how can you tell especially with. I witness if such a ceremony actually took place - add in your mistake criteria and it's a recipe for disaster

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I don't believe the current law does discourage people getting married - which they primarily do because either of the perceived legal benefit or an idea of what marriage is.

I do not think your proposals will on the whole help - they undermine existing religious provision - and increasingly it is this who still beliefs in marriage as an institution who continue to be married - it's not determined by the sort of convenience matters you are concerned with

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I can only comment on religious weddings which are priced very cheaply in my experience.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

You really misunderstand the nature of wedding costs.

Weddings can take place under existing legislation very cheaply.

The costs are in the parties and accessories

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

I have already mentioned a number of negative impacts to religious groups here - including a further watering down of the content of marriage - what is being agreed to and promised - and a. Inner of attacks on the established church - and despite protestations to the contrary our ability to self regulate.

Please expand on your answer:

Why need there be any delay, assuming eligibility is confirmed. Twenty four hours might be acceptable.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

In-Person interview would be advised when concerns are there.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Notice is usually welcomed by those who know one of the couple to be married. Such a public event (getting married) should not be restricted in the giving of notice.

Consultation Question 9:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Banns confirm eligibility for marriage and reading them in the residence of one or both of the couple would increase confidence that there is no bar to marriage.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

As clergy I already call for documentary evidence and check it. Can also meet each of the couple separately if I have concerns - unsure that being required to meet them separately would be helpful.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

As a Surrogate (authorised to apply for/issue Common Licences) I think that this might be a good idea - then there are declarations of fact in advance of signing registers at the ceremony. (Ensures that declarations of previous marriages/civil partnerships are made by both parties).

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

I am confident that as clergy authorised to register and conduct weddings I take this responsibility seriously. When in doubt I am able to consult the Registrar to ensure that the preliminaries are correctly completed.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As CofE clergy this is already my duty

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be no pressure on registration officers to officiate at a wedding which involves religious (or non-religious) elements with which the officer cannot agree.

Consultation Question 21:

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Confirms that it is meaningful consent and declaration.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

These are well-founded groups who take the responsibilities seriously.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would mean that meaningful words/music could now be included.

Please share your views below:

Decided and agreed by couple and officiant.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Services of Blessing (in the CofE) are much valued and taken seriously. Permission for this should be retained.

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should continue to be the opportunity for objections to be raised - until the last moment!

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

In the air is a little vague as to location - to whom should the registration be made?

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think that there is still a need for objections to be lodged so that access by the public should not be denied.

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

No

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The content of the ceremony should be appropriate to the setting. A religious ceremony should be permitted anywhere but a non-religious ceremony not in a religious setting (consecrated church, temple, synagogue, mosque etc).

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No location should be used without the owner's consent. (eg I would not want non-religious ceremonies to be on church grounds)

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Avoid weddings on roller coasters!

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The GRO is well placed to offer such advice

Consultation Question 53:

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Addition of both parents would be welcomed.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems fair and reasonable

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I would still want to retain paper documents - to keep church records complete

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Please expand on your answer:

Lack of confidence that ceremony conducted in a lawful way

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

The option for a wedding (of any sort) whilst afloat is likely to be welcomed. The numbers who currently marry overseas indicates that this might be a popular option.

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The same should apply for those married in the UK too (no fixed time limit)

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Extra costs should not fall to the 'taxpayer'

Consultation Question 76:

(1) the same fee as other cases in which the registration officer must travel to the person giving notice, set nationally on a cost-recovery basis; or

Please expand on your answer:

Why should there be a lower fee?

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The option should not be removed.

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Costs should be recovered

Consultation Question 79:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

1. No - as CoFE clergy I see many couples who want to marry. It is their understanding of the law that discourages some from marrying.
2. More flexibility in location and officiant will only tend to increase the number of couples being legally married.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Not known by me
2. The cost of marrying in CoFE Church is set by Parliament and has not put off couples.
3. As above at 2.
4. Marrying overseas is seen as expensive
5. Couples value the opportunity to marry in church - fixed cost and not 'per head'!

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Not known
2. Unsure of what savings there might be. Church weddings tend to be much cheaper than other venues. Similar charges would apply if I were authorised to take weddings in other locations.
3. Currently the case so no savings.

Consultation Question 87:

Please expand on your answer:

The wedding and events industry has a saturated market of venues already, if the law is changes allowing weddings to occur in any location, many venues will go out of business. Approved venues also safe guide couples against unprofessional suppliers to ensure they provide the service that was paid for and that they are a financial viable company. Also it safe guards the couple from poor quality caterers and the potential for food poisoning and subsequently legal action being taken by the guests.

on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

In addition, to comments above regarding the booking of sub standard suppliers to deliver the wedding, a ceremony conducted in the air or water etc presents many unnecessary health and safety issues. Outdoor settings in an approved venue however can be better controlled and still benefit from having access to an approved and vetted list of wedding event suppliers.

Consultation Question 51:

Please expand on your answer:

A couple will just seek to find another officiant who will approve their wedding in whatever venue they choose. The law needs to be fair but consistent with the rules. The current ambiguous COVID-19 guidance of what is and isn't possible for wedding receptions, gatherings etc, only goes to prove how inconsistent and unclear rules do not work.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

What will be the definition of 'Safe' and 'Dignified'. These terms are completely open to interpretation and Officiants are not health and safety experts. For example approved venues produce Risk Assessments for every wedding or event. Will an officiant supply this or the couple? They would not as they do not have training in this field.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

See above. Further, who will check if the Officiant has made a correct decision. What enforcement will be in place if that decision was ill advised and an accident happens at the wedding. Who is then liable?

Consultation Question 53:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not agree that it should be optional, it should be compulsory. A trusted wedding venue should be officially recognized and awarded such status.

Please share your views below:

Approved venue processes are already in place. Consider the thousands of venues in the UK who have worked for years to earn trust and recommendations through hosting weddings and winning awards. It does not make any commercial sense to allow for weddings to happen anywhere with anyone being able to operate them. It will encourage inferior levels of service, scams and very likely accidents and major errors.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

From a "Weddings at Sea" perspective, this is restrictive for our clients and guests.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Giving a notice period online is a good idea, but again it is restrictive to have the couple do an in person interview prior to the ceremony on board a vessel. Suggest this can be done online or by some other digital means. However where there is suspicion of a sham marriage or marriage of convenience, then an in person interview should go ahead.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

3 days at a minimum. This allows time for any issues that arise during the interview to be rectified and also for the couple to join the vessel shortly after and have the ceremony.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Agree. Interviews and maybe questionnaires should be completed 3 days prior to getting married on board a ship and can be done online where possible.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, this should be allowed.

Consultation Question 9:

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Providing the Officiant can be anyone who chooses to be one. As in the case of "Weddings at Sea" where a Senior Officer would be conducting the legalities of the wedding.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

For "Weddings at Sea", there is a need for flexibility of whom can Officiate. There must be a mechanism to allow Senior Marine Officers to be able to Officiate.

There should be provision for religious ceremonies at sea and non-religious ceremonies at sea. There is a big demand from couple to be married whilst on a ship at sea by the Master or Staff Captain, and this is something that the industry is very interested in achieving.

This would also drive UK ship registry as cruise companies will not use UK registry because they do not currently allow official weddings at sea in international waters.

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Cruise lines have shied away from UK Ship Registry because of the inability to carry out "Weddings at Sea". Many couples wish to be married whilst travelling on a cruise ship, and many couples wish to have a ceremony carried out by the Master as officiant. There are very few if any cruise ships on the UK register and this would indeed make the UK register more attractive if official religious or non-religious weddings could be officiated on board a vessel in international waters, or indeed anywhere the vessel may be (when UK registered of course).

There are many reasons to have a cruise vessel under UK flag, however due to not being able to carry out official ceremonies on board under UK flag, most cruise lines flag with countries that do allow these types of ceremonies.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

This would make the UK ship register more attractive to the cruise industry. UK Ship Register is deemed one of the best in the world for its high standards, and I believe there is pent up demand for passenger/cruise vessels to be under UK flag.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There are already too few safeguards in the marriage process. Removing any that currently exist would seem incredibly unwise.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes - however, the notice of marriage should be published online too rather than simply published at the relevant registry office.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

A longer period, to give registrars, other professionals, and friends and family members of those getting married to raise and act on any safeguarding concerns.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

There are already too few safeguards for vulnerable adults in the marriage process. Absolutely no current safeguards should be removed.

Joan Blass (see the campaign Justice for Joan) had dementia severe enough that she did not remember her own address or the name of the man she was marrying, scored zero on the mini mental state test two years before the forced marriage, after which her dementia worsened even more, and the marriage still took place despite in-person interviews.

It took place despite one of the two registrars, the more junior, raising concerns about her capacity to consent, because the senior registrar decided "she looked happy" (this was discovered in the later police investigation).

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Depends whether this could be achieved without further weakening safeguarding from forced marriage.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is one of the aims of Justice for Joan campaign. had online search notifications set up for the name of the man who forced into marriage, and for name, because she was so vulnerable and were so frightened about what he might do to her.

However, because notice is currently only published in the registry office - and, importantly, several social care professionals that she could not possibly be allowed to marry as she lacked capacity - did not find out about the forced marriage until after her death, by which time it was too late (as a marriage cannot be annulled after death).

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Everything to do with notice of marriage should be published and available online.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

We have found in our investigations into forced/predatory marriages that clergy are often more vigilant than are registrars, and church procedures more rigorous than civil ones. [REDACTED], Joan Blass, who was forced into marriage, did not receive a separate interview from registrars despite the apparent requirement for these.

Giving clergy more powers and responsibilities regarding safeguarding, therefore, is certainly a good idea.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, that is common sense for safeguarding purposes.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

If Anglican officials have relevant legal powers and responsibilities to address safeguarding concerns, capacity to marriage, forced marriage, etc. then yes.

In principle I believe that all preliminaries should be civil preliminaries, but the civil system has so many failings and, as stated above, the church is often more rigorous, in practice my belief is different.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

They should be attended by more than one officiant for these purposes.

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It is imperative that there are multiple officers present, for safeguarding purposes. As stated earlier, [REDACTED] forced marriage was allowed to proceed even though two officers were present, and even though one raised serious concerns - what safeguards there are should not be weakened even further.

Consultation Question 22:

Consultation Question 23:

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The above is too prescriptive: as far as I understand, humanists do not "claim to explain humanity's nature and relationship to the universe".

Representatives from any organisation should be allowed to officiate a marriage as long as they are adequately trained and supported in safeguarding issues.

Representatives from any organisation should be allowed to officiate a marriage as long as they are adequately trained and supported in safeguarding issues, and the purpose of the organisation does not conflict with these (for example, if it holds beliefs that predatory/forced marriage is acceptable in any situation, it should be excluded).

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Current practice decidedly does not prevent forced and predatory marriage, even though forced marriage is technically illegal. Preventing this is ultimately more important than facilitating marriage for those who do consent but are experiencing difficulties, and certainly more important than business opportunities as a result of increased marriages.

Marriage is a legal contract between two parties, and no marriage should take place if both parties do not have a complete understanding of that legal contract and full capacity to make it.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Is this a negative or positive???? Stupid question - Try "Do you consider your self married, but not in a legally recognised marriage?"

If its not recognised then why is it a marriage? Its a bit like me saying to you "you owe me £100,000" - do you owe it? Of course not, but on your guidelines - you do - please pay up.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

If there were legal barriers they should be adhered to - its meaningful and personal that you owe me £100,000 - please pay up.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Its been a severe restriction.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Couples should be resident in some district in England or Wales - or are you proposing that someone from abroad could visit, get married and hence claim citizenship - even though they have no links to this country. This smacks of a way around immigration.

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

As "online" can be anywhere in the world - this smacks of trying to bypass immigration and other legalities

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

History of payment of UK Income tax for 3 years

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

No - its too easy to fake it.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Sounds reasonable provided there is a recognised witness. (JP, Captain etc)

Consultation Question 9:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Risk of Harm is a broad subject - it its defined as recent laws then it will be a Humpty Dumpty case ("When I use a word," Humpty Dumpty said, in rather a scornful tone, "it means just what I choose it to mean—neither more nor less." "The question is," said Alice, "whether you can make words mean so many different things.")

Consultation Question 10:

No

Please expand on your answer:

What schedule? What has a schedule got to do with my daughter getting married in the local church among friends?

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is a job creation scheme and totally unnecessary.

Consultation Question 12:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why replace a simple current scheme with a more complex one?

Please share your views below:

Please see Humpty Dumpty response earlier.

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why change what works pretty well?

Consultation Question 14:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why change something for no benefit? Or do you have some benefit in mind?

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Has it caused any problems? Most people are known locally so word soon gets about. This is about building a community where people support one another. But I suspect this is about central control - please emigrate to China and join CCP

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

The current system sounds eminently sensible

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

What happens if one is in the Armed forces? There is no reason a Padre cannot accept a declaration, whilst the other is at a Parish Church.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

There are c.8000 parishes that take weddings - are you proposing employing a load of new civil servants to do what they do quite adequately.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Vicars seem to do the job quite adequately

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Is this a change?

Consultation Question 21:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Is this a change?

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Is this a change?

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The Church of England can pass legally valid measures, no other religious body can. Are you proposing a change to this? This reflects their embedded nature in the laws of this country from Queen downwards. This sounds like allowing anyone to sanction marriage with no constraint.

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

20 is a joke surely? Any organisation should pledge allegiance to the Queen and laws of this land and have weekly attendance of 50,000 UK citizens at least.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Are you saying that free speech is dead - this sounds like an attempt to shore up an unpopular policy. See previous answer.

Consultation Question 27:

Consultation Question 28:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Can the organisations not keep track of them? Another job creation scheme

Consultation Question 29:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If they are in an organisation of >50,000 attendees per week then there is no reason to consider this. It simply leads to corruption.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not if 20 is the size of organisation.

Consultation Question 31:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Not if 20 is the size of organisation.

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

"Elevating" is a nebulous word. Any charge should be similar to the Church of England charge.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

independent officiants are a joke. Any charge should be similar to the Church of England charge.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

independent officiants are a joke.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Its what they do at the moment - why are you proposing it.

Consultation Question 36:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The Church of England is legally the definer of Marriage and the Marriage service is part of English Law

Consultation Question 37:

No

Please expand on your answer:

What if the organisation is not fit and proper - so that it downgrades women

Consultation Question 38:

No

Please expand on your answer:

What if the organisation is not fit and proper - should it not be removed.

Consultation Question 39:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This whole questionnaire is spurious

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Time limit on what

Consultation Question 41:

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage has two components

1- parties agree and have no impediment to a legal UK marriage

2 - the marriage is legally signed and witnessed

Both need to be in place in the ceremony for the avoidance of doubt.

Consultation Question 43:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Form and Ceremony will follow from the organisation that carries out the wedding - subject to the answers to Q42

Consultation Question 44:

No

Please expand on your answer:

See Q42

Consultation Question 45:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Its either religious or secular - its a binary choice.

Please share your views below:

None - have a religious wedding if you want that.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Its nothing to do with the state. The civil bit is done for those organisations not permitted to hold weddings.

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Its a public declaration - you miss the point that its a communal event to be celebrated by the community, not a private legal job to be hidden away.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

You are proposing a lot of contradictory questions without any linking - a load of b*****ks.

You propose composite questions - so obviously have an agenda.

So this should be the first question - with connection to the question on who should do it, and whether it should be public.

as I said its cr*p.

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,

Please share your views below:

what is "in the air, and/or" ?????

Wherever a wedding is held it should be (a) public and proclaimed as valid, (b) witnessed by an authorised person (c) documented

If these cannot be guaranteed then it is not a wedding venue.

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

See previous answers - I'm bored by your stupidity

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

No

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Cr*p questions with load of double negatives.

Religious venues should not be impinged upon for non religious weddings- theres plenty of places for them to go.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

My set of officiants, a subset of yours, is fine YES. Your superset of mine is rubbish - NO

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

My set of officiants, a subset of yours, is fine YES. Your superset of mine is rubbish - NO

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The Church of England is entitled to define its own realm.

Consultation Question 53:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Jobs for the boys.

Please share your views below:

Make it as complex as possible to give jobs to the boys

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

My marriage certificate has all that on it, and makes tracing family history easier. Why remove it?

Consultation Question 55:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The official language of the UK is english - all marriage documents should be at least in that language - others are optional

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yet another stupid question - it could be done now with paper copies as per death certificate. But how would you uniquely identify people.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be "either party" not "both"

No

Please expand on your answer:

The first could be correctable subject to safeguards but 2 & 3 are critical to the legal process.

Consultation Question 58:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be "either party" not "both" in all cases

Consultation Question 59:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A marriage is meaningless if cohabitation has not followed it. Sounds like an immigration fiddle.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I didn't think "presumption that a couple is married" constituted legal marriage. Is this a strawman?

Consultation Question 60:

No

Please expand on your answer:

You've proposed "both" not " either" in earlier questions. The answer to this depends on previous decisions. Which idiot drew these questions up?

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But its the couples responsibility - individually - to confirm the officiants status

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

I think that even seven days is too quick a time. A month would allow a more considered proposal.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I believe that all interviews should be in person, with both parties present, and with a suitably qualified person. Hopefully this would avoid sham or forced ceremonies.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

I believe that both parties should be present at the venue or place at which they propose to live.

Consultation Question 14:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There are many churches. Where the proposed church is unavailable, the vicar should be able to liaise with other vicars concerning the venue church.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I believe the banns should be published as widely as possible.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes to both.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

Very much the former. Anything else could lessen the sanctity of an Anglican wedding.

When a Christian couple get married in church, the importance of the ceremony taken before God, and the promises made to God, are the only essentials necessary.

If there is no limit on costs etc this leaves the ceremony open to financial abuse.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't see why someone who is a religious officiant can not perform a non religious ceremony. However this would not work the other way around

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As per the belief system of that religion or spirituality

Consultation Question 36:

No

Please expand on your answer:

While there should be a framework I feel that, particularly in spiritual belief systems this would take away the individuals ability to have a ceremony personal and meaningful for them.

Which is why we have not got married to date

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

The banns system seems to me an outdated system, it was introduced on the premis that the couple would be known locally and lots of the local community would be in church to hear them read. Neither apply now and so the banns reading is really a 'ceremonial' or traditional aspect of preparing for the wedding. Couples often marry in a church where no one knows them due to a qualifying connection and so calling banns is a nonsense.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I feel that the public declaration of no impediment at the wedding is still relevant and necessary.

Consultation Question 43:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The form and ceremony may be set by the religious or non religious organisation responsible and is therefore not at the discretion of the couple or the officiant to change. I also feel that having certain set words for the declaration, exchange of vows etc keeps structure of the service and of the key elements in place. Flexibility can then be allowed around that key structure

Consultation Question 44:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The current system where the two are distinct alternatives works well, there should be a clear distinction between a civil and religious service. I acknowledge that there are some pieces of music and possible songs which there is ambiguity and those rules can be relaxed. However readings from religious texts and hymns should be retained as part of religious ceremonies.

Please share your views below:

Classical music written for church but now seen as more general use,
Readings from novels or poetry that has religious origins or connotations

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

For some this is still important, they may have very good reasons to have a civil ceremony but then want a religious service after.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think the possibilities should be widened but the venue would still need to be licensed and appropriate. There should not be provision for 'one off' venues in private gardens or in sports stadium.

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

Some outdoor venues may be appropriate but in some cases this should be restricted

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

Yes

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Religious venues are exactly that, religious venues and as such have a particular role and place, they offer the worship space as a place to worship and should not be offered as a place for non religious ceremonies. There are plenty of venues around for this. I cannot understand why someone who has an issue with a religion ceremony would choose to marry in a place of belief and with symbols of belief around them. If civic ceremonies were allowed in religious venues many churches and clergy would be put under immense pressure to allow the building to be used and be accused of being discriminatory if not allowing, we would be opening up a situation for accusations and court cases.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Officiants may have a conflict of interest

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It should be the responsibility of the officiant and of the local authority

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Licensing premises would mean that the local authority, with their local knowledge and understanding had already looked at this and made a judgement.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I don't feel the current law does prevent people getting married, i think there is lots of choice available and various buildings that can be used. The current preliminaries are not onerous but are sufficient to prevent illegal or forced marriages. I would worry that a relaxation in preliminaries and checks would allow some to pressure others into weddings . Marriage is serious, it is a legally binding contract and should have some element of control over suitable venues and suitable officiants.

I feel the main barrier to people getting married is the perception that a wedding needs to be large and expensive and that many of the venues charge high amounts. However there are venues , including many religious venues, who can provide a more affordable option.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Register weddings- cost can be an issue for some but generally the basic ceremony is acceptable
Some approved premises are very expensive, but also often have large overheads, more venues with a lower cost would be good
Registered places of weddings have fees that are quite controlled in most cases and many have an option for discretionary fees

Given the costs many spend on a wedding the registrant fee is quite small

The availability of registrars has caused some issues, where a wedding was booked and then registrar was not available. This tends not to be a problem if booked far enough in advance but much more so if short notice

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I'm Pagan, presently in England and Wales, our marriage tradition isn't recognized by law. Hand fasting is a legally recognized ceremony in Scotland, but not England and Wales.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, I've always been aware hand fasting is not recognized by law, this is why I'm not legally married.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I simply do not recognize national law when it comes to defining my personal relationships. If the government can't be bothered to respect me and mine, I don't respect them or their laws.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, made it a lot easier to end a decade long relationship. But I suspect it was only easy for me because it was a amicable split and I didn't need any form of legal protection. Not so sure that is the case in the situations experienced by many others.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

Hand fasting, the tradition of my faith is not recognized in England and Wales. As you might imagine being Pagan means I wont marry in a monotheistic church or temple. Which leaves only the bureaucracy of a registrar's. Marriage events are suppose to be joyous celebrations of life, not a business meeting where contracts are signed and dated. As a result Registrar events seem very cold, underwhelming and quite frankly, sad, to me, not the way I want to start a marriage with anyone.

As a result if I want to get married I have to have two events, a boring business meeting that to me seems little more than jumping through unnecessary hoops to satisfy some strangers I have never met and who have no business sticking their noses into my personal affairs, and then I have to have an actual ceremony with those who I love and who do matter to me. But apparently it's the boring business meeting that's important. (No it isn't, and if you think it is you've missed a very important lesson in life, nothing is more important than family.)

Quite frankly the entire governmental bureaucratic process is nothing but an insult to Pagan's and an attack on our private personal relationships.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

No experience if marriages during this event, funerals where weird though. People seemed to have to be very disciplined with their emotions, until they simply couldn't be because of circumstance. At which point any idea of social distancing and transmission prevention was just forgotten as individuals tried to comfort each other and seek some kind of solace and closure. Very difficult and very sad.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

it's not up to any superintendent to agree to marry someone based on the amount of time they've lived anywhere. i can see the point in someone checking if both parties are of legal age and both willing want to enter into the marriage, but checking based on location? What's that got to do with anything. Seems a bit feudal to me.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is the 21st century after all. The global communications network was established for a reason, use it.

Consultation Question 6:

Please expand on your answer:

As short a time as possible, running checks is not an excuse to delay people from getting on with their lives.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

No, remote interviews are to insecure and you can never be sure who's promoting what answers in the background. Although there should be a online method for all lines of communication, actual interviews should take place face to face on a individual and private basis.

No idea what any of this means as I'm not Christian.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

No idea what any of this means as I'm not Christian. Personally I'd never let a Priest anywhere near my paperwork, but I can see the point in some sort of official checking for things like forced marriages.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, in the Pagan faith both parties have to make separate statements that they want to be married and know of no reason why they can't be. (which they usually do loudly and repeatedly over the weeks leading up to the ceremony.)

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

Both, if someone of a faith wants a member of their own faith to officiate their wedding then that's what they should get. This should be extended to all faiths, not just the Church of England. However i do think the preliminaries of any faiths ceremony should reach the legal standard required by English and Welsh law.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I can see the reason in points one and three, but what exactly do you mean by "the other requirements of the ceremony." Ceremonies and rituals as adaptive living things that evolve and change with the form of life that undertakes them. Any Officiant must be willing to accept that the specific ceremony they attend may not be the same as the generic ceremony they've been told about.

For instance, it's a common belief that Pagan hand fastings require those witnessing the event to kneel before the Mother figure who over see's the ceremony simply as a mark of respect. This is true, it's very common.

However, among Pagan's it is also a belief that certain people do not kneel before anyone. or anything. if such a person chooses not to kneel at a handfasting, that is not any of the Officiants business, similarly if such a person does choose to kneel, it is not any of the Officiants business. None of this, including the presence of a motherly figure to oversee everything is simply not important, the only thing that matters is the hand fasting and words spoken between the two parties getting married. And while the handfasting often follows a similar pattern, the actual words spoken vary considerably, so again, it's not the words that are important, but rather their meaning and sincerity. This is the only thing the officiant should be concerned about, is it a sincere wedding between two agreeing parties.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There's no reason why two people of faith can't have a faith centered wedding that is still precised over by a registration officer if that's what the parties getting married want. There are plenty of Christians who have a strong faith in God but no faith in the Church. Such people should still be able to have a religious wedding with prayers and what ever they wish even if they don't have a Priest in attendance.

Same goes for Pagan's, we don't really have a organised faith, there's no reason for us to actually have an official representative of our faith to over see things, after all, we are all official representatives of our faith. No one person actually has any more legitimacy than anyone else. We just tend to elect a individual to take a leading role out of tradition and ease of conducting the ceremony. there is no reason that individual can't be a sympathetic civil registrar who understands the spirit of the occasion.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Again, not Christian, I have no idea if these individuals are experienced to take on this responsibility or not.

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I'm Pagan, we don't have a "governing authority." How is this proposal suppose to extend to organisations that simply do not do hierarchical power structures?

All that I can suggest is that any nominated officiant put forward by any organisation, even if they are self nominated. should be checked by civil registrar's to make sure they have a clear understanding of the legal responsibilities.

Consultation Question 24:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes on the first sentence. But I have problems with the words "in conformity". Many secular belief systems believe that the Universe is a random and very very diverse place, conformity is the last thing it is seeking. As such such systems can not teach that there is any way to actually conform. This makes there beliefs no less relevant than anyone elses.

Please share your views below:

Political and Profit Chasing organisations There should never be such a thing as a marriage of political convenience or "this marriage is proudly sponsored by Cokacola" that is legally recognized. Marriages should be about love and emotions, not about politics and business.

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't see why there has to be a specific amount of people who have to meet on a regular basis. What exactly do this prove? That there's more than one or two people of a like mind? If so, what does that have to do with any two peoples desire to get married? That a certain number of people have to agree before others can form a long lasting personal relationship? You'll find the number of people who have eloped during our history proves that this is simply not the case.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

It depends how unlawful these views are. Many traditional organisations hold views that do no meet the standards of modern law of morality. Only organisations that have already been proscribed by law as being unlawful (ie, banned for being a load of gun toting, violence espousing terrorists or proven to promote practices such as honor killings) should be excluded.

For a organisation to have the ability to nominate taken away, they should already have been prosecuted in a court of law and found to be acting in a unlawful manner, not just promoting it, but actively engaging in it.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes. it is my understanding that some office positions in some religions only exist to oversee marriages, that is the very point of that office. So anyone taking up that position should automatically be nominated. They still need checking to make sure they understand their legal responsibilities in addition to any responsibilities they have to their organisation though.

Consultation Question 30:

Consultation Question 31:

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely, marriage should never be any form of business transaction.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No, there needs to be some kind of limit of fee's. Otherwise you'll have people being married by the Celebrity of the week and the Celebrity them selves wont really care about who they're marrying or if the proper checks have been implemented. They'll just do it for the money.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I know of more than a few humanist or atheist individuals who are quite happy to work along side and even respectfully conduct religious ceremonies. Just because a individual doesn't share in a particular faith does not mean they do not have respect for that faith or it's practitioners. I see no reason why such a person can't be nominated by multiple organisations.

Consultation Question 35:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Dignity definitely, but solemnity? What exactly does that mean? How is one expected to present they are serious about their responsibilities? Does this mean they should always been holding a dire expression and continually reminding everyone of what a major step is being taken? Or should they be smiling and joyous and telling everyone that "yep, they've checked, and this most definitely is a legit marriage that is most bodacious."

Perhaps the best way to judge if someone is taking it all seriously or not is just to check that everyone is meeting their legal requirements, something that should be done with officiants before they even take up their position.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only the most basic of guidance to make sure all concerned meet their legal responsibilities. After that it's not really anyone's concern how a wedding is being conducted accept for those being married.

it is not any officials place to tell two scuba divers who want to get married at the bottom of the sea because that's their shared passion, that they can't, because that's not how you conduct a marriage.

Consultation Question 37:

What do you do when someone has developed their profession to the highest level possible? How are you going to tell someone who already has a high level of education in law or sociology and a position within a social or religious organisation that they can no longer preside over weddings because they've got nothing major left to learn and no clear path of development to proceed along?

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Organisations should only be required to submit how people getting married declare their consent and how they've made sure that this declaration is free from influence of parties not getting married. Any other details about the ceremony are simply none of the General Register Office business.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but on the understanding that the ceremony itself might change at the last minute due to unforeseen circumstance. The only aspects of it that should be set in stone and immutable are the agreed upon methods of the involved parties expressing their free consent.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

So long as the civil and legal responsibilities are met it's not really anyone's concern if the ceremony presents itself as civil or religious. Those of faith, who do not trust the earthly hierarchy of their faith, should still be able to have a religious ceremony, even if it is presided over by a Civil Registrar rather than an official representative of their faith.

Please share your views below:

Any that those getting married wish, so long as they aren't unlawful under British law. Hnadfasting during a civil ceremony should definitely be allowed for anyone who wishes this form of symbolism to be included in their Wedding ceremony, be they Pagan, or not.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This should only be repealed if it is allowed for those getting married to perform their chosen religious acts during the civil ceremony. If not then those of faith should always have to option to hold a religious ceremony just before or just after the civil one if their religious ceremony is not recognized by law.

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No, absolutely not, weddings should never take place behind closed doors. Such a ceremony is for two people to declare their intention to act in the most intimate form of partnership to the world. Such a declaration can not be made behind closed doors.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Nope, people should be free to hold the ceremony where ever they wish, except in circumstance where that ceremony would stop others not involved from accessing that local for any long period of time. (Ie no one should be able to ring fence off the top of Mt Snowdon so they can have a private ceremony up there, if they wish to get married at such heights, they're just going to have to put up with the fact other Hikers and sight seer's are probably going to crash their ceremony. )

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

All artificial barriers that stop consenting adults from getting married at a time and place of their choosing should be removed. This belief that you can't hold a civil right in a religious area or a religious rite in a civil area is pure stagnancy and closed mindedness.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, it is the officiants responsibility to make sure all legal requirements are being met, this includes making sure that a chosen location is actually safe and doesn't pose a serious risk of injury to those attending. If a ceremony is taking place at a unusual and possibly risky location, then it is the officiants job to make sure all those attending are aware of these factors and do have the necessary experience or training to deal with them.

Consultation Question 52:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Safe, to a certain extent yes, but again if two scuba divers want to marry at the bottom of the sea it should be the attendant jobs to make sure all those attending are aware of this and are trained scuba divers. Such a situation can never be deemed entirely safe, but so long as the risks are properly managed, then that should be enough.

As for dignified, well I can't see getting married in a strip club is ever going to be dignified. But if two people want to do that, it's not my or anyone else's place to stop them. if two farmers want to get married in a animal shed surrounded by farting pigs and toileting cows, that's their choice and they should be free to do so.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

See above, dignity doesn't mean anything, but guidance should be produced on how to mitigate or completely nullify any risk that come with a specific location. After all your average official isn't going to know how to make a marriage between two scuba divers at the bottom of the sea safe and is probably going to need some support and guidance in that capacity.

Consultation Question 53:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Depends on the location, generally I'd say no, but there are some locations (particularly those linked to specific faiths) that should probably only be available to members of that faith.

Please share your views below:

Depends entirely on the location and who over see's that location. All such approval processes must comply with English and Welsh law.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The "Parents" bit needs to be relaxed a little, not all of us are lucky enough to have surviving parents. It's cruel to throw this in peoples faces on what should be one of the happier days of their lives. (From personal experience of having lost my mother at a young age, I know how painful this can be.)

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If people want their marriages recognized under English and Welsh law, they need to register their deceleration in either English, Welsh or both. Obviously support should be provided to those who don't understand either written English or Welsh, but for the final declaration to be legal, it needs to be made in one of the legally recognized native languages of this country.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Points 1, 2 and 3 I agree on.

Point 4. No. Just because a religion throws it's rattle out of the pram over a same sex marriage is not reasons to declare that marriage void. Someone within the very faith them selves obviously thought it didn't matter if they agree'd to marry the parties and that it's self is proof that a religions proscribing of same sex marriages may not be as hard and fast as some of those in positions of influence in said religion would like to claim.

The legality of someone's marriage should not rely on the metaphysical arguments over whether something is a sin or not. The only code of behavior which should impact on the lawfulness of anything are the civil and criminal laws of a given area.

I would say there is, it may not be a huge demand, but I'd be surprised if someone doesn't want to get officially married under English and Welsh law on the international dateline or Greenwich Meridian while they are outside of this countries actual borders. We, as a country, pretty much invented the latitude and longitude system, plus we have a very strong sea faring tradition. It seems a shame not to let Brits who want to get married to take full advantage of that if they wish.

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No, if people are required to go through all the bureaucracy for the sake of the Government, then the Government has to pay for it. It's not ethical to demand "you have to do this and you have to pay to do it" just so someone can access their natural human right to get married.

Consultation Question 76:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

No, again, stop charging other people for services you are forcing on them. if an employer requires you to travel to do your job, then expenses for that travel falls on your employer, and if your employer is the Government, then the expenses fall on the Government.

Stop trying to rip money out of people who have already paid for this service via their taxes. You're double dipping.

Consultation Question 77:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Let's get this right, we already pay for these services via our taxes and now you want us to pay again to actually use them?

No, stop double dipping, this is exactly why very few people trust or have any real faith in the government. All it's various departments seem to do is find excuses to rip money out of peoples pockets. That's not what the populace of this country actually pays you to do. Stop it.

Consultation Question 78:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It was already the local authorities responsibility to make sure such a location is safe and appropriate for public use, why are you asking for additional money to make sure a job that should have already been completed actually has been?

There's been a lot of text about the law and morality in this questionnaire, but now, at least when it comes to money, it turns out this service isn't at all ethical and loves it's double dipping. How do you expect anyone to respect your authority in such matters if at the same time they have this niggling suspicion you might be a load of double dipping stealth taxing thieves who charge people simply so they can get married? Such rank hypocrisy completely destroy's any moral authority you had in such matters.

Consultation Question 79:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only private establishments should be able to set fee's. if the location is linked to any governmental authority or any Religious one, then these costs should already have been factored in to the daily running costs of the location, they should not have been tacked on as a secondary thought. Such behavior is only raises the suspicion that the location wasn't being properly managed in the first place.

Consultation Question 80:

No

Please expand on your answer:

So what you're saying is Registration Officer's should be paid twice for their time. Where did this delusional idea come from? It's extortion. Presumably Registrar's already get paid to do their jobs, if they feel their pay isn't enough or that their expenses aren't being covered properly, that's something they should take up with their employer, the Government.

Consultation Question 81:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

As it stands at the moment, unless you fit into one or two very defined boxes the law does make it harder for people to become officially married. It's exactly the reason why I myself have never been officially married. From what I can see of these proposals they should make that easier without opening the system up to forced or sham marriages. And an increase in freedom in people's personal lives can only ever be a good thing.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

As far as I'm concerned the whole marriage business is designed to rip money out of people drunk on love. Personally I find the whole thing absolutely disgusting. The questionnaire brought up the question of dignity earlier. There is no dignity in such a cut throat business where service vendors primary concern seems to be how much money they can make. The moment anyone starts chasing money, they've lost their dignity.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Given the amount of questions asked about fee's I don't hold out any hope that these proposals will help anyone save any money. Where are the questions about capping and restricting people's ability to charge through the nose for the services they provide?

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

It's all disgusting, it lowers the question of whether two people get married down to "can you afford it or not?" And if the cost of something is the primary concern being forced on people, then the people forcing those concerns have completely missed the point of human relationships and should not be in the marriage business. Such people don't have any right to tell anyone how they choose to conduct their lives.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

It should benefit all of it, including unfortunately allowing mercenary business people to take advantage of those drunk on love. Where are the questions concerning limiting business concerns regarding such opportunities. The important steps people take in their lives are not opportunities to be exploited for profit.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I don't really know enough about this, except given the questions about fee's early, it would seem the current law does not receive the necessary financial support required from the Government to actually implement it fairly, which seems to me to be quite a serious failure on behalf of the Government.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It does seem to cut away half the red tape, which can only be a good thing I guess.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It does seem to make it more difficult then it really needs to be.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

it does seem to help ease some of the difficulties.

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I don't know enough about this to comment.

I don't know enough about this to comment.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

We all pay our taxes, and we pay them to cover costs like this. (Ie those generated by the state as it manages the systems we need to conduct our day to day lives) Most additional costs should be passed on to the Government to factor into the ongoing budgeting for this country. They should not be passed onto private individuals or organisations except in cases where said person or organisation is looking to enter into the marriage business in order to generate a profit for them selves.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

As a registrar, government guidelines have been too vague and created much confusion with the public and licensed venues, which means that we have had to deal with numerous queries that could have been avoided, particularly regarding face coverings.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Too great a risk of fraud.

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Fundamentally disagree with this. It's just creating a two-stage process. We might as well carry on with face to face appointments where we can check the documents properly.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

Remain at 28 days in order that any problems with immigration can be reported to the Home Office. It also better protects vulnerable people from bogus or forced marriages.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Why? This can be avoided if you remain with face to face interviews. This just makes the process more bureaucratic.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

No issues with this as long as GRO can come up with a robust and fraud proof system.

Consultation Question 9:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but only via the relevant Council website or GRO website and with assurance that the records cannot be hacked.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If a schedule is issued and a member of staff goes sick, is that schedule easily amended or does it become invalid? The couple could be provided with a list of eligible celebrants for the area and advised they could be served by any of them.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Banns should be abolished completely, with universal civil preliminaries to marriage in order that documents can be checked properly and that people are not trying to circumvent immigration rules. Banns are an even more outdated concept than the current Marriage Act.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Abolish Banns altogether and allow Register Offices to undertake all Notices of Marriage for all weddings in England and Wales.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

See before. Remove CofE powers in terms of wedding preliminaries.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

See previous comments. Register Offices offer a consistent legal process for preliminaries and have an overarching authority in GRO for advice and guidance.

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The reason for two officers is to provide back up for each other in the event of any future disputes from the public or complaints about whether the participants were there under duress or were not competent to understand the legal significance of the ceremony.

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only if the CofE retains it's privileged legal status. Otherwise we should go to universal civil preliminaries, like in France and then people can have whatever type of blessing in a church they like.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

However, it does not guarantee competence in terms of the legal conduct of a ceremony.

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This would allow anyone who even claimed to have some sort of belief system to conduct what would be a civil ceremony. The Registration Office have built up the expertise and knowledge of the law to conduct these weddings. This is more about commerce than anything else from these groups.

Please share your views below:

None

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It just opens the floodgates to anything.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Agreed. We should also look at the global behaviour of these groups, before allowing them to officiate at ceremonies in England and Wales.

Consultation Question 27:

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should be a legal declaration in the ceremony that the couple are free to marry in front of witnesses. In the event of an objection being made then there is no doubt over intention over any of the parties.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as fixed legal declarations are made in a consistent form of words. Or, adopt universal civil preliminaries.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No, it places the person officiating in a position of leading the couple in religious practice when they may not believe in it themselves.

Please share your views below:

No, keep the civil and religious weddings separate.

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, people should have one or the other.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There are issues of safety when it comes to people attending at a person's home or garden.

on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

Safety issues in terms of the bottom three. What if a Registrar attends a ceremony on a boat, which then doesn't take them back to shore after a ceremony?

Use local Register Offices to process the schedules into the RON system.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why propose such a weak process, especially the lack of witnesses? A future legal minefield there!

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 59:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

How does this protect society from bogus marriages?

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is adopting the old fashioned myth about 'common law' spouses. This will impact on inheritance laws and create many legal problems.

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

Given the problems with maritime travel during Covid, this really should be dropped anyway, but how do we guarantee that the wedding will be seen as valid by other countries if it takes place outside of a legal jurisdiction?

Consultation Question 74:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, if the person is in jail, but no if attending on medical grounds.

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

The cost of this should be waived if one party is terminally ill. It's embarrassing to ask for one party to pay a fee for something in an emergency like that.

Consultation Question 77:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but £50 does not cover the costs involved. The fee needs doubling at least.

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 80:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Councils should be left to set their own fees.

Consultation Question 81:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Councils to set their own fees on a commercial basis.

Consultation Question 82:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A set national charge should apply.

Consultation Question 83:

(2) there should be no fee.

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 84:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I don't think the proposals will increase the numbers at all, just widen the choice of venue. It will also create bureaucratic problems for Register Offices. GRO would also have to improve their speed of processing applications. For example, they take about 6 weeks to authorise corrections to register entries at the moment, yet charge a fee of up to £90.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1-4: The costs should be set by the local authorities based on their own geographical situations and travelling distances to venues.

5: Of course there has to be a legally recognised wedding. It creates more stability in society and forces people to look at their responsibilities. It provides protection to women and children otherwise irresponsible people can just walk away from things without financial consequence.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

What savings? It's a nonsense to even think there would be any.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

We are a Marquee Hire Company who specialise in the hiring Marquees for Weddings. Due to Covid-19 Government restrictions, the majority of our hires for weddings have been postponed or are in the process of being arranged until next year.

The process of rearrangement for the couples marrying and for ourselves has been extremely difficult mainly due to the Registered establishments availability; forcing some couples to delay further and arrange their wedding for 2022, (when their original booked date was in 2020).

We feel that the demand for weddings/Civil partnerships has now out met the supply of registered establishments. We supply marquees for receptions that are usually placed at family homes, or suitable spaces that are personal and have meaning to the couple.

We would like to see more flexibility to where couples can marry to increase availability moving forward.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

church buildings put people off, even if they wish some religious content. Neutral settings are often to make family more comfortable. It may not lead to more getting married, but offers more choice and less stress to those who do

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

2. these seem very expensive, as you have to buy a package
3. churches aren't expensive, but if a registrar is needed to attend that can more than double the cost. In my authority £90 for a weekday, £600 for a bank holiday .
5. sometimes cheaper to do with a religious service

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. cheap and cheerful and that's what some folks want
2. buying a package could be cheaper in the long run. Having just an officiant at a private home is cheaper
3. separate legally recognised wedding may not be cheaper, but may be what some folks want to do

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Resulting from increased regulations; marriage, civil partnership, same sex, we gave up our authorized person at church and now require a registrar to come in. Have had only 1 wedding since, as the cost of church and registrar is too expensive venues shouldn't need government "approval" but compliance with rules.

registration officers fees should be standardized religious officiants should be able to officiate anywhere

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

confusion on registration of officiants when same-sex came in. Separate authorization of not? Different opinions depending on who you spoke to.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

anything that is clear and transparent and easily accessible will be a benefit

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. residents should be able to be married anywhere in England and Wales
2. overseas jurisdictions - does that mean Commonwealth or any other countries? Less keen on that, as it seems harder to control and deal with paperwork freedom as more people are more mobile these days, also don't usually live in their home "church" where they might like to be married. Inconsistency with this from registrars. Why should you have to be married in the district where you live?

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

don't know it

I was unaware that banns could be published in any of those places for marriages in England and Wales. I have been previously advised by the Registrar that residents of Scotland were required to obtain a Common Licence for precisely this reason.

Consultation Question 14:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Since couples can marry in parishes where neither of them has ever lived (for example, if the Qualifying Connection is through their parents' or grandparents' wedding) banns could serve even less purpose in the wedding location than in the parishes where they actually live.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

It's my understanding that clergy are *already* required to check documentary evidence of ID, eligibility to marry in the desired place, and the formal ending of any previous marriage (Decree Absolute).
The requirement to meet each of the couple separately seems unnecessary, though clergy should already do that if they have any doubts about the couple.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

The documentary evidence required for granting a Common Licence is already sufficient to meet this criterion.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

In today's mobile society, banns have lost virtually all their original purpose. The community knowledge of people's affairs has all-but vanished. There are very few occasions on which the couple whose banns are being published are actually known to anyone in the congregation.

Any duly authorised officiant should be able to officiate at a ceremony with a valid schedule.

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Whilst the UK is a single nation, banns published within Scotland or Northern Island should be valid for an Anglican wedding in England or Wales.

Consultation Question 14:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Although this is now largely a redundant rule, it is worth leaving in the act in case it is required at some future date.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

It would be preferable for banns to authorise an Anglican wedding to continue as at present. If they are to be simplified, it ought to be that the banns are read in the parish of residence and not in the Church where the wedding is to take place.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

YES, clergy should have the power to call for documentary evidence and be required to check such evidence; and NO, clergy should not be required to meet with each of the couple separately before banns are published.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

I have no views on this matter.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

I am very happy with the current preliminaries required for a Church of England wedding. Banns of marriage enable us to build a better relationship with the couple and help to spot any potential sham marriages.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes provided that Anglican clergy are given the role of officiant in this context.

There are already enough extra people present at a wedding. I do not require someone else there to get in the way.

Consultation Question 74:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The schedule is the worst idea of all these marriage reforms and should be scrapped. Couples want to walk out of their ceremony with a fully registered and certified marriage.

However, if the schedule is to go ahead, there should be a good length of time for it to be returned so that a couple can enjoy their honeymoon without worrying about paperwork. In the case of Church weddings, the officiant could post the document to the registrar on the couples behalf.

would it not be better to detach identity and permission to marry from the religious aspect. regard banns as an internal matter for the church but authority to get married in a legal way to be given by the state

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

it is discriminatory that one bit of one faith group can operate legal marriages outwith the state system. the state should od the legal part and the faith group the religious whether that is banns or something else

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 20:

the united reformed church has offered local congregations the facility to register under the same-sex marriages act. this works well but there are places where the view of minister and church diverge and the capacity for ministers to be authorised to register marriages in other places would help this. we are not tied to buildings in the way some traditions are (although we have plenty of them) and the capacity to hold weddings in spaces where new communities are gathering (eg school halls ) would open up better relationships with new church groups. these proposals would remove from local congregations the increasingly difficult task of securing registers and certificates and sending quarterly returns (which although a small task feels onerous in buildings which have weddings infrequently)

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

There is little within the proposals that will equalise the situation for same sex couples. I would hope this is given further thought and the ability for same sex couples to marry in religious settings should be made easier whilst respecting religious conscious/requirements

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The proposals will open up options although could be used by many venues simply to increase revenue. I fear that religious organizations that may at times choose to wave certain fees will be unable to do so and poorer members of society will find it harder or prohibitive to get married on this basis.

wedding venues would lose money already been a tough year. Many would close impacting jobs and taxes. People will go to a venue for a party so makes sense to keep it under one umbrella as it is. I do think tech could be used to cut down on paperwork which would be a saving for government. House bound people should be allowed to marry at home

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Dear Sirs

I was unclear on how to submit my feed back but I have summarised my concerns below.

The scope of you review fails to account for three aspects of the impact of these changes landowners rights, social impact and environmental protection. I think failing to recognises these aspects will be very damaging.

With regard to land owners right opening up the location to be anywhere needs to be written in the context of landowners rights and protections.

It has be come very popular to get married on a beach. Unfortunately most coastal/beach land although privately owned has had protections removed by Coastal Margin Legislation over recent years. This legislation has the potential to further erode any protections. As an owner of some coastal land including a beach the land owners legal rights are generally not respected, impossible to enforce and the abuse of property including damage and environmental damage is widespread and the costs tend to fall on the landowner. The same aspects apply to agricultural/rural land.

The environmental damage fro these wedding events can also be substantial. I have given an example below.

The context of much of this land is that it has neither the access or facilities to support such events so parking can significantly obstruct residents going about their normal business there are inevitably not toilet or other facilities which can create substantial health problems. The filming of these events using drones is often an invasion of privacy overflying neighbouring properties.

Once a venue becomes known it becomes a popular attraction.

[REDACTED]

Recent behaviours over the summer have shown the lack of respect a substantial portion of the community have for sensitive coastal or rural environments leaving land owners with substantial clean up bills and damage to the environment.

Your proposal for open venues legitimises abuse of private land, and will have substantial social and environmental impacts. Remember many of these locations are insensitive environmental areas often with poorer communities who have to bear the costs of the significant mess left by these wedding parties.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

As a lesbian couple we were not legally allowed to get married in the Anglican church we both attend, so we arranged to be married legally by a celebrant in the Scottish Highlands. However we regard it as a real shame that we were not allowed to actually get married at our own local church, before God, before our church friends, and our families.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

No experience during this period.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why have that hurdle at all?

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

We gave notice by post and in-person interview (it was a bit expensive as it involved travelling to the Scottish Highlands from the Midlands twice in a week, but it was worth it).

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

If it was just three days, we would not have had to travel *twice* to the Scottish Highlands from the Midlands.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Personally I would be happy with this option, but I worry in situations where someone may be being co-erced to get married.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

I favour as much flexibility as possible.

Consultation Question 9:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I'm a bit concerned. Is that really necessary?

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, I like that flexibility.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nothing further to add.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems common-sense.

Please share your views below:

Yes, birth of a child, or grandchild, and other reasonable circumstances.

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't really understand this question. From my point of view, being lesbian, a couple should be allowed to be married in any church, and the restriction (if there has to be one) should be on the priest not the location.

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I have no opinion.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I don't really mind - let the couple decide?

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Why? If one person is good enough for other celebrants, why should the Anglican officiant require two?

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Again, one should be enough. The danger is a kind of intrusive cross-questioning by some priests. People should not have to justify themselves to a priest. The only relevant question is: would the marriage be legal? That can be discussed by a single face-to-face with one of the couple.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

The second would make the process more consistent.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Our officiant in Scotland was wonderful.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why not religious ones too?

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nothing further to say.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, subject to training and external audit.

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think the couple should be able to choose.

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think that's too restrictive. There needn't be a belief system of any kind.

Please share your views below:

Any officiant should be qualified and subject to civil audit and authorisation. Beyond that, the only exception might be proscribed organisations.

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A belief system should not be mandatory.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Who defines 'public morality'?

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Each individual should be trained, qualified for the task, and audited.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think this is good - for consistency of process.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I just think that anyone should be considered, and assessed for practice.

Consultation Question 30:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't like the whole 'nominating' aspect. What does "fit and proper" mean? Anti-gay weddings?

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, this is exactly the process that should be followed, and it should be applied to ministers of religion etc too. They should have to be passed via the same process, rather than parachuted in direct by a religious organisation, which may discriminate in its treatment of LGBT people, as for example the Church of England does at present. If a member of the Church of England is gay or lesbian, for example, they should be allowed to be married in their home church by an independently qualified member of the Church of England, presiding over the wedding in place of the local priest. If that had been possible, we would undoubtedly have been legally married in our home church (which would have been fine with our particular congregation), instead of travelling to the Scottish Highlands where we knew a celebrant who could personalise our wedding. In short **everyone** should have to undergo the same mandatory training and CPD, in one process, consistent for all.

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That is plain and obvious.

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

There should be some flexibility to cover agreed costs, but there should be a ceiling for the basic fee for the execution of the marriage.

Consultation Question 34:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No view on this.

Consultation Question 35:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I mostly feel 'Yes' but who gets to define 'solemnity'? If people want comedy and fun in their marriage service, that should be fine, as long as there is also a recognition that the marriage commitment is serious and has real legal commitments involved. It should not be for government to define the tone of people's weddings, and if they want hilarity as an expression of celebration, that should be fine.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Sort of. But this should not limit varieties of expression, tone, humour, seriousness - providing there is a recognition by all parties that they are making a serious and responsible legal commitment. We should not be 'tone policing' people's weddings, so any guidance by the GTO should focus on the bare necessities needed to carry out the technicalities of the marriage, rather than restrictions on how a wedding is conducted.

Consultation Question 37:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No. In that case, a religious officiant who reflected institutional prejudices on LGBT people might be allowed to practice in a way that would not be sanctioned by civil authorities. The power to officiate, and the need to be subject to audit or complaint, should be administered by the civil authority.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, this is important.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, totally.

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I only agree if there are periodic audits and continuing CPD, and those should be carried out by the civil authority, not by a 'nominating' institution.

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely. Societal needs and values change and evolve, and it seems obvious that CPD should be mandatory for all officiants. That should apply whether the officiant is 'independent' or 'nominated'.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think point 4 requires greater clarity. Otherwise I agree.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, people should be able to design their own weddings, with the state only requiring limited but essential legal components.

Consultation Question 44:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I do not entirely agree. As a lesbian couple, and bona fide members of our local Anglican church, I believe we should have the right to be married in our church, by an independent officiant if we choose, and in a service that does not impose more than the essential components for marriage applicable to civil equivalents. In short, while priests may be required by the institution only to marry certain people, if their location (the parish church) is a place where non-LGBT people are married, that location should be available for LGBT people as well, even if the couple have to find an officiant from a different Anglican province or an independent officiant. The Church of England should not be allowed to operate a 'chokehold' on who may or may not be married on their premises. It should be down to local priests to exercise choice as to whether they are celebrants themselves, but access for weddings should not be closed off for LGBT couples.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Just because a ceremony is 'civil' does not mean the participants can't express religious convictions important and precious to them.

Please share your views below:

Prayers should be allowed, as one example.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No view on this.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If people want an entirely private and intimate wedding service, they should be allowed to have one.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Anywhere = at any venue designated for weddings, and any other venue, indoors or outdoors where the participants have permission to gather for this purpose.

Please share your views below:

Why does it matter where a wedding takes place, providing it is executed with proper legal intent and authority? Open air weddings can be really beautiful. Marriage in a private home can be intimate and personal. What matters is that any such marriage is preceded by a check that the marriage is consensual for both individuals, and that check should be carried out by the civil authority.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but obviously there should be an assumption that attempts will be made to get the permission of a landowner or farmer, especially if such a service might interfere with the way that land was being used.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

By answering 'No', to be clear, I mean that NONE of these should be prohibited.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, that seems fair, but the couple should then have the option of finding a different officiant.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

'Yes' to the 'safe' bit - definitely.

But who is to define whether a location is 'dignified' and what does that even mean? It's subjective.

The officiant should have the right to choose not to carry out a wedding if they do not wish to, in which case the couple should be allowed to seek out a different officiant.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sort of. I still worry about the subjective aspect of what constitutes 'dignified'. Some advice and guidelines might help, with examples, but I don't think they should be binding.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That makes sense.

Please share your views below:

A local registrar should be able to receive applications, check them out, and add them to a list. However, this should in no way mean locations NOT on the list are not permitted.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, providing the parental part is not mandatory.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think that's obvious.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Use technology to make life convenient, but the systems must be failsafe and secure.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

No

Please expand on your answer:

In points 3 and 4, I would say 'either' party, rather than 'both'.

In 4, the 'opt in' or 'opt out' in relationship to LGBT couples should only apply to the right of an officiant to 'opt out' of marrying such a couple, but should not apply to any location.

At any location where straight couples can be married, LGBT couples should be able to be married too. Their marriages are legally recognised simply as marriages - regardless of gender - and there should be no discrimination in the UK. However, the religious consciences of individual priests should be respected: they should have the right to 'opt out' of officiating, but in that event, if the LGBT couple employ a different officiant, they should be permitted access to any location used for other weddings.

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think there may be a case for a follow-up procedure to legalise any shortfall in the original schedule, but I do not think the requirements for witnesses and signatures should just be ignored.

Consultation Question 58:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Again, I would say that if *either* party (not *both*) contravenes requirements then there should be suspension/invalidation until such time as that can be corrected.

On the LGBT issue, I do not at all believe that any 'religious governing authority' should be allowed to require an 'opt in'. A marriage is a marriage. The issue is whether specific officiating individuals wish to exercise a right of 'opt out' on conscientious grounds from officiating at the ceremony itself. In that event, the same sex couple should be allowed to request a different officiant to celebrate the service. The restrictions should only apply to individuals' right of conscience, not to locations.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I don't find this question very clear, and I don't see how the cohabitation issue is relevant in any way.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I believe that long-term cohabitants should have the same legal rights to things like pensions etc as officially married people. However, a process should exist so that, if they wish, at a later date, they can confirm that their relationship has marital status. That choice should be theirs, but a process should be available to them.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is tricky I think. Probably each case should be assessed on its own merits and evidence, but I recognise that the longer this goes without such a petition, the harder it may be to discern the original intentions and consent. I tend to prefer abolishing the time limit, out of fear for people who may have been socially coerced into marriage. People can take time to find their courage and voice to complain.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely.

I do not wish to offer input to this question.

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In a situation such as Covid-19 lockdown, I agree.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sensible, to keep things consistent for all.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not wish to offer input to this question.

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That seems fine. Location should be a couple's choice. The legalities are important. Just because you get married on a boat should not make it any less legal.

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I like this idea. I think there needs to be further careful consideration of the detail though.

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

I do not think the type of vessel matters. The officiant must be qualified and registered. The wedding itself must meet all the general legal requirements. Otherwise, it seems fine, and the choice should belong to the couple and an officiant willing and qualified to see that everything is executed legally.

Consultation Question 71:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I can't see why the name of the officiant should not be required. One pre-supposes reasonable advance planning, at which point an officiant should be identified (although I can see a case for a substitute officiant to be used, if the named officiant is unable to take the service for justifiable reasons).

Consultation Question 72:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as the officiant is trained and registered, that all seems fine.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The same rules should apply to ALL officiants, and ALL officiants should be periodically audited, and required to undertake update CPD.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think the answer is 'Yes' but what about 'nominated' officiants of religious organisations? Basically, I believe the key thing is that the officiant is qualified, on a civil register (which I think priests should be too), and adheres to all requirements to make the marriage legal.

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

I have no idea if there is a demand, but I see no reason why ANY officiant should not be permitted to officiate, if they are qualified and registered by civil authority.

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree that any time limit should commence when the couple return to the UK, but that using technology some kind of confirmatory process should be necessary if, for example, the couple do not propose to return to the UK within, say, a year.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No - a person should not be penalised for being housebound. Any costs incurred should be paid for out of the public purse.

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

I believe the extra cost should be 'zero'. A person should not be financially penalised for being ill. Any costs involved should be paid for out of the public purse.

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think it is important that new freedoms in wedding law do not lead to the ending of this valued provision.

Consultation Question 78:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think there should be a charge for this. It should be part of a registration officer's remit.

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but I suggest there should be a ceiling to what can be charged, and it should be a very modest sum.

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with this.

Consultation Question 81:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That seems reasonable.

Consultation Question 82:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Personally, I believe there should be 'zero' fees, beyond standard registry office marriage fees, when a person is housebound. Why should they be penalised if they are unable to leave home because of medical condition? Any extra costs incurred should be paid for by the state.

Consultation Question 83:

(2) there should be no fee.

Please expand on your answer:

I'm not entirely clear what this question is saying - but I think there should only be the standard fee that would be charged if the couple were able to be married in the registry office. There should be no additional fee for the registrar travelling etc. The state should cover any additional costs. Otherwise the terminally-ill person is being financially discriminated against. That would be invidious.

Consultation Question 84:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I wish to offer no input on this question.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

We are a lesbian couple and bona fide members of our local Anglican church. Our priest believes in the legitimacy of lesbian marriage, but is prevented by law from marrying us. The PCC (local church governing body) supports and affirms our right to be married. The local church congregation itself is affirming and supportive and the church belongs to the Inclusive Church movement.

I feel your proposed provisions may not go far enough, as they do not seem to raise the possibility of LGBT people being married in Anglican churches, or the argument that religious organisations may protect the consciences of (some of) their priests, but should not be able to bar LGBT couples from marriage in churches where straight couples can marry, if an alternative officiant can be found. Marriage is marriage. That is a nationwide legal recognition. Restrictions against same sex marriage should apply (if at all) only to Anglican priests, but not to the use of locations. LGBT people should have equal access to all locations.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think the key thing is cost. I believe the state should provide a basic service that is as cheap as possible, to encourage couples to marry if they wish to.

However, if a couple want bells and whistles, then I think they take that choice, and need to be willing to pay for the extra things.

Current laws fall short, not because of existing costs, but because of restrictions on choice, variety of location, and expression.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

In the end, because our priest (though willing to marry us) was not able to legally marry us, we made the decision, as a lesbian couple, to travel to the Scottish Highlands, where an inter-faith celebrant married us in Glencoe in a traditional Highland handfast wedding. The location was fantastic, surrounded by stunning natural scenery. The service was both intimate and deeply moving. The celebrant was outstanding ( [REDACTED] ).

I think Scotland's provisions are far less restrictive than England's and it is time for change. I believe weddings should be able to be held indoors or outdoors, and at locations that have never been used before. This enhances marriage. It makes it extra special to the people involved. It also opens up possibilities for the services to be designed by participants and celebrant together, in ways that are deeply personal and meaningful to the individuals. I commend many of the changes proposed in this consultation.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

To encourage marriage, as an individual choice and as an institution, it is important that basic costs should be as low as possible. That is pretty obvious. Should local officers be required to officiate at dispersed locations? Personally I believe the network of officiants should be expanded, and training/ongoing audit/CPD expanded, to address what I foresee to be a significant increase in requests for marriages outdoors and in many locations never used before. But I believe the changes would be worth it.

As a Registrar-Celebrant, I find that weddings are very restricted, but that's inevitable with the hotpotch system we have at the moment. People are either postponing their wedding or having a tiny restricted wedding so that they are legally protected, and perhaps they will have their big celebration at some future post-pandemic date.

It would be a lot simpler if we had the system they have in France, where ALL marriages are required to have a small legal ceremony in their Town Hall, and then are free to go on to have whatever ceremony they want: in a church, on a beach, with pagan rites, whatever. It would be far easier, more flexible to all tastes and religions and less costly to administer. It would work better in a pandemic, because the legal part would be discrete, is more amenable to the addition of technology for social distancing, and keeps legal documents secure. The celebratory part is completely separated and can be conducted wherever and whenever it is allowed to take place, according to the wishes of the couple and current requirements of their location.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

I understood that the 28 day period was to help the Home Office step in to stop sham marriages. If there are other ways of dealing with this, then seven days seems adequate.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

That would be helpful for pandemic situations. But how would these concerns arise unless you see the person in person. You get a lot more information about someone from a personal interview than you do on a screen, and you can also guarantee that they are alone in the room with you and not under pressure from someone off-screen.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

If it's online, why not.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That is the original purpose of notices of marriage. Is it still necessary?

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

People plan to marry and then something goes wrong - illness, accident. It seems pointless to have to go through the whole notice of marriage again just because the wedding had to be postponed by a few months.

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This seems like make-work.

The schedule is issued and is valid a year in advance. It would not be possible to know who was going to officiate so long in advance, so most schedules would have to be re-issued, probably more than once.

If the officiant's name is wanted, why not handwrite it in on the day of the ceremony, as the witnesses' names are handwritten, then no need to re-issue schedule for last minute change.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Or don't name the officiant in the schedule - just handwrite the name in. Like you do the witnesses.

Please share your views below:

Yes - make it possible so that last minute illness doesn't mess up everyone's day. Ideally don't include the officiant's name on the schedule but leave a space for it to be written in as the witnesses' names are. Make it flexible and don't put in unnecessary barriers.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely. Everyone should be required to give notice of marriage. The vicars would thank you for it.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Do away with banns and require notice of marriage for everyone. If the church wants to announce banns at its services, fine, but detach this from the legal administrative notice of marriage which is ascertaining if a couple is legally allowed to marry. The latter should be handled by trained staff in register offices. Ideally, use the French system of having the legal marriage take place as a civil ceremony, then the church is freed to undertake marriage according to its own rites and ceremonies, free of the legal administrative burden.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

If all couples are required to give notice of marriage, this will be done by the registration service. More secure and puts the job of checking documents where it should be: with trained staff, not clergy. Better still, have the French system where the entire legal marriage is undertaken as a precursor to the church marriage. Keep legal matters in legal hands, keep religious matters in religious hands.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Separate does mean that each can feel free to speak, and keeps out those who might pressure the individuals.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

Keep legal matters in legal hands, keep religious matters in religious hands. Ideally, make a legal civil marriage a preliminary to a church marriage. But if that is not acceptable, then all church marriages should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As they do at the present time? No change there?

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If there is a schedule, there is no need for more than one registration officer.

Consultation Question 22:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No, because ideally not only legal preliminaries but also the legal ceremony should be conducted by trained staff at registration offices. This frees clergy from the legal administrative burden and frees registration staff from the task of repairing the mistakes that are frequently made by clergy who do not conduct weddings frequently and therefore get it wrong. Legal matters are too important to be left to people whose main business is not legal administration. Legal weddings should be civil as the law is civil. Once the legal marriage is done, religions and humanists can have freedom to do whatever they and the couple want as a marriage ceremony, unconstrained by civil law.

Consultation Question 23:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

yes if they must. It makes it unnecessarily complicated and it would be far better for all legal marriages to be civil marriages, as a preliminary to a church or other style of marriage.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If you must, but why not just have civil legal weddings as a preliminary to any other sort of wedding.

This definition includes Pagans - and why not? It's a belief system.

Please share your views below:

It would be SO MUCH SIMPLER to just have civil legal weddings as a preliminary to any other sort of wedding and then you wouldn't have to name a long string of constantly changing belief organisations as not qualifying.
The Church of the Flying Spaghetti Monster? But why not? They meet and have views. It's a can of worms.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The Church of the Flying Spaghetti Monster and others can meet these criteria, I'm sure.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes - if churches and other organisations are holding legal ceremonies they must comply with the civil law of the land.

However, that might be challenged by evangelical Christians and other religions who promote discriminatory practices against eg homosexuals and transsexuals. How about Catholic Church which promotes anti-contraception and anti-abortion. Can of worms again.

If, however, the legal wedding had taken place as a civil ceremony, you need not trouble yourself with the purposes of the belief organisation at all, and the church could be as bigoted as it wished within its own walls among consenting adults.

Consultation Question 27:

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Horrible job, but it has to be kept control of. Marriage is a legal contract and needs supervision by a civil legal institution.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If they are carrying out legal ceremonies they need to be authorised.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The Registration Service should have a veto if they turn out to be unfit and improper. There are clergymen who by civil law are unfit and improper, yet still carrying out wedding ceremonies and are protected by their institution.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the clergy are to continue undertaking this task, they need proper training which they do not at present receive.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A legal marriage is a legal undertaking and should be undertaken soberly. However, there can be humour, and costume and personal touches. I hope that the law about having no food and drink partaken in the room for two hours before is dropped. It is unhelpful and unnecessary.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

So much simpler to have the Registration Service exclusively conduct the legal wedding as a secular preliminary, as they do in France, and to let the various institutions do whatever they want for their own weddings rather than try to control and legislate for untold variety.

Consultation Question 37:

So you have a legal marriage system and then you allow 3 bodies to operate outside it? How about other forms of law?

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Music is the main request. At civil ceremonies couples often want to play music that was written for religious purposes, and at present we are not allowed to. This is silly and change would be welcomed. It is artificial to tell someone that they can't play "Jesu Joy of Man's Desiring" or have "Ave Maria" sung.

Most poems and readings are already allowed with incidental references to a god, but sometimes registrars get confused and don't allow them. Remove the restriction and make it simple - let the couple have whatever they want. It's still a civil ceremony.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No! There are sometimes people who want a religious ceremony but cannot do so in a church for some reason. Then it is just fine for the civil ceremony to happen, the registrars to leave, and the pagan/Jewish/Catholic/whatever ceremony to begin.

Why would they be forbidden to do so?

In practice it doesn't happen, because of outside noise etc. Pointless.

Please share your views below:

If the legality resides in the officiant, not the location, sounds good. Flexible.

People could then hold their wedding in their own garden if they liked.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

If the legality resides in the officiant, the religion should also reside in the people rather than the place. If you introduced this you would have silly situations:

A church which can be hired as a venue for a party/keep fit class/concert may not be hired for a civil wedding ceremony (!) (So you have to stand in the rain for the ceremony but are allowed indoors for the reception?)

People are allowed to have a religious or non-religious ceremony anywhere outdoors but once under a roof only a religious ceremony is allowed in a religious venue and only a non-religious ceremony in a non-religious venue? So we couldn't hold a religious ceremony in a town hall? You are making unnecessary complications here.

It is up to those who administer the building to decide what may go on in there. If the local church is out of action for some reason, would it be ok to hold the ceremony in the local Hindu temple, but not in the town hall? Please drop this one.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I do not have any evidence of this. Through hearsay I understand that there are people who are delaying getting married because they cannot have their mother's name on the marriage register and certificate. I also understand that there are people who want a humanist marriage or an outdoor marriage who are waiting for the law to be changed. I should not think that the numbers are great in either case. I do not expect the change of law to increase the number of people being legally married.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

In the total costs of a wedding, the cost of having a separate, legally recognised wedding is very little. Many people choose to do this: have a small legal ceremony at a register office and then have their big ceremony in a field, or a foreign country - much easier to arrange than getting permission for a legal marriage in a foreign country.

The easiest way to solve so many of these questions, simply, would be to use the French system where everyone is required to have a small legally recognised wedding at the registration office after the preliminary checking. It need cost little more than the notice of marriage does. They are then free to hold their big special (non-legal) wedding ceremony, entirely to their own taste and beliefs, in whatever building or non-building they want, with no need for regulation at all. The schedule and the responsibility for the legality is entirely within the Registration Service which can operate far more efficiently than by being responsible for outcomes by officiants they have no control over. No officiants have to be sanctioned/controlled/supervised/. No beliefs have to be approved as warranting their own officiant. It would save so much cost and useless administration.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

A separate, legally recognised wedding as a preliminary is by far the best way to make savings at the same time as opening up locations for marriage that are as yet undreamed of. Vicars would welcome not having to get involved with legal paperwork and just concentrate on their religious rites. But I expect that the Anglican Church is reluctant to give up its power, and we are going to have to labour under this inefficient sprawling system way beyond my lifetime.

It must be depressing to be a civil servant trying to square these circles while having the easiest solution forbidden.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

It is time consuming and costly to send registrars out to approved venues as they do at present. Local councils push the prices of registrar services up far higher than cost in order to cross-subsidise other council budgets which are being squeezed. Weddings are seen as a cash cow. Far more weddings could be conducted, much less expensively, as a small ceremony in the Register office, with a nationally-agreed low fee, as a preliminary to a big non-legal wedding. The couple could then have their big non-legal wedding in the venue of their choice, conducted by the officiant of their choice, and all these rules and regulations would be unnecessary.

The system proposed, where the Registration Service tries to maintain legal standards at a distance while thousands of officiants operate them is administratively unwieldy and therefore expensive and legally much less safe.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Weddings not regulated by government and not requiring registrars would free up the system and make it less costly. This can be done simply by requiring ALL legal marriages to take place as a brief small ceremony in a register office, for a small low fee, after which the couple can have their ceremony wherever they want by whomever they want unfettered by regulations. It separates the legal necessities from the main show. At the moment the two are entangled and this new scheme does nothing to reduce the tangle but spreads it over a wider and even less manageable area, which will require administration and training and will be very expensive to run.

It is time consuming and costly to send registrars out to approved venues as at present. Local councils who run the registration services push the prices of registrar services up far higher than cost in order to cross-subsidise other council budgets which are being squeezed. Weddings are seen as a cash cow. This needs change.

However, spreading the registration job across thousands of people who are not employed by the registration service does nothing to streamline the task. Separate the legal preliminaries and the legal ceremony from the main ceremony and control the cost of the legal service. Registrars should carry out the legal work only. Celebrants who conduct weddings are different people and the registration service need have no connection with them at all, or with wedding ceremonies, which can be meaningful in so many ways but need not be legal procedures.

The easiest way to get married in another jurisdiction is to have a small legal ceremony in your local register office in UK and then travel to the other jurisdiction for the big non-legal "celebratory" ceremony. People often do this because it is far easier than going through the various permissions needed in both jurisdictions. People often ask for non-legal "celebratory" ceremonies, having got married legally in another country but wanting to hold a "marriage" ceremony in UK as well. Most people are not aware that it is not a legal ceremony.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I don't see how this would make it easier. Get married locally in a register office and have a big celebratory ceremony wherever you want.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

This new scheme is going to cost government and local authorities a great deal to (attempt to) control, when they could merely conduct the legal requirements in an office and relinquish control of the celebratory ceremonial part.

Religious and non-religious organisations and independent officiants would be a lot freer without the Registration Service breathing down their necks. Complying with the legal requirements will be costly.

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

I feel that seven days is a very short period of time, unless interviews are able to be conducted on any day of the week, if not 14 days seems to me to be a more reasonable period of time during which to complete formalities.

The only exception to this should be marriages that are held where one of the parties involved is seriously or terminally ill, or there are exceptional circumstances such as close family members who wish to attend but are themselves terminally ill

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Although in principle a remotely conducted interview seems to be a natural progression included within greater reliance on the Internet, I believe that due care should be taken and the possibility of an in person interview needs to be retained with regard to sham or forced marriages.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

This seems to be perfectly acceptable and I can see no reason for making an alteration to this policy.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Once officiant pass their normal retirement date it is my view that they should be monitored every two years to ensure that they are still physically and mentally able to deliver a ceremony to the required standard. This view stems from having worked as a registrar with several colleagues who were over the age of 70 and had become less mobile and we are sometimes out of touch with the demands and requests of modern couples.

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The recent public health crisis as a result of Covid 19 has decimated weddings. Without changes to the current legislation I cannot see how couples are going to be able to plan a wedding without more flexibility on time date and place. With a limited number of venues licensed for civil ceremonies there is little space in 2021 for these couples to roll their wedding arrangement forward. Many of these weddings could have taken place remotely if couples had been allowed and willing.

Please expand on your answer:

There should be no fee for those who are housebound as a result of illness otherwise yes really

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

We should not be making financial gain out of people who are unwell or terminally ill

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would appear to be as the situation is now but presently the fees are too variable between local authorities and need to be standardised

Consultation Question 78:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I believe that people have an impression of how expensive it can be to get married legally children and where the process to be simplified and the choice wide and they would probably be an increase in the number of couples choosing to marry.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

People require flexibility and choice. Therefore a legal ceremony which could be held within an office at minimal cost to ensure that the legal marriage contract is fulfilled is the best way forward. This would therefore open up the chance of having ceremonies at venues of their own choice, it would give people control over the cost of weddings especially if they are using outside providers such as venues and caterers, currently the wedding market is a very high charging sector and where couples are selecting some of the licensed venues to hold weddings the charges incurred can be quite substantial and are beyond the average budget.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Although I have no specific examples or evidence to share cost reduction and increase enjoys should be key in any proposed change the legislation

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

There is currently a one-off charge applicable to register a venue as an approved and licensed premises . If this were reduced more smaller venues and a greater variety of environments would perhaps choose to offer this well.

Currently they are losing out on the potential enjoyed by those who have chosen to register.

Extending the number of premises at which a wedding can take place would, by very nature, mean that far greater numbers of station offices or assistance would be required. It would therefore be essential that the role of conducting a legal wedding ceremony would have to be extended to include other suitable professional individuals.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

As a result of the last six months, many hospitality venues have been enormously hit by both lockdown and the continuing COVID-19 pandemic.

There are many people who were intending to marry who have yet to make plans for a re-organised ceremony and venue.

Offering people more of a choice would not only support these businesses but also enable people to hold their ceremonies at a time of year to suit them for example.

I have heard of many couples who is weddings were cancelled at the height of the wedding season in 2020 2 when approaching the venue for a similar date in 2021 have been disappointed because many couples choose to plan up to 2 years ahead and most summer dates for 2021 at key registered venues have already been booked.

Being able to look at other venues and make different plans would not only enable people who are still waiting to marry but also those who are considering marriage but do not want to wait A long period.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

My experience as a registrar showed me that local authorities were making a great deal of money out of registration services, in particular weddings, and yet the hourly remuneration paid to registrars in no way reflected this. This is why I left the registration service and opted to offer couples additional ceremonies designed around their needs and preferences.

However in the county in which I was working should they wish to get married at the local register office on a Saturday afternoon in the summer, even with just six people attending that ceremony, the fee for this is almost £400 which I regard as being an excessive amount.

Currently appointments can be extremely difficult to acquire if you do not book far in advance.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Undoubtedly there will be less administration required but on the downside there will be less of an income as a time when local authorities are needing to find additional ways of increasing revenue to cover other areas of need.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

This is an area which requires greater central control especially when people are opting to travel to England and Wales to get married from another area or indeed another country.

It is not an area where corners should be cut.

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I believe that marriages will increase as couples will be able to have their wedding in the location that means the most to them that is different from the current options. There are many couple who currently have a small registry office wedding followed by a larger celebrant led ceremony at a later date. It would mean that the couples would now be officially married at the larger event.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I don't think the current law discourages or prevents couples from getting married. Marriage is a solemn vow, so it should not be trivialised.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

We wanted an informal but legally binding ceremony, so opted to get married by a waterfall - something we couldn't do in this country, so got married in Iceland where their marriage laws allow for weddings anywhere, not just indoors or within a structure.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

N/A, thankfully we got married last October

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In order to get married in Iceland they had similar timescales but were less strict about this advising we could visit their office on the morning of the wedding if we liked (of course we did it by the book, but nice of them to offer and be flexible)

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Anything to make the process easier, whyever not?

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

Regards to notice of marriage period, if these go online, I think seven days could be sufficient.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Yes, I think remote interviews are a great way of working and agree that at times it may be necessary to invite applicants to in-person interviews if they have concerns.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, I think it should be made as easy and accessible as possible.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I was baffled as to why our marriage notice was displayed in a Council building in town we have no connection to in the north of our county - who's going to see it to object to it?

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In light of the Coronavirus pandemic and weddings being postponed at short notice, I think this would be most welcome.

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think the officiant needs to be named. As long as the ceremony is officiated by a qualified officiant, is it really necessary to specify prior to the ceremony - what if they're sick and the substitute needs to self-isolate? More unnecessary paperwork.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I don't think the officiant needs to be named. As long as the ceremony is officiated by a qualified officiant, is it really necessary to specify prior to the ceremony - what if they're sick and the substitute needs to self-isolate? More unnecessary paperwork

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Our marriage notice in England was acceptable in Iceland - why not accept marriage notices from other countries, especially from countries within our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland?

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If the bann is illegible, yes. If legible, no.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I think the banns ought to be published where the bride or groom usually reside - so people who know them are given notice.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

1. If this has already been completed by the registry office, no. However for purpose of checking identification, yes. 2. Yes.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

Civil preliminaries will be conducted by properly trained persons who are able to spot sham or forced marriages.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Officiant should gain consent, ensure requirements met and documents signed.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think it should be made easier for more people to officiate at different kinds of weddings in order to cover the workload in case of pandemic and shortages of staff for church weddings

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Registration officers are trained to do all aspects of the role and should be able to manage single-handed once trained

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I hope this would allow them to cross over and perform civil ceremonies if possible?

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I believe some officiants are self-employed - I would like to see it possible for the bride & groom to nominate their own suitably qualified officiant

Consultation Question 24:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not religious so don't know

Please share your views below:

.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think whatever people's beliefs, it should be made as easy as possible to marry.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes, if found to be conducting sham or forced marriages.

Consultation Question 27:

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, should be adult and well-trained

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think officiants should be able to officiate at any kind of service. If they have knowledge and respectful of beliefs, why not officiate both kinds?

Consultation Question 35:

No

Please expand on your answer:

While I agree they 'should', I feel that the private lives of officiants is their own business.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think this would be helpful to have officiants all 'singing from the same hymn sheet'

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If that organisation is nominating the officiant, they should be responsible for ensuring they are fit & proper and should be able to de-authorise the officiant

.

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree should not be required to express that there is no impediment to their marrying each other as this is addressed during the preliminaries

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree there should be no special rules except where religious groups impose their own.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree - say the couple themselves are not religious but they wish to honour a cherished, possibly older family member by singing their favourite hymn - whyever not?

Please share your views below:

Music & hymns, symbols - some religious symbols can be interpreted by different people in many different ways.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure what this means.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A wedding should be a private event.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

We got married in front of a waterfall in Iceland but wouldn't it be great to be wed in the beautiful English countryside?

Please share your views below:

So long as the required people can attend/witness safely.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I believe weddings should be a private event for friends and family only - I don't see why they should be publicly accessible.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

I don't believe the law should prohibit any type of wedding in any type of venue.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed.

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed, it should be safe and dignified.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Please share your views below:

Business locations to register with General Register Office. Locations not part of a business not pre-approved but can be agreed by the officiant if deemed safe and dignified.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I believe all of these should be optional - parties may not wish to have any parent listed

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Our Icelandic marriage certificate was available in Icelandic only or English only. Even if they didn't offer it to us in English, we could always have it translated, as could Welsh speakers if they chose to have Welsh-only and needed it translating later.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree we should reduce paper-based registration and go paperless to reduce paper record storage and reduce the need for office-based working, particularly in light of the pandemic and requiring to work from home more.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Mistakes happen and witnesses may be unintentionally absent (my dad got lost on his way to our waterfall wedding). In Icelandic preliminaries, our witnesses signed our marriage notice and were not required to attend the ceremony (they did of course, but they didn't need to).

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not all couples cohabit.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I didn't realise there was a presumption that a couple is married if they have cohabited for a long period of time and are believed to be married by friends and family.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consent is gained prior to ceremony taking place.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed. For a person to purport to be an officiant and mislead the couple about their status rendering the ceremony potentially void should be an offence and the person misleading the couple should be fined the total cost of the ceremony.

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

I have no experience with this but understand that persons who lack mental capacity would be required to have a mental capacity assessment and best interests decision made based on their current understanding and previously documented wishes. Of course, where persons are detained or are in hospital and it is possible to safely facilitate a wedding ceremony this should be accommodated where possible.

Consultation Question 63:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I propose that parties with a terminal illness should be required to give a shorter period of notice, accompanied by a doctor's letter confirming terminal diagnosis & prognosis/Fast Track/End of Life paperwork.

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This sounds more streamlined and less complex?

Consultation Question 65:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed. As parties with a terminal illness could become too unwell to marry on a particular date and this could be postponed on multiple occasions, this is a great solution.

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Where parties are detained or housebound, this could cause delays for example, if the prison or hospital is understaffed and unable to safely facilitate the wedding ceremony it may need to be postponed, this is also a great solution.

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In light of the coronavirus pandemic, this is a fantastic solution.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I love these proposals!! Most definitely, yes! This would have benefited many couples who had their weddings cancelled during the coronavirus pandemic. I hope these proposals can be implemented soon!

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agreed.

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

How great would it be to get married on a yacht off the English coast?! Yes please!

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

How amazing?! Yes.

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

Yes, any.

Consultation Question 71:

No

Please expand on your answer:

What if the ship breaks down? What if they miss the ship and have to catch the next boat?

Consultation Question 72:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I additionally propose that independent officiants may also officiate with the desk officers or authorised ship's crew as an additional witness if the couple wishes to appoint their own officiant (a qualified and registered friend, for example).

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Other

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

I am certain there would be demand for non-religious cruise ship weddings en route to exotic destinations - if this was an option when we got married, we would have most definitely considered it!

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

Should be compassionate for terminally ill.

Consultation Question 83:

(1) the fee should be set by regulation at a level below cost-recovery; or

Please expand on your answer:

I think it is expected that whether terminally ill or not there would be a fee, however a below cost would be appropriate and compassionate.

Consultation Question 84:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I am unsure that the current law discourages or prevents couples from getting married - except in the circumstance of persons detained in prison or hospital or are terminally ill.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I believe that in the current situation, that the cheapest way to marry is usually at a registry office is off-putting. Couples may put-off getting married until they can afford a wedding they feel is acceptable to their family and peers. Under these proposals weddings could in theory become cheaper as they could legally take place in couple's own homes and gardens, for example.

The current law impacts on both residents of England and Wales; and on overseas couples wishing to have a destination wedding in England and Wales; because the current law is too restrictive and unaccommodating. Both would rather marry somewhere other than England and Wales - as we did in Iceland.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is a public act of making a contract. to be in the presence of witnesses known to the individuals involved in making that contract. To 'run away' to an area where they are not known decreases the value of the public contract.

In addition, it significantly increases the risk of one of the two people involved being made to take part against their own wish or a person who needs protection being seduced into the contract away from family or friends who can advise them to wait.

Marriage is PUBLIC and requires the involvement of a relevant network ( family, friends, etc. ). It is vital it takes place in the home area of one of the couple, traditionally the Bride. I am actually quite shocked to read it only needs to be 7 days residency.

Consultation Question 5:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage Preparation should become part of the recommended route to marriage; the interview should be with both parties. The means of initial contact should, however, be able to include modern methods

Consultation Question 6:

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 11:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This would be good if the named officiant was then going to worm with the couple to prepare them for marriage.

Consultation Question 12:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Providing that the naming of the original officiant was for a valid reason as suggested above and not just an admin exercise, then thus makes sense

Please share your views below:

It needs to be someone who has worked with the couple in preparation for the marriage

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There is no reason to change this, it has worked well and it would be wrong not to let UK churches continue to work together

Consultation Question 14:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The church is the gathering of the people, not the building. Where the parish congregation meets the service is valid. Whilst on the face of it the law here is archaic, there are other things which could stop a congregation meeting in the church building and this ruling should perhaps expand to include them (e.g. damage to structure by theft from roof, general structural issues, heating breakdown, etc.)

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

NO, Two people, two families, two congregations, two parishes are being brought together in a public act to make a contract. It is vital this is not altered.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

1, yes, have the power to but not be required to

2, yes, definitely... or at least each of the two should meet with one of the parish vicars and the two vicars should confer if not possible for the one doing the marriage service to meet the person coming from elsewhere separate to the local person

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, but can be with either of the parish vicars as above

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

The Church is Established, marriage comes from the church to the nation, not vice versa

Chapter 5: Officiants

Please share your views below:

Any group which has a regular ( at least monthly) gathering of people for fellowship, teaching, inspirational talks or reflection and to which one or both of those to be married regularly attend.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

see above

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

That is actually dangerous.

We have seen in last 20 years how 'public policy or morality' has changed significantly on the issue of marriage and other things.

The danger is that those holding views which were previously in line with public policy but which now are not become proscribed.

There needs to be safeguards against that happening

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes, as in all vicars. Similar for 'all mosque leaders' etc.

Consultation Question 28:

No

Please expand on your answer:

For instance. the C of E does not need to be part of that.

Consultation Question 29:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be greater oversight than that. Officiants must be part of an organisation with accountability, not just on a list.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In general yes, but they should also receive remuneration for their time; couples should not get a wedding for nothing. It would be devalued if it was without cost and only the 'party' afterwards cost money

Consultation Question 33:

No

Consultation Question 35:

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Providing that does not dictate parts of the rubric of a religious ceremony to be no longer allowed, or imposes wording on a service which a group might not. e comfortable with

Again, I do not see that the GRO needs to be involved in sending guidance to the C of E. The other way round might be helpful as the C of E has been conducting weddings for much longer than the GRO has existed.

Yes

Consultation Question 38:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If there ends up being a dispute about the rightness of the officiant between the nominating organisation and the GRO then there needs to be a way of mediating it.

Consultation Question 39:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No to independent officiants

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

C of E clergy have to retire at 70, that would seem to be a good line to draw for all

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

No

Please expand on your answer:

1b is vital part of service in front of witnesses

Consultation Question 43:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It can't become an 'anything goes' event. It should follow one of several formularies.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The bit in brackets needs to be set in legal stone to protect those groups from pressure to change.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

It should be possible to have readings from Bible (etc.) or a hymn or prayer as part of the items chosen by the couple - though I also wonder if they might be advised tk gave a church wedding if they request a lot of the religious parts

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Are you suggesting banning people from a church blessing on their marriage?
Even if not that, the current system is fine.

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It is a PUBLIC act of making a contract. To change that nullifies marriage. You might as well say the whole thing is a waste of time.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It is vital that there remains a sacredness to weddings (even secular ones, perhaps the word specialness might be used but it is not strong enough). You can't allow weddings on roller-coasters or where witnesses are not present, for instance. Don't make a mockery of marriage.

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or

Please share your views below:

Outdoors can be a special place, but what happens when it rains? If a particular place is licensed for the wedding that is fine but it can't just be moved at the last minute.

In homes is okay, providing there is good reason (a very sick partner perhaps) or as part of a ceremony (as per Hinduism).

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Public ceremony, contract made in public, see previous answers

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

Yes

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

You cannot use a church for a service that does not involve God, and whilst you could use a hotel for a religious service as God is everywhere it makes sense to even things out so that the rule works both ways.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be 'set venues'.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

As I am against any and every occasion being used, the allowed venues should be under the oversight of the organisation responsible (church, Local Authority, etc)

No

Please expand on your answer:

See above

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Venues should be appropriate and registered.

Please expand on your answer:

Presumably this is a matter for Wales, and therefore I do not feel able to comment.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A paper certificate should always be provided, other forms are fine in addition

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No

Please expand on your answer:

1/ I agree with this

2/and3/ make the process of marriage absurd. It needs to be a contract (= signing it) made in public (=witnesses)

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 59:

No

Please expand on your answer:

That would be a sham marriage. The purpose of marriage is to bring together to make one, for a man to leave his father and mother and be united with his wife (and v.v.). You cannot be married if you are not together.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be a contract made in public

Consultation Question 69:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Weddings should take place as close as possible to the home of one of the two being married, so that there is no impediment to family and friends being in attendance to witness.

As far as possible couples should be strongly dissuaded from siting the ceremony where it is expensive or difficult for witnesses to attend.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Equality is the buzz word isn't it?

Surely someone can work out how much the average wedding costs (some more because of things like this) and set a rate which matches that for all people.

Consultation Question 76:

(1) the same fee as other cases in which the registration officer must travel to the person giving notice, set nationally on a cost-recovery basis; or

Consultation Question 78:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Mainly because my previous answers indicate that I do not believe unusual places should be used for weddings

Consultation Question 79:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Why would you need a pre-approval process for a regular venue?

Consultation Question 80:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Do not use unregistered venues

Consultation Question 81:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No change

Consultation Question 82:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The AVERAGE cost for all weddings, as suggested above, will cover this.

Consultation Question 83:

(2) there should be no fee.

Please expand on your answer:

The average cost of a wedding would cover this

Consultation Question 84:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not agree with independent officiants

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The current situation perhaps makes marriage too easy. There should be a marriage prep course for all couples to help them fully to understand the purpose of a lifetime contractual commitment. Marriage should not be made even easier.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Compared with the expenditure most couples make on reception party and honeymoon, the cost of the actual marriage ceremony is not great.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I do not like most of your proposals, as indicated above

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

WE SPENT THE ENTIRE TIME DEFENDING AN ACTION TAKEN BY MY FATHER'S ABUSIVE "WIFE" (THE MARRIAGE WAS FORCED) UNDER INHERITANCE ACT AFTER SHE GAVE AWAY HER ASSETS, AND THOSE SHE FORCED MY FATHER TO GIVE TO HER) AND CLAIMED SHE WAS LIVING HAND TO MOUTH.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

WELL WE MET MY FATHER'S PREDATORY WIFE AT THE WEDDING.

7 DAY'S NOTICE WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN LONG ENOUGH FOR US TO STOP IT.

PUT IT ONLINE AND MAKE IT AT LEAST A MONTH

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

YES. TO STOP PREDATORS YOU MUST ENABLE MORE PEOPLE TO KNOW ABOUT THE MARRIAGE AND FOR LONGER.

PREDATORY MARRIAGE AFFECTS THOUSANDS OF ELDERLY PEOPLE.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

A MONTH WOULD BE PREFERABLE TO ENSURE THE MARRIAGE IS NOT BEING FORCED. THE CONSEQUENCES WOULD BE MINIMAL IF THE MARRIAGE IS NOT PREDATORY, BUT ONCE A PREDATOR MARRIES A VICTIM, THE LAW PROTECTS THE PREDATOR NOT THE VICTIM. THE FORCED MARRIAGE ACT IS USELESS FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE WITH DEMENTIA, AND MOST PREDATORS CHOOSE AN ELDERLY PERSON WITH DEMENTIA TO MANIPULATE THEM.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

IN DAD'S CASE, HE WAS TOO FRIGHTENED OF HIS ABUSER TO STAND UP TO HER. I SUPPORT REMOTE INTERVIEWS WHERE HIS FAMILY COULD BE PRESENT. I ALSO WANT REDRESS IF THE MARRIAGE IS FRAUDULENT OR PREDATORY. CURRENTLY THERE IS NO REDRESS AT ALL.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

MARRIAGE ON CRUISES IS A PREDATORS DREAM!!!! WE WERE TOLD BY THE BANK WHICH THE PREDATOR HAD CONVINCED TO ADD HER NAME TO DAD'S ACCOUNT THAT THEY MAY HAVE GONE ABROAD TO MARRY. NO THEY DIDN'T. SHE IS A GOOD LIAR AND SHAMELESS FRAUDSTER.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

AN EASILY ACCESSED WEBSITE. I ALSO WANT A CHANGE IN THE LAW ENABLING THOSE WITH POWERS OF ATTORNEY TO WARN THE REGISTRY OF THE DONOR'S MENTAL CAPACITY STATUS.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

IDEALLY IT SHOULD TAKE 12 MONTHS FOR A MARRIAGE TO BE SOLEMNISED FROM FIRST NOTICE. TIME IS THE ENEMY OF THE PREDATOR

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

IT WOULD MAKE IT EASIER FOR FAMILIES TO ALERT A NAMED OFFICIAL OF THEIR SUSPICIONS

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

ANY REGISTRAR NEEDS TO BE TRAINED TO IDENTIFY A POSSIBLE FRAUDULENT MARRIAGE.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

UNLESS THEY ARE PUBLISHED ONLINE FOR LONGER.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THE LAW IS SO OUT OF DATE, NO WONDER THERE ARE SO MANY FRAUDULENT MARRIAGES

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

THEY MUST BE PUBLISHED ONLINE TO PREVENT FRAUDULENT MARRIAGE

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

YES AND YES.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

YES THEY SHOULD AND IN THE CASE OF ELDERLY PEOPLE THEY SHOULD REQUEST THEIR OWN FAMILY -ADULT CHILDREN, OR OTHER RELATIVES BE PRESENT

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

CIVIL PRELIMINARIES DID NOT PREVENT A FRAUDSTER AND ABUSER MARRYING MY FATHER. WHAT WOULD HAVE PREVENTED IT WOULD HAVE BEEN PUBLISHING IT ONLINE FOR AT LEAST 3 MONTHS, MENTAL CAPACITY ASSESSMENTS AND SEPARATE INTERVIEWS.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THIS ASSUMES CORRECT TRAINING ON HOW PREDATORS MANIPULATE AND COERCE THEIR VICTIMS.

PREDATORS ARE SUCCESSFUL BECAUSE THEY MANIPULATE, LIE, COERCE AND APPEAR GENUINE. IN OUR CASE SHE GROOMED THE CHURCH MINISTER.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

WHAT IS ESSENTIAL IS THAT THE PERSON OFFICIATING UNDERSTANDS THE CONSEQUENCES OF MARRIAGE AS WELL AS THE COUPLE. WHEN THE LAW PROTECTS THE PREDATOR, NOT THE VICTIM, THE VICTIM IS AT RISK OF ABUSE BECAUSE THE PREDATOR IS INTERESTED IN FINANCIAL REWARDS OF MARRIAGE. IN OUR CASE, SHE DRUGGED HIM TO STOP HIM GETTING HELP. THE ELDERLY CARE TEAM BELIEVED HER AS HIS "WIFE".

THE CONSEQUENCES OF PREDATORY MARRIAGE FOR THE REGISTRAR IS NOTHING. THEY DONT HAVE THE TIME OR SUPPORT FROM GRO TO CHALLENGE EVEN WHEN THEY SUSPECT THINGS ARE NOT RIGHT.

Consultation Question 21:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

IT DOESN'T MATTER HOW MANY IF NONE OF THEM IS PROPERLY TRAINED ON SAFEGUARDING AND THE LAW PROTECTS THE PREDATOR.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THEY NEED FULL SAFEGUARDING TRAINING.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

AND THEY SHOULD ENSURE THE OFFICIANTS HAVE SAFEGUARDING TRAINING AND HAVE SUPPORT TO STOP A WEDDING IF THEY SUSPECT FRAUD

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

BUT THEY NEED SAFEGUARDING TRAINING AND SUPPORT TO STOP A FRAUDULENT OR PREDATORY MARRIAGE

Please share your views below:

THIS IS NOT THE POINT. IF YOU ARE GOING TO RELAX THE RULES AND I AM NOT AGAINST THIS FOR ANY RELIGION OR ORGANISATION YOU MUST HAVE CONCOMITANT SAFEGUARDING FOR ANY WEDDING. YOU MUST HAVE LEGAL REDRESS IF ANY TYPE OF MARRIAGE IS PREDATORY OR FRAUDULENT.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

WITH APPROPRIATE SAFEGUARDING IN PLACE AND APPROPRIATE LEGAL REDRESS FOR PREDATORY MARRIAGE

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

IF THE ORGANISATION BREACHES CURRENT LAW OR PUBLIC MORALS THEN IT SHOULD BE EXCLUDED. APPROPRIATE SAFEGUARDING MUST BE A FACTOR AND LACK OF IT SHOULD EXCLUDE THAT ORGANISATION FROM OFFICIATING ANY WEDDING.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I BELIEVE THIS WOULD BE GOOD ONLY IF PROPER SAFEGUARDING WAS IN PLACE AND PROPER LEGAL REDRESS AVAILABLE IF THE MARRIAGE IS FRAUDULENT.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I AGREE. HOWEVER, I FOUND THE GRO TO BE COMPLACENT WHEN I INFORMED THEM OF MY FATHER'S FORCED MARRIAGE. THEIR SAFEGUARDING PROCEDURES ARE LAMENTABLE AND THEIR REGISTRARS UNSUPPORTED WHEN THEY RAISE A CONCERN.

IN MARRIAGES OF THE ELDERLY, THEY ARE CONCERNED THAT IF THEY CHALLENGE THEY WILL BE ACCUSED OF AGE DISCRIMINATION.

THEY ARE NOT ALLOWED TO KEEP A LIST OF SERIAL PREDATORS WHO MARRY ELDERLY PEOPLE TIME AFTER TIME FOR FINANCIAL GAIN. SEE JUSTICE FOR JOAN AND NOTE THAT HER 'HUSBAND' MARRIED ANOTHER PERSON'S GRANDMOTHER SHORTLY AFTER JOAN BLASS DIED.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THEY SHOULD HAVE AN ENHANCED DBA CHECK AND FULL SAFEGUARDING TRAINING.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

IF YOU NOMINATE, YOU TAKE FULL LEGAL AND MORAL RESPONSIBILITY

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

1. SAFEGUARDING TRAINING
2. UNDERSTAND CONSEQUENCES OF MARRIAGE
3. ASK QUESTIONS TO ASSESS MENTAL CAPACITY IN SEPARATE INTERVIEWS
4. ASK IF EITHER OR BOTH HAVE POWER OF ATTORNEY AND CHECK OPG REGISTER
5. ASK IF THEIR FAMILIES KNOW ABOUT THE MARRIAGE
- 6.

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

THEY SHOULD BE ABLE TO MAKE A BUSINESS OF OFFICIATING BUT BE HELD LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE IF THEY FAIL TO IDENTIFY A FRAUDULENT MARRIAGE.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THEY WILL NEED FULL INSURANCE

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THEY WILL NEED SOME LEGISLATIVE SUPPORT

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

THE GRO NEEDS GUIDANCE ITSELF. IT IS STILL ALLOWING FRAUDULENT MARRIAGES DESPITE ELDERLY PEOPLE NOT HAVING FULL CAPACITY. THEY HAVE ONLY RECENTLY ISSUED GUIDANCE ON NOT ACCEPTING A PERSON'S DEemeanour AND EXPRESSION AS EVIDENCE OF CONSENT. MANY PEOPLE WITH DEMENTIA SMILE BECAUSE THEY DON'T UNDERSTAND WHAT IS HAPPENING.

MY FATHER CRIED THROUGHOUT HIS MARRIAGE BECAUSE HE WAS BEING FORCED INTO A MARRIAGE. THE REGISTRAR DID NOTHING.

Consultation Question 37:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

IF THEY NOMINATE THEY TAKE RESPONSIBILITY WITH THE NOMINEE

Consultation Question 38:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

THE GRO IS IN A MESS ITSELF. HOW CAN THEY JUDGE OTHERS WHEN THEY ARE INCOMPETENT THEMSELVES.

Consultation Question 39:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

THIS SHOULD INCLUDE THE GRO EMPLOYEES TOO. JOAN BLASS COULDN'T REMEMBER HER DATE OF BIRTH OR ADDRESS IN 2015. THE REGISTRAR WENT AHEAD WITH THE MARRIAGE. JOAN HAD BEEN DIAGNOSED WITH VASCULAR DEMENTIA IN 2010. THEY NOTICED BUT DID NOTHING TO STOP THE MARRIAGE.

THIS IS HAPPENING ALL OVER THE COUNTRY. I KNOW OF SO MANY OF THESE MOSTLY FROM FRIENDS WITH ELDERLY RELATIVES.

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

CONDUCT SHOULD BE A FACTOR, NOT TIME.

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

BUT CPD CAN BE EXPENSIVE AND THE QUALITY OF CPD MAKES A DIFFERENCE

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

MARRIAGE IS A CONTRACT WITH AT THE MOMENT NO CONSENT WRITTEN OR VERBALLY REQUIRED. HOW CAN THIS BE? CONSENT MUST BE POSITIVELY STATED AND AS WITH ANY FRAUD, CONSENT FRAUDULENTLY OR MADE UNDER DURESS SHOULD BE NULL AND VOID.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

PROVIDED THAT SECRET MARRIAGES ARE INSTANTLY VOIDABLE IF FOUND TO BE FRAUDULENT OR UNDER DURESS. YOUR REVIEW INTO WEDDINGS NEEDS TO BE ACCOMPANIED BY A REVIEW OF FORCED, FRAUDULENT OR PREDATORY MARRIAGES

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

ABSOLUTELY AGREE PROVIDED SAFEGUARDING MEASURES ARE IN PLACE AND THESE MARRIAGES CAN BE ANNULLED IF FOUND TO BE FORCED, FRAUDULENT OR PREDATORY

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

RELIGION IS A GOOD THING AND NO ONE SHOULD BE REFUSED ACCESS TO A RELIGIOUS PART.

BUT SAFEGUARDING IS VITALLY IMPORTANT IN ANY WEDDING CEREMONY.

Please share your views below:

I WOULD LIKE TO SEE WORDS FROM THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER AND THE BIBLE INCLUDED IF FOR NO OTHER REASON THAN THESE BOOKS CONTAIN THE MOST BEAUTIFUL ENGLISH LANGUAGE EVER WRITTEN.

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

ALSO REPEAL S18 AJA 1982 WHICH REVOKES A WILL ON MARRIAGE
REPEAL MATRIMONIAL CAUSES ACT AND INHERITANCE ACT 1975

ALL OF ABOVE ARE OUT DATED AND ARE USED VERY SUCCESSFULLY BY EVERY PREDATOR WHO MARRIED TO FINANCIALLY ABUSE

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

NO THERE IS NO REASON TO DO THIS AND MANY REASONS TO KEEP THIS PROVISION.

IT IS A PREDATOR'S DREAM TO KEEP A SECRET MARRIAGE SECRET

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

YES, ONLY IF THE GOVERNMENT OFFERS REDRESS WHEN THE MARRIAGE IS FOUND TO BE FRAUDULENT OR FORCED.

PREDATORS LIKE SECRECY AND CONTROL.

Please share your views below:

WEDDINGS ARE NOT THE PROBLEM. IT DOESNT MATTER WHERE THEY TAKE PLACE AS LONG AS THERE IS TRANSPARENCY AND FRAUDULENT OR FORCED MARRIAGES CAN BE ANNULLED EASILY.

CURRENTLY NO LAW PROTECTS THE VICTIM OF FORCED MARRIAGE IF THEY HAVE DEMENTIA OR HAVE DIED.

THE PREDATOR IS ENTIRELY PROTECTED BY CURRENT LEGISLATION.

Consultation Question 49:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

UNLESS THIS IS A PERSON'S PRIVATE HOME, THERE IS NO REASON FOR THIS.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

IT SHOULD NOT BE OF GOVERNMENT'S CONCERN WHERE OR HOW WEDDINGS TAKE PLACE. IT IS OF GOVERNMENT AND EVERYONE'S CONCERN IF A WEDDING IS FRAUDULENT OR FORCED AND THERE IS NO WAY TO ANNUL OR OBTAIN LEGAL REDRESS. IT IS ALSO IMPOSSIBLE TO STOP A PREDATOR CLAIMING AGAINST THE VICTIM'S ESTATE AFTER THE VICTIM'S DEATH.

YOU SHOULD BE MORE CONCERNED ABOUT PREDATORY MARRIAGE

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

THIS SHOULD BE A MATTER FOR ALL CONCERNED

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

AND THAT THE PARTIES TO THE MARRIAGE ARE SAFE

Other

Please expand on your answer:

THE GRO ARE NOT CURRENTLY ABLE TO PREVENT PREDATORY OR FORCED MARRIAGE. NO CONVICTION HAS EVER BEEN MADE UNDER THE FORCED MARRIAGE ACT BECAUSE THE GRO DOES NOT KEEP RECORDS OF SUFFICIENT DETAIL. HOW DO YOU THINK YOU CAN ASK MORE OF THEM?

Consultation Question 53:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

THIS IS A SUBJECT THAT I HAVE NO PARTICULAR VIEW ON

Please share your views below:

THE CELEBRANT AND POTENTIAL USERS?

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

IT SHOULD ALSO REFER TO ATTORNEYS UNDER A POWER OF ATTORNEY

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

ENGLISH AND WELSH OR EACH LANGUAGE ONLY

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

THIS IS OPEN TO ABUSE BY THE PREDATOR WHO IN OUR CASE WAS TAKING DOCUMENTS FROM DAD IN HIS SHELTERED ACCOMMODATION TO ADD HER NAME FRAUDULENTLY TO HIS BANK ACCOUNT ETC CLAIMING TO BE HIS "WIFE" BUT WOULD POTENTIALLY IDENTIFY DEMENTIA IF THE SECURITY MEASURES WERE AT A REQUIRED LEVEL.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

PREDATORY MARRIAGE SHOULD RENDER A MARRIAGE VOID

No

Please expand on your answer:

MOST PREDATORS RELY ON PEOPLE NOT KNOWING. WITNESSES ARE ESSENTIAL BUT IN OUR CASE, WE REALLY DIDN'T KNOW SHE WAS A PROFESSIONAL FRAUDSTER SO WE NEEDED A LAW TO MAKE WHAT SHE DID A CRIMINAL OFFENCE

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

EXPLICIT FREE AND FULL CONSENT IS ESSENTIAL

Consultation Question 59:

No

Please expand on your answer:

MY FRIEND'S MOTHER LIVED WITH HER FOR 15 YEARS DUE TO FAILING HEALTH INCLUDING DEMENTIA. WHEN SHE DIED, THEY FOUND SHE HAD BEEN TAKEN OUT FOR THE DAY BY A CARER 10 YEARS BEFORE TO MARRY HIM. MY FRIEND DIDN'T KNOW, HER MOTHER DIDN'T SAY ANYTHING THE CARER CHANGED HIS JOB SHORTLY AFTER. THERE WAS NO FURTHER CONTACT AND YET THIS 'MARRIAGE' REVOKED THE PRE EXISTING WILL AND MY FRIEND ALMOST LOST HER HOME TRYING TO FIGHT THIS. THE CARER WAS OVER 30 YEARS YOUNGER THAN HIS "WIFE"

UNTIL PREDATORY MARRIAGE IS DEALT WITH BY LAWS ALLOWING ANNULMENT BEFORE AND AFTER DEATH AND WILLS NOT BEING REVOKED BY MARRIAGE, YOU CANNOT SUGGEST THAT NOT LIVING WITH SOMEONE AFTER MARRIAGE ISN'T NEEDED.

FRAUD IS FRAUD

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

IF THE TERMINAL ILLNESS IS DEMENTIA AS WITH MY FATHER THEN MARRIAGE SHOULD BE ANNULLED

PREDATORS LOOK OUT FOR SOMEONE WHO HAS A TERMINAL ILLNESS BECAUSE MARRIAGE REVOKES AN EXISTING WILL AND THEY DONT HAVE TO TOLERATE THEIR VICTIM FOR TOO LONG.

WHEN MY FATHER'S WIFE HAD STOLEN ENOUGH, SHE ARRANGED FOR HIM TO BE PUT IN AN ELDERLY MENTALLY ILL CARE HOME. WE RESCUED HIM AND HE REGAINED CAPACITY BECAUSE SHE COULDN'T DRUG HIM WHEN HE LIVED WITH US.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

AND FURTHER CHECKS ARE NEEDED TO ENSURE THIS VULNERABLE PERSON IS NOT BEING COERCED.

Consultation Question 64:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

ARE YOU ABLE TO DO THIS WITHOUT ALLOWING A PREDATOR TO GROOM THE CELEBRANT. THERE SEEMS TO BE NO SAFEGUARDING NOW, SO HOW WOULD THIS WORK?

Consultation Question 65:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

PROVIDED THAT FURTHER CHECKS ARE MADE TO ENSURE THE VULNERABLE PERSON IS NOT BEING COERCED OR PRESSURISED.

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

THE CURRENT LAW ENCOURAGES FINANCIAL ABUSE. IN THAT SENSE IT ENCOURAGES PEOPLE TO MARRY.

I ACCEPT THAT MARRIAGE IS A GOOD THING FOR MANY ESPECIALLY THOSE WITH CHILDREN. MANY MARRY FOR THAT REASON.

YOUR PROPOSALS WILL INITIALLY ENCOURAGE PEOPLE TO MARRY. THEY WILL CERTAINLY BE WELCOMED BY THE PREDATOR UNLESS THE LAW IS BALANCED WITH PROVISIONS TO STOP PREDATORY MARRIAGE, ANNULING SUCH MARRIAGES AND STOPPING MARRIAGE REVOKING EXISTING WILLS. CURRENT LAW IS SO OUT DATED AND SO PROTECTS THE PREDATOR, PARLIAMENT SHOULD ADDRESS THE ISSUES I HAVE RAISED BEFORE RELAXING THE RULES ON MARRIAGE.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

THE TRUE COSTS OF MARRIAGE ARE THE FINANCIAL CONSEQUENCES AFTER MARRIAGE. PREDATORS MARRY VULNERABLE PEOPLE BECAUSE IT IS A LEGAL FORM OF FINANCIAL ABUSE.

FOR MOST MARRIAGES THE COSTS OF ACTUALLY GETTING MARRIED PALE IN COMPARISON TO THE COST OF CATERING ETC.

THE COST TO MY FATHER OF HIS MARRIAGE TO A PREDATOR WAS LOSING HIS ENTIRE LIFE'S SAVINGS, HIS PROPERTY AND HIS LIFE. SHE DRUGGED HIM FOR SEVERAL YEARS AND WHEN HE WAS SAFE SHE GOT CONTACT WITH HIM AND THREATENED TO KILL HIS DAUGHTER WHOM HE THEN LIVED WITH. THIS IS A COST WHICH CANNOT BE COUNTED.

I KNOW OF SO MANY WHO HAVE BEEN SIMILAR VICTIMS. YOU NEED TO HELP TO CHANGE THE LAW.

YOU CANNOT RELAX THE RULES ON WEDDINGS UNLESS YOU BALANCE THIS RELAXATION WITH LAWS ALLOWING ANNULMENT IF THE MARRIAGE IS FRAUDULENT. FAILURE MEANS A PREDATOR'S CHARTER. IT MEANS FINANCIAL RUIN FOR THE VICTIM AND A FRUSTRATING AND UNSUCCESSFUL FIGHT FOR JUSTICE

AS I WROTE ABOVE, THE REGISTRAR WAS OBLIVIOUS TO MY DAD'S TEARS AND RELUCTANCE TO SAY THE WORDS. SHE MAY AS WELL NOT HAVE BEEN THERE. THE BAPTIST MINISTER WAS LATER FOUND TO HAVE BEEN GROOMED AND LEFT HIS MINISTRY.

NONE OF YOUR REVIEW MAKES SENSE IN THE LIGHT OF LEGISLATION WHICH PROTECTS A PREDATOR AND FAILS TO PROTECT A VICTIM. MY FATHER'S MARRIAGE COST UNDER £1000 INCLUDING CATERING BUT THE REAL COST WAS HIS LIFE SAVINGS AND HIS LIFE. HE DIED WEEKS AFTER THE PREDATOR TOLD HIM SHE WAS PLANNING TO STAB HIS DAUGHTER. I CAN PROVIDE DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE. IN OTHER CASES, THE PREDATOR COMMITTED OTHER ABUSES, BUT THE FAMILIES WERE NOT TAKEN SERIOUSLY.

REGISTRATION OFFICERS ARE NOT BEING TRAINED ADEQUATELY TO SAFEGUARD. THEY HAVE LITTLE SUPPORT WHEN THEY ARE SUSPICIOUS AND FEAR BEING ACCUSED OF AGE DISCRIMINATION IF THEY REFUSE A CERTIFICATE.

THE GOVERNMENT MUST ADDRESS THESE ISSUES BEFORE CHANGING THE CURRENT RULES WHICH AT LEAST HAVE A SEMBLANCE OF SCREENING FOR PREDATORS.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Yes, remote working in general is the future. Remote interviews are convenient, save time, are less stressful for the interviewee and are easily recorded. I would suggest they are a better way, not a worse way, of determining the credibility of a party.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, there is no good reason not to - the process should not be made more difficult.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Births, marriages and deaths are all a matter of public record - displaying notices online simply makes them more accessible.

Consultation Question 10:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Too long.

Consultation Question 11:

No

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only 3 is necessary - ie. the signing of the marriage document. When this has been signed, the parties are married.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

English law pays far too much attention to the wedding ceremony: when and where parties marry is unimportant. What is important is the marriage itself.

There should be a standard marriage contract - including a pre-nuptial agreement - with parties being required to undertake some form of pre-wedding explanation of (i) their practical and (ii) their legal responsibilities once they are married.

There is no reason to prevent parties having a religious ceremony after a civil one - it should be up to them.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The wedding is not public - it is the fact that a marriage has taken place that is public.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

We have postponed all of our couples to dates next year. We have done this free of charge, despite all the time needed to rearrange all their plans. We have received no government support despite the loss of income this year. Yes this income will be earned next year (if things are back to normal by then) but we are then limited on the number of bookings we can take from new couples next year so this does equate to a huge loss of income for a small business that supports just a few people it's been hugely disappointing to fall through cracks on government support.

If we cannot have decent guest numbers by next year I am very fearful. I can't imagine people wanting to postpone to another year and will probably just scale down and go ahead with plans in another way, probably then asking for refunds, which the CMA seem to support. All the while insurers aren't paying out and passing the buck to the small suppliers. I dread to think what situation we will be in next year. I have my hopes pinned on rapid testing being easily available, so guests can be tested before joining the wedding, which would mean we don't need to limit guest numbers or social distance.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As you are suggesting, it's the officiant that should determine the legality of the ceremony, not the place where the ceremony takes place. It's bizarre this rule has lasted this long.

Please share your views below:

I think any of the above are fine, as long as the ceremony is safe for the couple, officiant and guests. If someone wants to get married at the top of the mountain it would be up to them find an officiant that would happy to do that. Anyone coming up with radical suggestions will need to be prepared for the fact that they might not be able to find someone to legally officiate.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again I think this is antiquated and a wedding should be attended by only those people invited.

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

No

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think if a couple want a non-religious ceremony then it would be strange for this to take place in a religious venue. You either are religious or you aren't. I don't see any reason that a religious ceremony however should not be able to take place in a beautiful outdoor space.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Yes makes sense, The officiant is the one that needs to conduct the ceremony. They should feel safe in doing so.

Consultation Question 52:

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Makes sense to have this in place, so couples can book venues with confidence that the officiant is likely to sign off on the location. But not if this is going to be an expensive process as some people make a living out of a small number of weddings a year. We are approx 20, versus some of the bigger venues that will host 3-5 weddings a week throughout the year. A venue should not be penalised for not going down the pre-approval route (if this is at a cost to the venue)

Please share your views below:

Will there be a local office of the General Register Office as I guess it would make sense for a county head to do this. Only problem I foresee is them not being happy to pre-approve a location but an individual officiant being happy to conduct the ceremony there. So there should be no 'black marks' against locations that aren't pre-approved. But the pre-approval would mean that established venues are able to be added to some pre-approved list to make things more efficient for venues, couples and officiants.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I don't think so. I only have access to info on a small amount of couples but all our couples either opt for a church service or a registry office ceremony a couple of days before their field wedding. These couples will always have a blessing/ceremony in the field. They generally follow the traditional format of a wedding with guests seated, bride walking down the aisle. Words and vows being spoken, readings and sometimes singing and bride and groom walking back down the aisle together. Everything but the legal element really. I know these couples would love for their field ceremony to be the legal ceremony too.

This would be a cost saving as they wouldn't need to pay for two ceremonies

This would be fantastic for my business as the bookings I have lost in the past to licenced venues could be extra business for us moving forward.

I think this covers my answers up to q87

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Venues such as hotels, barns etc that operate with a licence can be very expensive and really only a consideration for the ceremony and the reception because of this cost.

I know couples who find the surroundings at a registry office very bland and do not lend themselves to their special occasion. These couples have searched other venues with licences to hold their ceremony as an alternative and then to follow that with a reception with us. This never stacks up financially for them so for couples where it's important for them to have their legal ceremony on the day, well those are bookings we lose to other venues.

We do not plan on charging anything for legal ceremonies in our fields if they are allowed, only if i have any admin fees that I will need to recoup.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

Please expand on your answer:

You tell me if this is a marriage not recognised by law. [REDACTED] in a long term relationship [REDACTED]

I know marriage to be religious and I would never marry because getting married or taking any oath would stop me showing everybody that I am an atheist.

In Scotland solely for matters of the Department of works and Pension the COD description would go some way to satisfy: "Proof of irregular marriage for social security purposes:

If you are claiming social security benefits which require you to be married, or to have been married (for example to claim bereavement benefits), there is a special procedure which you can use to establish that you are, or have been, married by cohabitation with habit and repute.

You should inform the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) that you are, or have been, married by cohabitation with habit and repute when you make a claim for the benefit.

An acceptance by the DWP for social security purposes will not entitle you to claim that you are, or have been, married for any other purposes. If you need to establish that you are, or have been, married for any other purpose, you will have to take an action for declarator of marriage, as described above."

<https://www.citizensadvice.org.uk/scotland/family/living-together-marriage-and-civil-partnership-s/getting-married-s/#h-proof-of-irregular-marriage>

I constantly find matrimonial society, which I consider representational parliamentary democracy and the law all part of matrimonial, use the never marrieds and cohabitants for social control, jurisdiction and joint and several liability mostly by the route of "5(b)who are not married to each other but are living together as husband and wife" (Council tax Regulations 1992).

I find this English and Welsh predicament impossible to get out of by law, possibly because the law of Jactitation has been abolished by the law commission (family law act 1986 c. 55Part IIISection 61 ) and I presume that at that point abolished common law marriage as that must have been Jactitations purpose to adjudicate. I am of the opinion that common law marriage should be considered as within the compass of "clandestine marriages" and are but that couples took jurisdiction for themselves through promises of future or present consent. Jactitation gave a Public Jurisdiction to a private dispute.

Law commission working paper Number 34, LCWP34.

and allegedly: "The defences to the suit are three in number: first, a denial that the assertion was made; second, an admission that the allegation was made but that it is true; third, that the misrepresentation was made but was acquiesced, LCWP34 Para 3. The law appears to have been used until just after the UN declaration of human rights 1948: Schuck v schuck 1950 and Igra v Igra 1951.

[REDACTED] joint tenancy with survivorship followed by beneficial trustees, is being treated as if she has a right of audience at the court without my consent and as if she can answer for one to a dispute as if she is married in a trial without jury, through Enactments like TOLATA s.14. that I hope to defend through TOLATA 4.2) Going at TOLATA 14.3) as a joint tenant with survivorship as in 1890 Partnership act s. 2. This is my view which I accept challenges public jurisdiction.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In common law marriage CLM there is no wedding like yours only words between the two parties "de futuro" and "de presenti" LCWP34 para.5. This paragraph makes the assumption that CLM ended at the Hardwick Act 1754. Jactitation was said to have come over in 1857 for the matrimonial causes Act and courts formed for that: LCWP34 para. 3. The presentation is that marriage was brought over from one jurisdiction but the actuality is that the personnel were brought under the jurisdiction of felony apparently without qualm. A gradual takeover but more a family struggle. This process, if it was a process had been going on back to the reformation: <http://discovery.nationalarchives.gov.uk/details/r/C13332> with numerous examples that there was no separation between so called civil and ecclesiastical jurisdiction with Numerous parliamentary Statements

I have relied on not being married being recognised by the law, proving that I "might" be an atheist although I do expect that the purer state of Atheism requires one to be born illegitimate such as my offspring. I know that married humanists are not atheists.

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
And matrimonial law can dissolve it without any act or decree [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] What this feels like is common law marriage. Is it, your the experts?

I would claim that I did not think that the law would go around saying that there is no such thing as common law marriage and then find it [REDACTED] and then separate it or dissolve it to make me homeless and my family offspring homeless forevermore. Where is your family home.

UN Article 16 (2) says Marriage shall be entered into ONLY with the free and full consent of the intending spouses. It does not mention the rule of law or legally binding officers writing dispositions and no doubt you will claim that that makes it out side the UN jurisdiction. It would seem to me that Jactitation sits comfortably with Article 16(2) and that the laws of England and Wales should be more mindful of UN Article 16 3) The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State. [REDACTED] they went for the family home [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] about the date of separation was based on "Never joined, can't be separated". I could rant further, were we joined in the births register? We were though joint tenants with very importantly the expectation of survivorship.

I see no reason why the law like in para. 46 Stack v Dowden [2007] UKHL 17 would claim that "common law marriage" was a myth but then use words such as relationship and separated in supernatural ways.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes it was my understanding that if I ever got married by writ or was seen to take an oath that I could not show/prove to people that I was an atheist. I also think that an oath in front of a judge or Judges particularly odd numbers of them that will not consider split decision as in joint tenancy with survivorship is not an oath because the protagonists should be seen to be united by the four utilities.

The reason has come all the more apparent due to my recent on going experiences and that was I thought I "lived" by the rules of Universal Consent as outlined within the four unities in Blackstones commentaries on joint tenancy with survivorship which were written down just after the The Clandestine marriage Act came into being when there was not much case evidence as to the affect of marriage, presumably including common law marriage or cohabitation and never married on joint tenancy with survivorship in civil law? This act presumably following the the statute of frauds made irregular solemnisation by the clergy a felony guaranteed by Removing the felon for life to America with 14 years hard labour as well.

I "believe" in the consent of JTWS parties to bring property onto the land and that for the unity of interest they both own those properties when on the land and so then need their universal consent for property to leave that land and the the severance or partition of the land to be only available to universal consent and that without it the parties are bound to agree to disagree. What this means is that the courts do not have the power to order sale or force one to give vacant possession from one to the other, primarily because the one jointure cannot bring a dispute without the consent of the other. The courts also have a problem with recognising the individual.: a person who is a trustee within a JTWS. That should be recognised by the 1890 Partnership Act to differentiate to all the other units of partnership like civil ones and newly invented LLPs with whom I find myself in supernatural combat with.

It is the matrimonial solemnisation which gives consent to jurisdiction to the court of power to sell or force injunctions against access to the land . Blaarr blarr.

The one registered officer that officiates over marriage justifies trial without jury. I do not consented to that.

The UN Article 16 is the only article to mention consent 2) Marriage shall be entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

Where is trial by jury in that.

That more than 60% of English marriages end in divorce is because the either of the party, the defendant was bound by that consent to the rule of law and the rule which is rule of law without a fundamental right to trial by jury takes every opportunity in the face of the Children of those families affected to demonstrate total authority by having control of trial by jury, over the land which is claimed to belong to the relationships and not the family which it should if the law followed UN Article 16 3). The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State.

The law has changed family into supernatural. In the matrimonial causes act the children are said to be of the family, as if what?

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

[REDACTED]

Being in-prisoned for [REDACTED] without trial by jury for a supernatural offence to which a solution is contrition or purge followed by an appeal without jury, all not within a physical, just jurisdiction of my land or lack of religion. I am currently due for another committal hearing without trial by jury and now presumably not of good character.

I very simply do not want to sell my family home. I find that position extremely easy to defend. My ancestors stood in uniform in the last world war as married men. I would say that they did it to defend the land. One was killed and left his family to defend its self. The country relied on that strength of the family. This is my family home until I agree otherwise. I know exactly my ground but I have taken inspiration from the abolition of the doctrine of conversion and section 4 of TOLATA with a nod at section 50 of the trustees act 1925. I fantasise that relationship cannot be turned into property or property to be sold for the conversion of relationship into separation.

Take note that the Second World War was not fought so as to make matrimony and its dissolution, a human right. All wars of England were fought over land even if sitting in a aeroplane. I don't think England were represented at Troy.

the courts have put the costs of the case against the sale of the land, in a case that I am fighting against the sale of the land. In what way is that possible? A fait accompli. No lawyer or legal aid can find "merit" pro bono or otherwise. I can only feel that with all the human rights and equalities acts are a matrimonial conspiracy against "never married" and make me question the fundament right of jurisdiction that the country has over me. It seems to me that any code that makes pronouncements about matrimony is a religion. Add to that I am expected to accept without prejudice save to cost letters is another step to far.

Matrimony has become consent to be governed. All these Judges and I suspect the majority of the law commission will be in matrimonial contracts and so biased and will have no problem ignoring the everyday throwaway use of "in a relationship", living together, "is that your partner,", that I am bombarded with yet categorically denied to be common law marriage by the State.

Simple forms ask for statements right from the start of marital status. Yet the rule of law unlike in Scotland claims that there is no such thing as common law marriage or trial by jury for that matter. Unlike in Scotland, how can you keep a straight face?

It seems to me that trial by jury is the only way that the courts in a no such thing as common law marriage jurisdiction could show that they have concern to jurisdiction over "never marrieds" rather than through "domestic abuse" via the family law acts policed in council tax properties.

If a joint tenant damages property on their land it should in my mind still be considered as criminal damage against the other tenants if they so feel and not domestic violence mental or physical to be called such by a force with no obvious jurisdiction over the never married.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

Who are you to tell me that common law marriage is not legally binding when I seem to be well and truly bound without it. Being seen to "believe" in oaths. I don't want "meaningful" or personal marriage or wedding. Matrimony should be regarded always as religious, a display of supernatural, either verbally or physically, twoddle. It should not be part of the state, it should not be a human right. Having a family most certainly does not need matrimony or the state and according to UN Article 16 3) The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State. And you are failing my family by this exercise.

Marriage is not the fundamental unit of jurisdiction. Jurists should seek no jurisdiction from it, like you are doing.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Although I would expect that marriages are suspended I am though living in a house that is rented by a woman who is not the mother of my children. I am very much aware that I will be used as I f living as a husband and wife and so the council tax is being paid accordingly. You tell me, am I married to her. The woman last weekend had a stroke and the form filling to access the welfare state is about to commence. There is paid work in prison. Will I have to declare it?

That's how common law marriage, CLM, is done, an accusation of residency., but maybe seven days should be related to the average time to achieve conception.

Article 16 2) Marriage shall be entered into ONLY with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

"Intending spouses" is a better term than "couples". Couples have a stated history. Spouses is pure intention and purpose all leading to consent to be judged by you who.

"Proof of irregular marriage"

To prove that you are married by cohabitation with habit and repute, you must bring an action of Declarator of Marriage in the Court of Session. Details of the decree are passed on to the registrar general, who will register the marriage. You will need a solicitor.

The action for Declarator of Marriage can be brought to court by either you or your partner, your children or any person with an interest in proving that the marriage exists, for example to prove the grounds for actions of aliment or to show inheritance rights. It is possible to bring this action after either or both parties are dead.

I find this consultation very duplicitous. The couple can only work out that it was with free and full consent years down the line. Most of medieval marriage is about words of consent or future and present because until the council of Trent there was no official concept of weddings mostly because the English population was not expected to be literate in law french or Latin, probably on purpose with the intention to divide and rule.

"Another great objection to the Marriage Bill was, that instead of the parochial divisions which had hitherto prevailed, there was now to be district divisions which would include several churches, so that so far from giving additional security, this alteration would take away that security which the country at present had by the publication of bans in the parish church. It had been said, that under cover of publishing bans all sorts of improper marriages took place. That was a mistake. It was one of the provisions of the Marriage Act, that by publishing bans the parties were not obliged to marry in their own parish. Now there was a sort of fashion in this matter. Some parishes were preferred to others. For instance, the parish of St. Martin and the parish of St. George were favourite parishes, and many marriages took place in them, while, on the contrary, the parish of St. Giles was a most unpopular parish, and nobody married there. This was not done because the parties wished to conceal their marriages, but because they did not like to marry there. In his own parish in the country, in the course of eight years there had been but one marriage. Parties who had been living together without being married, but who were finally driven by their consciences or by other causes to marry, were afraid to expose to their neighbours that they had been living together in their former state of connection, and they would therefore go to some distant parish to be married. Servants also were sometimes afraid of having it known to their masters that they were married, and would, therefore, go to another parish to contract marriage." This is after having said "The Bill for the Registration of Births involved a principle which separated things which always had been united since the establishment of a Christian Church—the naming of the child when it was received into the Church by baptism. There was not one petition which he had received from the clergy which did not insist most anxiously upon that point. The practical effect would be, that when persons had once named their children without going to the church, it would make them careless and indifferent about bringing them to the font. "

There is nobody at the font row now is there, The appeal courts of London think they have the right to stop people calling their daughter Cyanide, why don't you bring those fonts back into civil light, particularly in the country. Just think what it would be for diversification and reinvigorate these ancient buildings in the registration game having your baby baptised from a 12 or 13 century font in the church you married in. You can pretend to be related to the past. Thing is now you would be worried the water was poisoned. But then the law allows sham marriages in the hundreds before it notices race. All British marriages in England are pretty grotty ain't they. What's the tariff, three? No marriage is a sham even if a Nigerian is involved. "Weddings" are arguments of de futuro and praesenti and "weds" are probably gifts of property to prove the proposal is not supernatural.

1. No officiant required or 2. Or ONLY a jury of 12 is required if this is about the law gaining jurisdiction.

1. Article 16 2) Marriage shall be entered into ONLY with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

Does not need officiants just the free and full consent but really Article 16 3) The FAMILY IS the natural and FUNDAMENTAL group UNIT OF SOCIETY and is entitled to protection by society and the State.

There is no family until there are children. Is there?

Where's the never married protection? Matrimonial society in England has taken over the state and family.

The family is the fundamental unit not marriage and the "family" is expected to be bigger than two married people with "children of the family", [REDACTED] now supernatural [REDACTED] and able to gain and lose members naturally, like going off and buying a house elsewhere in their name, without stopping being a family.. in a family home which is really a seat in a welfare state.

Obviously there is the opinion of baroness Margret Thatcher that societies don't exist but I would say that she was part of married society. I would say her families values are based on her baroness title which was based at a place Kesteven and the value is the tangible hereditary titles that her offspring enjoy.. The tile was given by one officer and this is the consent to be judged by the odd officer rather than by split decision and universal consent that would result from an Evan number of officers.

Her marriage was also given to her by one officer and the importance was that it was the consent that she gave to accept trial by one judge and not consider Trials by Jury as the better way to gain acceptance of jurisdiction in the community.

I think that common law marriage should be recognised but not by the law. Two [REDACTED] judges in the current system said [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] That I would say it is a legal disposition found commonly in law. Is it irregular solemnisation and is the disposition a decree absolute as they found that the sentence stood? An order to sell property belonging to a marriage does not rely on CPR and a general catch all in TOLATA that a singular trustees can apply to a court for an order. The matrimonial causes act has its own section on sale of property and the power(procedures) of the court still requires decrees of divorce. An order to sell a family home of never marrieds is an order against the family. The CPR is a procedure.

2. For the device of argument A jury of 12. The jury might comprise of unmarried friends as well as of married people like their parents. Have witness along and start the conspicuous consumption. I would suggest that the inclusion of the unmarried would be a promotion for marriage and possibly a hypocrisy if they themselves did not marry. You would find me in the audience next to the provender.

More importantly they all might not accept trial without jury as matrimonial society does, primarily because it accepts its' primordial position from a single officer of consent.

[REDACTED] there are no courts within the boundary of my authorising authority. As such there is very little legal acumen in the area. There was absolutely no interest [REDACTED] The Trial was run by not much more than a solicitor who wore a noticeable wedding ring who took offence when I wasted [REDACTED] by complaining that all the judges were married. The appeal courts are even more remote and more married if that is possible. They are married to the consent that one officiant is sufficient. COD seemed to me to be a lunch party.

Consultation Question 20:

What's civil about a wed-ding?

Article 16 2) Marriage shall be entered into ONLY with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

All ceremonies are religious because by participating in them you are displaying belief in the supernatural. The obvious supernatural is the officiants "position" but just the positioning of the participants is supernatural. How can one join two. Look you can't see the join. Magic. Even observing wearing rings you have to go through a lot of ageism, sexism, racism to work out who is claiming to be with whom. magic in action.

Our representational democratic state by legislating matrimony is a religion. That that has been reinforced now by civil partnership and the Equalities Act 2010 does not hide the fact that the state has always been a religion even prior to things like the 1754 clandestine marriage act and as English and Welsh society is matrimonial history will continue to be rewritten for that establishment to make it even more matrimonial.

An example is that Henry the eight never divorced. It was his weddings which were annulled or voided by some supernatural authority that only somebody with gout can appreciate.

Unfortunately since the second world war matrimony has been globalised with human rights which are but an excuse for trial without jury and for social control through representational democracy and consultations like this rather than referendum. All houses are now matrimonial properties in the eyes of the (matrimonial) court, domestic abuse the encompassing device.

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Article 16 2) Marriage shall be entered into ONLY with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

Marriage should be no concern of secular government. The concern of representational government should be to be direct democracy. Marriage in a representational democracy is social control through the promotion of matrimony rather than through the expansion of democracy. . I would say that representational democracy and matrimony are going hand in hand since many of the Acts of the last thirty years are about their mutual admiration. I would say that both have stagnated. Marriage through divorce and through English and Welsh parliaments utter inability to handle referendum.

I suggest that direct democracy is the only forward. How about a referendum that matrimony should be separated from the state?

What are you going to do about the never marrieds?

I don't agree with the background para6 of R (Hodkin) v Registrar I would say that this history is a fantasy created by married judges to maintain a legal system without jurisdiction derived from trial by Jury.

Consider the second marriage of Sir Edward Coke which apparently broke many ceremonials and apparently had an officiant. The annulment that was sort was excommunication. There was never a one way to wed and the state in the past has always been religious. It has never been civil or secular.. But the main problem with any of the Supreme Court rulings is that the judges are all on contracts of employment which recognises marriage and spousal survivor pensions. They were and are all married. their opinions are just that.

I obviously have a problem as soon as I spot the use of belief because I "see" it as supernatural and can be "not" seen just in the taking up of positions by people. That it might at sometime be considered a sacrament or not, just put any supernatural element in and you have a ceremony with some belief at its core. Is belief consent?

In place of venue if the issue is in the building of the supernatural which is the concern of architects and then we are back to that as an example of a singular authority over a democratic authority and to consent. The only way consent can be brought out of the supernatural is only by a suitable quorum . An attraction of some really ancient buildings or places is that the creators are perceived multiple and ancestral, not that will stop any one still trying to accredit a singular authority, a creator who therefore must hold jurisdiction. God created heaven and earth. You have no chance outside that jurisdiction and no choices either.

Consultation Question 26:

Try not allowing married people government jobs. Contra the equalities act what.

Do you mean like celibacy. Am I a monk?

You see this all started because a monk Martin Luther married a nun, Katharina von Bora and used it to escape the jurisdiction of the "Catholic" State who were in the throws of making the clergy the necessity to conduct a marriage.

<https://oxfordre.com/religion/view/10.1093/acrefore/9780199340378.001.0001/acrefore-9780199340378-e-365>

Marriage was at the heart of Martin Luther's break with Rome and the Reformation that followed. He preached sermons praising marriage beginning in 1519 and several years later wrote his first formal treatise attacking the value of vows of celibacy and arguing that marriage was the best Christian life. In 1525 he followed his words by deeds and married a nun who had fled her convent, Katharina von Bora. What started as a marriage of principle and mutual esteem became one of affection and deep emotional bonds. Luther continued to attack the celibate life of Catholic clergy and nuns and to celebrate marriage as a godly estate throughout his career, in sermons, formal treatises, lectures, advice manuals, letters, comments on legal cases, and casual conversation. In all of these, he both praised marriage and family life and commented on its burdensome side, moving from theoretical speculations while he was a celibate monk to reflecting on his own experiences as he became a family man, though his basic theology of marriage did not change much after the early 1520s. His words were direct and blunt, even in formal treatises. Sexual desire was inescapable for all but a handful, he argued, so should be channeled into marriage. Vows of celibacy should be rendered void, and monasteries and convents should be closed or much reduced in size. He agreed with St. Augustine on the three purposes of marriage, in the same order of importance: the procreation of children, the avoidance of sin, and mutual help and companionship. He praised spousal love but asserted that the ideal of reciprocal love in marriage was not an ideal of equality. Proper marital households were hierarchical, for the wife was and had to be the husband's helpmeet and subordinate. Bearing children was the "precious and godly task" for which women were created, he wrote, and death in childbirth and even the deaths of children were part of God's plan, though he himself was devastated when his twelve-year-old daughter died.

They make nothing out of cohabitation. Who ever pays must see it as worth it. If they only charge a pittance for the wedding what should the charge for the divorce be. Martin Luther did not see all of these things coming "He agreed with St. Augustine on the three purposes of marriage, in the same order of importance: the procreation of children, the avoidance of sin, and mutual help and companionship. "

"As cities and territories in Germany and then beyond became Protestant, they passed marriage ordinances and established institutions to regulate marriage, turning to Luther for advice on such issues as divorce, desertion, secret engagements, and parental consent. In making their decisions, judges slowly applied the new Protestant ideas about marriage, which people also learned about through sermons, artwork, and pamphlets. In general, however, other than clerical marriage, actual Protestant marriage patterns were not that different from Catholic ones. They fit with secular values as well, for rural and urban residents of all religious persuasions regarded appropriate marriages and stable families as essential to the SOCIAL ORDER. "

"Proof of irregular marriage for social security purposes

If you are claiming social security benefits which require you to be married, or to have been married (for example to claim bereavement benefits), there is a special procedure which you can use to establish that you are, or have been, married by cohabitation with habit and repute.

You should inform the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) that you are, or have been, married by cohabitation with habit and repute when you make a claim for the benefit.

An acceptance by the DWP for social security purposes will not entitle you to claim that you are, or have been, married for any other purposes. If you need to establish that you are, or have been, married for any other purpose, you will have to take an action for declarator of marriage, as described above."

Is it because they are now divorced and therefore lumped in with the non married. In prison the dominant population is not married either through age and poverty of any kind. They all have a relationship with council tax as if living as husband and wife, with scams and arrears on account within most short prison sentences. Unfortunately they can't get married. because they can't see each other, possibly a vital part of consent.. Work out the the minimum number that is and call it self constrained. Better still start with one face to watch two backs, and those two to watch two more, do this until you arrive at enough numbers to represent all types then continue until all types have their eyes on the backs of all other types, then try three backs, four and more. Get the backs to marry by asking them to show consent by turning and facing the guard behind. Make a register.

Why don't you give who ever gets married a registered token which that they can sell to any person who can use it to find consent and give it to the proposed spouse who can can by their own free will take it to the register to show that they have conceited to be married and recognise the jurisdiction to which the registrar belongs. "Permitted" or "legally permitted" is not used in the UN Articles of human rights 1948

The word CONSENT is only used once in the articles of the UN and that is in 16(2) : " (2) Marriage shall be ENTERED into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.", "ONLY with the free and full consent". Could ONLY be read to mean that the rule of law is not required? What is legally permitted to do with Only. Why is the rule of law concerning its self with tiffing details of ENTRANCE into marriage and the pondering of freedom and consent.. The law has had no difficulty [REDACTED] in identifying a long term relationship, joint tenancy, inventing trustees and proclaiming separation and setting obscene penalties to maintain its authority. Why bother you mean legally impose

"To take place anywhere". Again the supernatural, a place taken anywhere. As a never married I do not see this "place of marriage" but it appears to be virtual and world wide, hence the UN declaration. The rule of law is after that consent, as it gets it nowhere else in the Articles, where the rule of law is treated as a presumption or law as a guardianship. The rule of law by the control of dissolution of marriage, and the rights within marriage that might be broken gets consent to be governed from the married and so over the family as mentioned in a very messy Article 16(1) that "found" a family. Families do not "found" themselves, more created and hopefully with real consent. I would say that the family cannot be dissolved and what follows is that each spouse has their own family and in no way should the two families be seen as belonging to the marriage. The "child of the family" only requires a genetic connection to their parents to identify their family. And this is where the representative democratic state is heading. Why don't you get on with it. The entrance requires the biometrics of the free and full Consenters. so that the child of the family can legally present their identity in this country which allows sale of land, article 17 property, to nationals, article 15 but whose other nationality does not allow equal access. The child of the families now brought up dual or more national belong to which community do they have right, article 18, 27 and 29 and how should those communities accept them?

If only stands the place is where ever the couple freely consents and that is precisely where they stand when they register (their genetic genome) because that will need a machine in this Time beyond paper.

The UN in the preamble mention rule of law. It comes from a committee dictate of people who show little concern for trial by jury should be the rule of law.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Why does the register want more than the year. The archbishop of Canterbury 1836 Hansard:

No less than three weeks' wages; and for what purpose was the notice to be given? It was for no benefit to him. What did it signify to him whether the birth was registered or not? It was required to be done just to gratify the statistical fancies of some few philosophers, in order that they might know how many persons died, and how many were born in a year. If they wished to obtain that information they ought to pay for it, and not make the poor man pay for it, with a penalty. But supposing the poor man omitted to give notice, he was told, that for some reason or other the child should be afterwards registered. Now, observe the peculiar correctness and care of the framers of the Bill not to give trouble. If, after fifteen days, the child was to be registered, some person who was present at the birth must attend the registrar to testify to the birth. It often happened that only three, and sometimes only two persons were present at the birth—the mother being one. How was it possible to get the nurse several weeks afterwards to meet the registrar, who had duties to perform that required him always to be going about the country. Besides this, the poor man, by attending the registrar, would be convicting himself of not having given notice of the birth within eight days; and he would be liable to a charge of 7s. 6d. for the delay. That was not all; for at the time the notice was given, it was required that the name of the child should be given. Now, it was perfectly well known, that, in point of practice, it was not usual to determine within eight days what the name of the child should be. It very often happened, too, that the name was changed. This change the Bill treated almost as an offence; for if notice were not given of any change made in the name of the child, the poor man was liable to an additional penalty of 5l. Was not that a monstrous provision? But it was worse than that; for although he must pay the 5l. penalty, he could not get the child registered at all. The Bill positively said that he should not. Surely this was not the way to prepare Acts of Parliament

1. Common law does not need any wedding venue, registration,

The Act for the better prevention....led to a boom in some parish churches in the 19 century? Now they are all pretty redundant most of the time and a money drain.

<https://www.ons.gov.uk/chartimage?uri=/peoplepopulationandcommunity/birthsdeathsandmarriages/marriagecohabitationandcivilpartnerships/bulletins/marriage>

Venue is a meaningless place. Fleet weddings were at the Fleet prison because the bishops did not have jurisdiction over the vicars? I don't know if that meant they could not fine them or that the fines were small or that the vicars did not have to pay fees to the bishop? It was popular leading to the invention that marriage was brought into the secular court by the 1754 Act even though it would appear that common law marriage was also available and divorce did not exist for the masses. Some of the affect is that the couples appear not to have wanted to be married in their own parish as pointed out by the Archbishop of Canterbury

<https://hansard.parliament.uk/Lords/1836-07-11/debates/c97322cd-6965-4592-a414-5f82fcfd06d5/RegistrationOfBirthsMarriagesAndDeaths>

Apart from parents there could have been other legal impediments like the fact that they had cohabited or views on virginity. [REDACTED] Like Purge I find this to be a religious view. [REDACTED] somewhere I believe that contrition involved standing about a church in a white shroud holding a white wand at specified times, I believe to show that you were a fornicator and that the copulating was not a marriage consummation but I am yet to find where I read that? I would say that the civil courts are fully religious and you law commissioners are no different than a council of Trent. <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Contrition>

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The council tax is based on marriage, current law is bound to enforce the tax and presumably profits from it.

"the chargeable period" means the period consisting of the days which fall within the financial year concerned and on which a person is liable to pay council tax; and two persons are married to each other if they are a man and a woman—

(a)who are married to each other; or

(b)who are not married to each other but are living together as husband and wife.

Why has that had to be said that way? The whole thing could be tied up by using "cohabit".

The agents in LAs also control planning and designation of those properties for council tax. If the tax that derives from these properties is based on living together as husband and wife it follows that bias is felt towards matrimony by the state which makes the state unlawful to everybody who does not expect to be married.

There is a 25% single person discount, due every month, relevant to "lone" parents and illegal cohabitants and is policed by the local authority by yearly survey. People are well aware when they cohabit that there will be accusations of relationships for council tax purposes. That it appears that the numbers of people living alone is increasing, I would predict that as council tax goes up so will the number of people claiming 25% discount. The spare bedroom tax is another social control. The religion of this country that property belongs to the relationship originates in modern matrimony. I would blame the Married woman's property Act mostly for the fact that it still exists albeit in a very reduced state. It should have been called the woman's property act and better still the property act. It is the type of legislation that hinders the concept of common law marriage.

Single people ,lone parents are paying 25% more than they should? The argument in the welfare state is that if that leads to poverty, benefits will kick in but people get stuck in the status that they find themselves in. If you have applied for lone parent or single statues it is a financial burden to change the status. If the split is lone parents and all the rest lone parents must be disproportionately subsidising matrimony. Did lone parents vote for the 25% discount. I don't think so. How did matrimony get this massive hand on social control and convert it into tax. Just that a society would allow this type of social engineering is Vile. I would say singularly responsible for the mental heath of the vast majority of the impoverished and for many suicides and all senses of identity. There is no love for the land in this paradigm. Everything is a desperate war of relationships because of Arrears and debt.

The matrimonial view is very little else going on in the cohabiting and lone parent families than can be explained by this commonly found study on domestic violent in primates <https://www.livescience.com/48743-aggressive-chimps-reproduce-more.html>

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

None. Local authorities are another supernatural term. Why should anything be a potential benefit to a supernatural state?

Local authorities...control anti social behaviour geared by the 25% council tax discount to encourage two adults to live together as if husband and wife. The living together as if husband and wife then affects the type of housing stock and infrastructure required. The country is being covered by a monotonous suburban sprawl based on matrimony.

You Lawyers and academics are obviously off the opinion that a recognised exclusive state of "marriage", bound by a wedding, is of benefit to humanity. But it is exclusive to all those not included in your ambitions.

Simply recognise common law marriage and justify your jurisdiction through trial by jury from the Inclusive society that common law would create.

Only allow overseas if the overseas jurisdiction allows the ownership of land there by foreign nationals

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I would say it was self evident that dual nationalism is powering a lot of the immigration into and out of this this country but you are leaving the non dual national no birth right save for the welfare state which might be alright unless your a single national and start to notice a disadvantage in being able to buy land overseas.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

I am in the early process of planning a wedding, and it saddens me that I would not be able to have a legally binding wedding with the celebrant of my choice without either finding another day to book one of the fairly rare 2+2 slots at a register office or paying hundreds of pounds more for a registrar to come out to my first choice of venue - and even then that'd limit us to where on the property we could get married anyway.

I also see couples struggle with wanting to hold their weddings their way, surrounded by nature or in places that are meaningful to them, and with rituals of their beliefs such as handfastings, without being able to just have that as their legally binding ceremony.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Outdoor weddings, particularly with independent celebrants, would have been a perfect choice for couples still wanting to hold their weddings during the summer of 2020 as guests could easily social distance outside and it would be a lot safer - but of course these would not have been legal and so the couples, should they still want to have legal marriages, would have to go to a register office. From what I saw online many register offices have fairly small rooms, and this meant that the social distancing allowed for barely even 10 people to be present and very sad looking rooms for what should be a really happy occasion. I believe lots of register offices were and still are overrun with a backlog of couples wishing to get married, which if independent celebrants were allowed to do could take some of that burden off.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This requirement surely causes issues for couples who perhaps live apart prior to their marriage, if one of them is from another registration district, so abolishing that requirement seems like a good idea.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

So many other legal requirements or documents are done online - car tax, getting a new passport or driving license, even most people's banking, etc - so why not have at least the first part online so that couples have the option to make life easier for themselves, especially if they have to fit in person meetings around work or child care.

A separate in-person interview later would presumably mean that the couple could book this in advance via giving notice online or by post, making use of the time when they are able to attend easiest.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

Some couples wish to get married quickly, so if the paperwork and legal requirements can be done in just three days between the in-person interview and the date from which the couples can get married then that is how many days it should be.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Especially given the circumstances of COVID-19, having the ability for interviews to take place remotely seems like an obvious choice. This would also mean that people who perhaps cannot travel as easily or have other commitments, or perhaps are needing to stay home for their health, have the option to do so for at least the first interview.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

The more possibilities for giving notice the better, so this seems like something that should continue.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the notices can be given online as well then it makes sense that, if they are to be available to the public anyway as they currently are, this could be displayed online too.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A year is a good amount of time for the schedule to be valid for.

Consultation Question 11:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think it would be good to have the officiant on the schedule, but there are likely a number of issues that could occur if it was issued fairly far in advance - the officiant could get sick, retire, any number of things that would mean having it that set in stone would cause issues for the couple. But as long as this can be amended with a substitute officiant I don't think there would be too much of an issue.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It makes sense for substitute officiants to be able to officiate at the wedding, because there will always be unforeseen circumstances that could stop the named officiant from being able to attend.

Please share your views below:

Yes, if the couple wishes to have another officiant take over from the original one on the schedule then they should be free to make that choice.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If civil marriages are split between England/Wales and Scotland/N. Ireland/Ireland then it makes sense that Anglican weddings should be as well so that it is a fair playing field for all, regardless of religion or what type of ceremony the couple wishes to have.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

War damage is a hundred year old problem, so it does not seem like a fit rule for the modern day.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

If for civil marriages the notice is to be displayed online, then I would think it only fair that banns to authorise an Anglican wedding should be published somewhere online too.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

1. If no one else is checking the evidence then the clergy must surely be the ones to do so. If not then a register office should be the ones to do so.
2. If other couples having civil marriages are able to do in-person interviews together rather than separately, then I don't see why the clergy should need to meet with each of the couple separately rather than together.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Civil notices of marriages to my understanding get undertaken by the couple together, so I don't see why they should have to make separate ones in order to be granted the licence for an Anglican wedding.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

If other religions have to be preceded by civil preliminaries and do not have their own preliminaries then it is only fair that they are all undertaken in the same way.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Civil weddings are what registration offices are trained for and there are other officiants for other types of weddings, so it makes sense for registration officers to only be able to officiate at civil weddings.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I do not see why more than one trained and licensed professional would need to be in attendance to officiate the wedding.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as other religious organisations and non-religious organisations are able to have members recognised as officiants too.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Other organisations should be able to nominate officiants, so that couples have a wider choice of ways they can get legally married that reflect their views and beliefs.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Yes. There are bound to be maybe political, right-wing, or even 'hate' groups, that possibly fall into the definition of non-religious belief organisations, so any that infringe on human rights or modern liberties should not be considered for officiating at weddings.

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I believe that the first point, especially in COVID-19 circumstances, would need looking at again as an organisation may have hundreds of members, but if they live all over the country even getting 20 together regularly might be a difficult task. Would this meeting include online/virtual meet-ups for example?

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes. If an organisation for example goes against LGBT+ people or gay marriage, or has issues with "mixed" couples or other such moral beliefs then I do not believe they belong in the groups that should be able to nominate officiants.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes. It makes sense that people who attain a certain position within the organisation should be able to be nominated as officiants, as well as just nominating individuals who the organisation believe are able to do it.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A list of all nominated officiants makes sense, as it is then a place for couples to check that their chosen officiant is on there.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes. If independent officiants meet the requirements and standards then why should they not be authorised and included on the list of officiants.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, the organisations have a duty to make sure that the officiant is trained and up to standard.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with the first two points fully, but for point three I believe the Registrar General, before determining the content, should at least consult with independent officiants to see if the training and development they would suggest fits with the purposes of the officiants being independent and able to conduct weddings in a way that non-independent officiants cannot, e.g. weddings with multiple faith and beliefs intertwined or no religious or spiritual aspects at all.

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If the officiants, particularly of non-religious organisations, are not being paid by the organisation in a standard way and all of their income comes from weddings/funerals and other ceremonies then they should be able to have a business from it - as unlike say a priest who might be paid a wage by the church for other services and prayers etc, the non-religious officiants might not have that other income or stability within their organisation.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Independent officiants should be free to set the fee that they feel is right for their time and skill set spent working on the wedding ceremony before the date and for officiating at the wedding itself.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

But it would be good if people are able to switch between these types of officiants (independent, religious or non-religious) via an outlined process, as people may change beliefs over the course of their lives and they should be able to switch the type of officiant they are to reflect this if their belief system has changed.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Officiants should all have a standard they work to so that couples know they are getting a ceremony of quality, but it should have as much of their personality and fun in it as they want.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance yes, but it should not infringe on the freedom of couples to have the ceremony they want and to allow the officiant to match that - say with spiritual aspects, multiple faith traditions, or no rituals or traditions, etc.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Organisations will know best how they want their officiants to undertake their responsibilities, so it makes sense for them to be the ones to monitor their standard.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but this should only come after raising the issue to the body who nominated them and seeing if they are able to review the nominated officiant first and either retrain them or act themselves before the General Register Office makes the decision to de-authorise them.

Consultation Question 39:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If the independent officiant is part of the Wedding Celebrancy Commission or a celebrant organisation within that (e.g. Fellowship of Professional Celebrants, Fellowship of Independent Celebrants, United Kingdom Society of Celebrants, etc) it should be down to them to monitor the officiant in the same way religious or non-religious organisations do. If however the officiant is not part of one of these organisations, then it should be the General Register Office who is mainly responsible for this monitoring.

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I don't see what setting a time limit would achieve.

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Would officiants of religious or non-religious groups authorisation lapse if they failed to engage in continuing personal development? I think that this needs to be the same for independent officiants too, so either they all must have proof of continued professional development or it is unfair to expect that of just independent officiants.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would give couples the freedom to have their ceremony the way they want, taking all their spiritual beliefs and personalities into account.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would put all weddings on an even playing field, and give couples the freedom to choose what type of wedding they would like.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would give couples the freedom to have a civil ceremony but with aspects that perhaps reflect their families beliefs that they do not fully hold to and so would not want a fully religious ceremony for.

Please share your views below:

Readings, poems and hymns should be allowed.

Symbolic rituals if they are what the couple would like, past just a standard ring exchange.

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If a couple wish to have a more private ceremony without public access being allowed then they should have that right.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would give couples a lot of freedom to have their wedding in a place where they are comfortable or holds great meaning to them. Given COVID-19 too it would make sense for weddings to be held outside so that people can socially distance easier and more safely.

Please share your views below:

As long as the officiant is happy with the location chosen by the couple, it is a safe place, and permission has been granted by the land owner or the ship/boat/plane owner then I see no reason as to why weddings should be limited in particular venues - they should be able to take place anywhere.

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

As long as the venue owners accept it then couples should be free to hold their weddings there, even if their beliefs do not match with what the venue organisation believes in.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

They will be the ones holding the wedding in that location and will likely be the ones with the opportunity to visit it and make sure it is safe and that permission has been granted, so it makes sense for them to have that responsibility.
If not then it should lie with the couple.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes to it being safe, but what one person classes as dignified another might not agree with, so that would need to be more thoroughly defined.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Locations being safe should be obvious, but guidance as to what "dignified" represents would be useful, and it would need to account for couples different tastes and beliefs to make sure it is not discriminatory.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It makes sense to also have pre-approved locations, as that would possibly save time and effort on the officiants part making sure it is a safe location and the couples would know that it is a good location to use for their wedding.

Please share your views below:

Maybe it should be similar to how the current registered venues system works, just not cost as much money and be a far quicker process.
Perhaps it could even be done just by a set number of officiants who use that location for a wedding in a year - say 25 weddings happen there in a year, with 25 different officiants, then that is a clear indicator that it would be an ideal location for pre-approval as it has been used before and deemed safe by the officiants.

It should be easier for these people to get married if that is their wish. The ability to get legally married at a persons home or in the place they are being kept should they be housebound or terminally ill would be great for them. The ability to consent through means other than spoken allowed would be good too, for anyone who has say lost their voice through surgery or the like.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Current law means that many couples end up having two weddings - a legal one and one that actually reflects who they are as a couple and their beliefs. I believe that some may well be discouraged from getting married because of this, or end up having a wedding that they do not feel happy with.

I believe, particularly at this time during COVID-19 when register offices are overwhelmed, that these proposals would enable more couples to get legally married and even under more normal circumstances some couples may discover a way they could get legally married that they couldn't before and feel more willing to have such a wedding.

Currently many independent celebrants miss out on income and providing a couple with what they want as the couples are misled by registrars who tell them that only they can hold ceremonies at certain venues which is untrue, especially as couples already know that they would not be getting a legal wedding with a celebrant.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. There currently are not enough 2+2 slots for couples to have the register office wedding they would like, meaning many end up paying more for a service they did not want in the first place.
2. The costs of legally marrying on approved premises seem very high, as registrars charge a lot to come out usually and this might put couples off or leave them making hard decisions about the type of wedding they want.
4. I know of many wonderful outdoor venues that can do amazing weddings for couples on a cheaper budget and more to their taste, but these are not able to be legally binding under the current law and restrict choice for what the couple wants.
5. Many couples end up having two weddings, the ceremony that reflects them truly with all the spiritual beliefs they may want included and in a location they want, and the legal wedding at a register office. This obviously means costs are higher, and couples may feel pressured to choose one or the other but feel they cannot have the wedding they want if it will not also be legally recognised.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Having more availability of 2+2 weddings at register offices would give couples the opportunity to save money if they just wanted the legal part without all of the ceremony.

Couples could save a lot of money if they were able to just have the one, legally binding wedding that reflects who they are and their beliefs and is held in a location that they want such as outdoors. They would have no need for a separate, legally recognised wedding if the original ceremony of their choice was legally binding, which could save them hundreds of pounds.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Many smaller venues are currently unable to justify the cost of the current approved premises license, one such example being a friend of mine who wanted to get legally married at her family's pub but realised it was not possible for them to put up the money for it and meet the requirements and is now stuck with what she wishes to do as they are not able to have their wedding in a meaningful place to them. Smaller venues such as these would be in a much better standing under the proposed reforms.

My understanding is that registration officers attending weddings on approved premises are harder to organise than independent celebrants due to their other commitments, and that they are generally more expensive.

Many venues could benefit from the proposed scheme, especially those who are mainly outdoor based locations. Businesses around this such as tent/marquee hires, food vans, etc that all help with outdoor weddings would likely benefit from the increased opportunities that these types of weddings being legal would offer. There would likely be many businesses that could diversify to benefit from the increased number of weddings, such as say farms who might already struggle or already diversify with summer events and pick-your-own schemes.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Local authorities in control of the register offices are currently overwhelmed by couples trying to get married now who had to postpone during COVID-19.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I believe that local authorities would benefit from being able to have their register offices diversify their role to include lists of nominated officiants, and to be able to do work online to do with the giving of notice - work that could even be done from home if current circumstances like those around COVID-19 were about. Local authorities could also benefit from many venues in their areas perhaps drawing more people in for weddings, particularly if outdoor weddings are approved as this would help coastal places that may currently be suffering from lack of tourism and rural areas too.

There could be a big potential benefit if people are able to get married at sea, as many within the maritime industry could diversify their trade and open up new avenues of business.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

Government and local authorities could benefit from new fees to do with nominated officials, pre-approved venues, etc - as well as the benefit from more weddings happening and so more money just generally being spent.

Businesses would have the option to diversify into weddings, and those already in the wedding industry could have more weddings to cater for - both meaning that more money could be brought in.

Religious and non-religious organisations would benefit from a more even playing field, and know that couples are happy choosing their types of weddings and are not feeling forced into it - therefore they may even pay more for these types of weddings if they have true freedom to choose what they want the wedding ceremony to entail.

Independent officiants could get a large benefit from being able to do weddings legally, as currently sometimes they do not get work from couples who feel forced to only have a legal ceremony if they cannot afford that and a ceremony that better reflects their personalities and where they would like to hold their wedding.

Couples would benefit massively from this, and would ultimately save money if they have more freedom to choose where to hold their weddings and who will take them. The mental cost will be a lot lower too, as they would not have to perhaps shelve their beliefs or personality for a legally binding ceremony. Couples may also be willing to spend more on just the one wedding that reflects what they want rather than two, therefore increasing the possible benefits to other businesses in the wedding industry.

We wanted a legal handfasting ceremony outside in our local woodland. This was not allowed, so we had to settle for civil ceremony in our local Register Office.

It was not "us" it felt totally cold and unfeeling and we felt discriminated against because of our Pagan beliefs.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

As a celebrant, this has affected my work as no ceremonies were obviously allowed.

It was also heartbreaking to see the emotional anguish and stress that my couples are going through because of the restrictions and confusing information given out by the government!

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Please expand on your answer:

I believe a period of notice is required if it is for the purpose of carrying out any legal checks for their right to marry.

If not and it is just "admin" then I'm not so sure it is still appropriate anymore.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems more practical for busy modern lives, but I still agree for legal identity purposes that they should be seen in person as required.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

As and when required by the couple, life is not lived "by appointment".

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I'm unsure with this, but yes, if concerns arise then yes, in person interviews should be carried out.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, I believe that freedom of choice should continue.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If it is safe to do so, then yes, I can't see an issue there.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If that does not cause any administration back logs, then I would consider that to be fine.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree that back up officiant should be put in place in case of emergencies etc.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Most definitely, there should always be a 'Plan B'.

Please share your views below:

As a trained celebrant I have often stood in for colleagues with similar training experience, across the country who for personal or circumstantial reasons have been unable to perform the ceremony.

It has always gone smoothly as our scripts and planning notes are prepared so that anyone could take over in the event of an emergency.

Consultation Question 13:

Please expand on your answer:

I'm unsure as I'm not aware of the legalities of this, so cannot make an knowledgeable comment.

Consultation Question 14:

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;

Please expand on your answer:

I am unsure of the reasons for the difference, so I can only suggest that if couples wish to be married in their faith, then their requirement should be followed providing there is no discrimination by doing so.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, most definitely, in order to protect all involved and ensure the ceremony is completely legal.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I believe that trained Celebrants, with further appropriate training, would be more than capable of providing legal Civil ceremonies according to the law.

There is a great demand for couples wishing to have this kind of service in unlicensed/outdoor venues.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I believe they can provide the service singularly.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If it is appropriate for their faith, then yes.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Our country is so wonderfully diverse and it is this that propels that needs changing the most!

Spiritual and multi-faith ceremonies are in high demand!

Our laws must now reflect society's modern choices.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Total freedom to express yourselves according to your beliefs is an absolute must!

Please share your views below:

I personally think whilst a list would be a good idea, officiant should be able to register as an individual as well as organisations, as many Celebrants/Officiant work in an independent capacity.

This list should be granted on merit, qualifications and previous proven experience.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think for organisations that would be a reasonable starting point.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

I can't fully agree, because of my belief in freedom of expression, fully as your choice of wording is too vague.

Without further expansion on "public policy" and "morality" I'm not sure who can judge the limitations there.

If it breaks the law, then obviously yes, I do agree that they should be excluded.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Again, I'm not sure what is meant by "office" in either group, so can't answer this. This needs to be expanded upon.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A general register is an excellent idea and I believe will give couples a great deal more confidence.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely!

As a celebrant, I, like the majority of my colleagues, would be more than happy to go through the application for any list in order to be able to provide a legal ceremony for potential clients.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely, for the protection of their clients and for the professionalism and reputation of their organisation.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think fully qualified celebrants most definitely should and those that are not with years of experience behind them, should be able to apply, with client and professional supplier testimonials and hold relevant insurances etc to back up their application.

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I believe it is a service and they should be recompensed for their time and expenses.

It may provide a valuable source of income for them and especially their officiants.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I've had to disagree as you have not explained what a "conflict of interest" would involve.

As for fees, there should be no limit as independent officiant put a massive amount of time, effort and expense into their ceremonies compared to current religious and civil ceremonies. This cannot be standardised under one set fee.

Consultation Question 34:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The whole point of being independent is to enable us the freedom to perform the types of ceremonies that our clients are looking for.

There is no reason why we cannot perform the legal aspects during our ceremonies so long as we follow the guidelines.

For any ceremonies that fall outside of that, then clients would be made aware they would be having a "celebratory" ceremony only and it would not be legally binding.

The majority of clients only want freedom of choice, any 'extremes' are incredibly rare and are often not worked with because of the personal choice of the celebrant not to do so.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

When it comes to any legal declaration and vows section of the ceremony, then yes, I agree.

As celebrants, we love the whole idea of marriage and all that it entails, so yes, we take that part of the ceremony very seriously.

This should not lose sight of the wishes of the client to have personalised ceremonies, or else it will become cold and unfeeling and totally missing the whole point of change!

Consultation Question 36:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance and training on how to correctly deliver and record the legal requirements, then yes I agree.

In order to keep the free and independent nature that our potential clients are attracted by, I don't think an already trained and qualified celebrant requires much more than this. Anything more would be restrictive.

Consultation Question 37:

No

Please expand on your answer:

In the main yes, but I believe independent requests/complaints should be considered.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

So long as it is fair and unbiased and there is options for appeal.

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think regular application reviews, perhaps every 3-5 years would be appropriate.

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with CPD. It would depend upon the cost of CPD and to the extent of what is required. A lot of independent celebrants work to small budgets and on a part time basis, so I don't think it should be compulsory as part of the list registration. I do think lapse of insurances should apply to your suggestion though.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

It would make everyone's life and choices if there was equality and freedom of movement across all sectors.

If it is agreed and appropriate to all parties involved, then I do not see an issue?!

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If it is agreed as part of a risk assessment and is safe and appropriate for all to attend.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Safety, most definitely.

"Dignified" would be assessed on the basis of the individuals as what is appropriate for some, may not apply to others.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes to a point, all guidance is welcome, but based on client choices and officiant based on experience and common sense.p

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Although point 4 i feel is discriminatory and exclusive towards religious same-sex couples.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I believe these are administrative/human errors that could be corrected at a later time.

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree to all apart from my own personal opinion regarding religion, same sex couples and their faith.

Consultation Question 59:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure as emergencies around life/work restrictions may prevent them from cohabiting. Is there a time limit where thi should apply.

I can understand the reasoning, especially in sham marriages, but would need more clarification.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure as I dont know what legal rights a long term committed coue would lose by doing this?

Consultation Question 60:

Please share your views below:

None that I am aware of?

Consultation Question 63:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No, sometimes these ceremonies are carried out at very short notice and at very distressing times.
There should be special measures put in place to avoid to much red tape and to be sympathetic to their needs.

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Simplicity and an unbiased approach would be much more user friendly for all involved.

Consultation Question 65:

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with no 2. It is costly enough caring for someone in hospital as it is. Compassionate fees are a must and wavered where budget is limited, it should not be prohibited and could be allowed to be paid off after the ceremony and spread the cost.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Most people I have come across want to get married, only a tiny percentage just want to commit to each other.

The restrictions around legal ceremonies make it very difficult for people to have the kind of wedding they want, that puts an awful lot of people off. They don't want to settle and they don't like the idea of being dictated to on what they regard as a totally personal choice and what love means to them!

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The lack of availability of the statutory 2+2 ceremony is extremely restrictive and discriminatory both in terms of lifestyle choices and budget.

In regards to legal venues and cost etc, the couples are prepared to pay what is in their budget to have their legal ceremony on the same day. It is the restriction of choice I regard as the type of venue and the restrictions within the current legal marriage.

This is why celebrant ceremonies are becoming so popular as the choice they offer is broader, more accepting, less prejudiced and more value for money.

The distress to the couples is immense having to pay twice to have the legal marriage contract ceremony and then having the personalised ceremony on top, so they can have the type of venue and content that is personal to them.

This then excludes those on a smaller budget and they have to settle for an option based on price alone, and not have what they wished for, which is not fair.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Increasing legal ceremonies, especially the statutory basic legal ceremonies would help enormously.

Savings measured in terms of less stress and ease of use for the couples would be amazing. I can see that if a better flexible service is offered it would serve to boost bookings I'm sure.

Again refer to my first point on separate legal ceremonies. I would add that more co-operation and flexibility with working alongside celebrants and providing the legal aspects of a ceremony at the same time, would also be incredibly welcome so that couples can have what they want on the day.

But, ultimately when it comes to being cost effective for couples and service providers alike, it would just be simpler and easier all round if every type of officiant could perform legal ceremonies.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

I have no opinion of their costs, they must charge what they need to in order to deliver that service at a profit that is suitable for that department, but also on a point of scale, as public servants to their community, they should be obliged to provide a ceremony that is suitable for all budgets so that no one is discriminated against.

I think more registrars should be employed or indeed sub-contract the work out to celebrants who are already trained to reduce the backlog and also provide a wider service. Costs are relative to the type of services required.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

1) So long as it is above board then I think this would allow for a much more free flowing and time efficient service.

2) These need to be increased or see point 3

3) We are already allowed to offer ceremonies in these venues. However, it would be the most suitable conclusion to either allow the registration service to sub contract their work out to officiant to do their ceremonies and be paid on a casual contractor basis. Even better, listen to the demands of the clients, the couples and allow the religious and non religious officiant to carry out legal ceremonies!

4) Everyone would benefit from changing the laws. The Registrar, the officiant and celebrants, the venues, licensed and non licensed and the knock effect to the wedding industry as a whole. Covid is destroying this industry, it needs a massive boost now!

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I can say no more other than I consider it restrictive and discriminatory and incredibly outdated with modern society.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It could improve their numbers and efficiency making it a more user friendly service and make their clients happier people!

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It is too restrictive within the UK and free movement should be allowed.

2) It could become less bureaucratic, but keep the ID checks in place for the safety of all involved, but make the process less 'red tape' and better customer service. It would be a massive boost not only to the wedding industry but also the tourist industry too!

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1) It would make the process less stressful and it will just make people happy!

2) A boost to the wedding and the tourist industry! We have a great history, beautiful spaces, wonderful beaches, how could it not work for the benefit of all?!

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I have no real knowledge of this, but again, if it gives people their dream day and makes them happy and is easy to conduct, why not? Again it could also be another source of income for our ailing fishing and tourist industry!

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

See above

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

The couples are suffering the most, some having g to pay twice to get what they want.

The registrar service should offer more statutory ceremonies. It would boost profits give clients more options to choose from Officiants of all types would increase profits and scope to work in conjunction with the registrars giving the couples what they need.

The boost financially to non licenced and alternative venues would be incredible. It would boost employment and also increase work for other wedding related businesses! Plus increase to the tourist industry!

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The current laws force couples to have weddings that are not in line with their beliefs or values if they wish for the marriage to be legal.

By allowing independent officiants to marry a couple legally and by opening up the locations in which a wedding ceremony is possible will increase the number of couples getting legally married

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The cost and availability of a simple 2 x 2 service varies greatly between areas, and often couples are pressured into having a larger service or told incorrectly that they can not have any one other than themselves officiate their ceremony.

By allowing couples to marry anywhere it will drive down the cost of venues as couples have more options and weddings and marriages will become more affordable to all.

Please expand on your answer:

Such a person already has the extra costs of living associated with chronic sickness or disability.

Consultation Question 84:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I see some merit in a fee for independent officiants, but I am opposed to fees (NEW!) for officiants trained and appointed by robust bodies, for example, churches, Quakers, Jews and (presumably) other faith bodies and humanists. Such fees would be a burden on small bodies. Society is promoting marriage and should not place any unnecessary obstacles in the way.

This could allow discrimination against religious organisations that have a strong environmental ethos, including Buddhists who have religious motivations for supporting non-violent direct action to prevent climate change. Arguably it could also be interpreted to mean that the Catholic church should be excluded, since their opposition to abortion and contraception is plainly contrary to public policy and at times contrary to law (transmission of HIV has been held to be a crime in numerous criminal cases, and some boroughs prohibit religious protests at abortion clinics).

I cannot see any logical reason from preventing someone acting in two capacities, e.g. on behalf of a Buddhist organisation and on behalf of a non-religious environmental or animal rights organisation. Those beliefs are compatible and many Buddhists share both.

To me this wording seems unnecessarily vague, pompous, and anachronistic. If you need wording on this issue then it must be modernised, e.g. that marriage is a lasting and meaningful commitment.

Providing the guidance is wholly non-discriminatory and non-binding.

Consultation Question 37:

Consultation Question 52:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I consider these requirements vague and anachronistic. Safe for whom according to which standards? Need it be child-proofed and wheelchair accessible? What about steep stairs and uneven floors in older buildings? What on earth do you mean by dignified - is it wholly subjective?

No

Please expand on your answer:

I consider this far too restrictive. I am a mountaineer and rock climber, as is my partner (and many of our friends). Outdoor locations that are safe for me and my partner might be unsafe for those who are not skilled mountaineers. If all those attending will be safe then why prevent us marrying in a location simply because unskilled people might be unable to access it safely e.g. due to steep or slippery ground. See note above about uneven footing, wheelchair access etc.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The current law is far too restrictive and prevents people having weddings that align with their personal values. The nicest weddings I have attended were in a private garden (in Canada) and a humanist ceremony in a private home (in Scotland), and both reflected the values of those marrying. By contrast traditional English weddings are often so sexist that I find them offensive -- this was true of my own civil ceremony, where the order of the vows was inflexible and based on sex (why??) and I was required to name the father who abandoned me as a child but not given space to name the mother who birthed and raised me. In my view it is essential that the ceremony becomes far more flexible so as to reflect the reality of current society, including gender equality, and greater diversity of beliefs.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I strongly object to the idea of a postcode lottery for fees, or for having to pay some bureaucrat to travel to the intended location to determine if he thinks it is safe. As specified, my partner and I are mountaineers. We should be entitled to marry on a hill in the Lake District if that location is safe for the physical capabilities and mountain experience of the attendees and aligns with our values. In my view it is wholly irrelevant whether a penpusher who will not be attending the weddings thinks the location is 'safe' and I would be outraged to be charged a fee for him to assess the alleged safety.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There is a shortage of authorised venues in many areas, so the venues tend to book out many months in advance and the catering nearby costs an absolute fortune. Allowing weddings in a greater range of venues will increase choice, reduce waiting times and greatly reduce the cost.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems very old-fashioned, and given the current restrictions in place all over the country due to Covid-19, requiring couples to be in certain places for certain time periods is unnecessary, unfair, and sometimes impossible (unless they want to break the law!).

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I work in a Hotel that hosts weddings, and since the Covid-19 pandemic, we have had couples say to us that our local Registry Office (Enfield) has a 3-month back log to clear through before anyone new can book an appointment. This is unfair for couples, causing delays to wedding plans, and means we and other wedding venues can be left struggling for business (in a time where venues are already struggling).

Furthermore, with Covid-19 restrictions in place, face-to-face meetings can be tricky to arrange or to attend. Online notice, or event online meetings in the first instance are a very easy way to avoid these issues.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

I believe seven days is not an unreasonable amount of time for the couple to have to wait, and gives enough time for the necessary paperwork to be checked over.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I think remote interviews should definitely take place. I understand the need for possible in-person interviews in the cases of uncertainty or other issues, but for the majority of couples, remote interviews should work perfectly well.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, why not! As long as an interview then takes place, and the relevant documentation is all in order

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This could allow members of the public to object to the marriage if they felt necessary, and as long as couples are consulted before the decision is taken, i.e., in case if displaying this marriage would be of harm to the couple or any close family.

Consultation Question 10:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

under 'usual' circumstances I would agree that 12 months would be a suitable amount of time, as most couples have often chosen their venue by the time confirm the registrar/celebrant time. However, given all the disruption that the Coronavirus Pandemic has caused, many venues are now booked up for at least the next 12-18 months (due to lots of postpone weddings). Couples now looking to get married are possibly looking for 2022 (if not 2021 weekdays), so 12 months is a relatively short time period.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Identifying the officiant will provide confirmation to the couple, officiant and venue that everything is 'booked', and allowing amended schedules where necessary will bring peace of mind to couples where plans have changed last minute

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Should the arranged officiant not be able to carrying out the wedding, due to a unforeseen circumstance, it is unfair that the couple should have to disrupt all of their plans. Allowing another officiant to step in would save a lot of heartache and money!

Please share your views below:

I think so, yes, as long as the couple and venue are happy with this.

Please share your views below:

I definitely believe weddings should be permitted to take place outside, particularl given the pandemic and the change to outdoor events! Being outside can allow couples to perhaps invite more people, as a venue may likley have a lower capacity.

I don't believe that it would ne necessary to allow weddings on bodies of water, or in the air.

With regards to private homes, I believe this would be important for couples where one or both of them are terminally ill, as they may wish to get married before they pass away and doing this in their private home may be the only way possible. However, allowing weddings in private homes raises the issue of allowing public access, and objections to weddings.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

When we got married (legally), 43 years ago, we wanted to have the ceremony at a specific church. Neither of us were resident in that parish and we had to go to Westminster to buy a special license.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I am an Independent Celebrant. All of my client couples have had to postpone their special days - including my own son. It has been a very sad and stressful time for all of them.

The process for them is usually to book one of the short, legal ceremonies which every county is obliged to make available. These are often on a weekday and often involves them in taking time off work.

Once the legal marriage has taken place, I can officiate at a venue and on a date chosen by the couple. There is a huge backlog for appointments for the legal ceremonies, which has meant that even with weddings being back on the agenda - albeit with the 30 limit - couples are not going ahead with my service. All have postponed and given me a new date for next year.

So many couples have lost an awful amount of money through the process.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

Until early last year, when I returned to live in the UK, I was a Government Registered Independent Celebrant in New Zealand and I have seen that system work well.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

It sounds like a great idea, but the question arises as to how people would be singled out for in-person interviews.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, I believe that it should still be possible. Any alteration is making the process unnecessarily difficult for relevant couples. As long as the marriage is properly carried out and accurately registered I cannot see any reason why not.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

At the moment, very few people would be aware that notices are displayed at all. With it being on line it is open to all. Of course, if there is a risk of harm to the couple, other means are justified.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples have more choice that way.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the couple have a reason to change their minds about the Officiant or the Officiant is unexpectedly unable to officiate, they do not then have to go through the same process again and incur extra costs.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This was the practice in New Zealand. The Officiant would have to sign the document and write the reason on the form. Each Celebrant had a number which would be on the form and if, for some reason, another Celebrant officiated then their number would also be recorded as well as their signature.

Please share your views below:

No, I think that it should have to be only in an emergency.

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If the family are from those areas and the banns are seen as a part of the tradition, it may be nice for the Minister to announce them in the way that people have become accustomed to. This should probably be at the choice of the couple. If that happens, I think it should also be done in whichever location the wedding is going to take place i.e. England or Wales. The problem would be if someone were to raise an objection to the marriage.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I cannot see any connection. Whether a building is war damaged or not is surely irrelevant.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I think this should be a matter of choice for the couple concerned in conjunction with discussion with the relevant Ministers.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

As guardians of their faith and trustees to the solemnity of marriage within it, I do believe that they should have such power and that they should be required to meet with each of the couple separately.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, I think that is a good idea in order to prevent sham/forced or illegal marriages.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

Any legislation should be aimed at making things easier. We should not throw the baby out with the bath water!

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be an agent who is accountable for safeguarding the legal aspects of the marriage.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I believe that couples should have a variety of choice which enables them to have the ceremony that is most meaningful to them. A civil ceremony provides the basic legal necessities for a legal marriage and Registration Officers work largely to a limited script which is suited to many couples.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

More than one just creates an unnecessary expense.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Availability of dates and times would then be more accessible.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I believe that all Officiants need to have a legal registration. This would require a degree of control. Officiants should also be appropriately skilled to create and perform as well as to safeguard the legal integrity of the process. The governing authorities of the religious and non-religious organisations would need to look into whether those appointed have such skills.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If there is no definition of a non-religious belief organisation there could be some trivialisation of the legal marriage process caused by groups which claim to be non-religious belief organisations without any justification.

Please share your views below:

There should most certainly be organisations which should not be accepted as non-religious belief organisations for the purpose of officiating at weddings.

These should be organisations which do not fit with the definition laid out above i.e. 'An organisation that professes a secular belief system that claims to explain humanity's nature and relationship to the universe, and to teach its adherents how they are to live their lives in conformity with the understanding associated with the belief system'.

With that definition in place, there is probably no need for a list of those who do not conform.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the officiants are conducting marriages for members/worshippers from their own organisations then I believe they should be allowed to nominate suitable officiants from their own specified organisation. Those chosen should be registered as officiants for their own organisations.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

If an organisation promotes anything unlawful or immoral they should most definitely be excluded.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I am not sure that I understand the question too well, but I think that organisations should probably be allowed some autonomy with this - as long as every officiant is registered and has the necessary skills and integrity to carry out a legal wedding within the boundaries of their religious or non-religious organisation and as long as they understand the legal obligations.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree. Every legal marriage should be traceable back to a registered officiant.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples deserve to have a choice and a say in the content of their ceremony. For most/many people, their wedding day is (if not the most important day) a majorly significant day in their lives. Of course, the legal observations must be a very important part, but other things which are personally important to couples can make the process mean so much more to them.

As an Independent Celebrant in New Zealand, I have often included children in the ceremony, lit candles in memory of recently deceased loved ones, performed elements which have been requested by the couple, told the couple's story and so on . These things make for a more personalised and treasured ceremony. Signing the legal documents and saying the legally required phrases can be beautifully incorporated into the service provided by Independent Celebrants.

Many couples employ an Independent Celebrant in the UK, but have to pay for a legal Registry Service on top.

Many Independent Celebrants have completed a course of training which assists them in creating and presenting a beautiful and meaningful ceremony.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, most definitely - they cannot just grab somebody from the congregation who attends regularly. Officiants must be suited to the job.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In New Zealand, all Independent Celebrants are required to answer three multiple choice questions every year to show that they are maintaining awareness of the legal requirements. That seems to work well.

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Otherwise they should not be acting as officiants for their organisations.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree totally with the proposal.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Officiants should aim to be specialised and as such offer a focus on the particular desires of the couples to be married. There should be no clouding of what an officiant has to offer and couples should be able to narrow their choices by the definition of their officiant's registration.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Although couples should be able to make their own choices, an officiant should have the integrity to know when their guidance is needed and - if that fails - the ability to decline a wedding if they believe it to be undignified and/or not reflecting the solemnity of the process.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That guidance is particularly important for the administrative processes involved. It would just require one official document which describes all of the legal obligations.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The organisation should be required to submit proof that the officiant has not complied with such duties and responsibilities. Maybe there should be some recourse if an officiant feels that they have been wrongly accused.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The General Register Office should have the power to de-authorise unsuitable officiants. The officiant should be given information as to why such action has been taken and the officiant should have a right of reply if she/he feels that they have been wrongly accused.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The General Register Office should have the power to de-authorise unsuitable officiants. The officiant should be given information as to why such action has been taken and the officiant should have a right of reply if she/he feels that they have been wrongly accused

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I am not too sure about this one. There will be instances where officiants leave an organisation e.g. the church. In that case, they would become an Independent Celebrant without an organisation??

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

All Officiants should be knowledgeable about their field - particularly the legal aspects. It is also important - particularly for Independent Celebrants - that couples should have access to choices. This can only be achieved if their officiant is aware of what can be made available to them.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The whole point of the ceremony is for the two parties to consent to be married to each other. It is important that this is defined by there being a definite moment when they go from being single to married.

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Officiants need to work closely with the couple beforehand to ensure that the parties have the wedding that they desire. This should be within the boundaries of the law and attributing the appropriate dignity that a marriage ceremony deserves.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A religious marriage should be true to the beliefs professed by the couple and within the earthly guidelines and interpretation of that religion. Presumably, people who are chosen as officiants within religious organisations will be suited to make judgements about their specific practices.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples often want a religious content, but do not identify with any particular denomination. Sometimes one of the couple has a belief and the other is sympathetic to the partner's beliefs. One or two sentences within the ceremony can make a lot of difference.

Please share your views below:

Occasionally a divorcee is refused a religious marriage but wants to call upon God's blessing for their marriage.

Sometimes a couple may wish to have a particular religious reading or prayer.

A family member who holds religious beliefs which are respected by the couple might be asked to say a few words.

Some beautiful and popular music has religious overtones. I do not believe that couples should be denied the choice of such music. Ultimately, the couple should have as much choice as possible and their choices should be meaningful to them and their special ceremony.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not really understand the reasoning behind either this practice or the proposal to repeal it.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The couple should be surrounded by family and friends. They are making a public commitment for those who matter most to them. They should be allowed to choose who is present.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

No, the law should not make unnecessary limitations.

Consultation Question 49:

Please expand on your answer:

The law should not make unnecessary limitations.

Consultation Question 50:

Other

Other

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not believe that the law should make any rulings about this.

The organisations who own the land/property should be the ones to allow use by 'outsiders' or not.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I do not really understand this question. Should be approved by who? Sorry

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The importance, status and dignity of marriage has to be protected.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If left entirely to the Officiant there will probably be a very wide variety of ideas as to whether a location is safe and dignified. Guidance will help everyone to 'sing from the same hymn sheet'.

Consultation Question 53:

No

Please expand on your answer:

That complicates things unnecessarily and could also be unfair to some venues, who have traditionally missed out, because they were not 'licensed' prior to any changes.

Please share your views below:

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

That would be a great record for the family. I am sure that most couples would want that.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It should be at the couple's choice.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Everything of any significance is electronically recorded nowadays. It makes it more 'official'.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Legal marriage has to be within the law. If any of the rules are ignored it cannot be a proper marriage and should be void.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

- 1) I think that the mistake/s would have to be rectified retrospectively. That should be backed up by a signature.
- 2) Would the Officiant act as the only witness in this instance?
- 3) I think the marriage should be registered even if late.

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples and Officiants should have an obligation to ensure that everything is done according to legislation.

Of course both parties have to consent to the marriage. Care needs to be taken in the preliminary stages to guard against forced marriages.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Circumstances sometimes arise where a couple are unable to cohabit for a period after marriage.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage should be a definite choice and commitment.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A three year time-limit on petitioning for nullity on the basis of lack of consent is very unfair on the wronged party.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the proposals in this document were to be put in place, it would simply be illegal - an offence.

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

This is an area which I will need to learn about. I know that in New Zealand one of my Independent Celebrant friends officiated at a hospice and marriages for the terminally ill were made fairly simple.

I am aware that there are chapels in most hospitals, prisons, hospices. They are probably deemed suitable places for a marriage at the moment, but I am unsure whether bedside marriages take place in the UK. If they do not, I think that they should.

In certain cases couples should be allowed to rush the process through.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

In this instance, the schedule should be issued asap.

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The Registrar General's licence is an unfair system.

Consultation Question 65:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The marriage can then fit in with the wellbeing of the person with a terminal illness. Some days would probably work better than others. It would also help them to get all of the significant loved-ones together at an appropriate time.

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Timing would then work as appropriate.

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This could have worked well during the current pandemic.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Otherwise there will have to be a whole new document devoted to how couples would be eligible for the emergency provisions!

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would eliminate unnecessary anxiety.

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why not? Why make things complicated?

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couples already have ceremonies on board ship. It is just adding additional cost and making things more complicated for couples by making them have a separate legal procedure. A ship at sea is a dignified enough place to marry.

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

A small wedding would be fine on a large luxury yacht, but I am thinking that freight container ships and the like would not be very dignified.

Consultation Question 71:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, they should give the name and registration number, but I am unsure why they would not be required to give the name of the officiant.

Consultation Question 72:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Deck Officers and Crew Members would be conveniently available.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There have to be guidelines!

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Because they are the ones who it is proposed will be authorised officiants for the vessel.

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

There could be. Maybe allowances could be made for officiants from religious organisations or non-religious belief organisations to conduct ceremonies in international waters at the request and expense of the couple?

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It may be a long cruise and they may be unsure about postage from abroad.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Travel costs money. Where else should it come from?

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

A couple where one is terminally ill may not have had the opportunity to put money by for a wedding. They want to make the commitment and compassion should call upon us to help.

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Some couples just want to make the commitment with 'no frills'. We should not take away a valued service.

Consultation Question 78:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think if guidelines are given to officiants, as to what should be deemed safe and dignified, it will not be necessary for registration officers to provide such a service.

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If it has to happen the money has to come from somewhere!

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Time and travel cost money. They would be providing a service.

Consultation Question 81:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Additional services require additional payment.

Consultation Question 82:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There is no reason why it should be any different.

Consultation Question 83:

(2) there should be no fee.

Please expand on your answer:

It should be a national service on compassionate terms.

Consultation Question 84:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It should be a set fee for all officiants.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I think that the current law does not give couples the freedom of choice that they deserve. Particularly at this Covid time, there is a huge backlog of couples who have had to cancel or postpone their weddings and are now grappling for a date at the Registry Office. More choice in the number of officiants who are allowed to conduct a legal ceremony would alleviate that problem and allow freedom of choice for a wedding suited to each particular couple.

I think there would certainly be an increase in the number of couples wanting to get married if all of the proposals in the document were introduced. Weddings would be tailored to meet the needs of the couples through their choice of officiant and location.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The extreme cost involved in organising a wedding would be reduced through competition of venues and a greater number of Registered Officiants.

There have been some horror stories about the amount of money that has been lost through postponements and cancellations. Such expense is lamentable for couples who are embarking on married life, often with the expense of setting up home.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Low cost Register Office weddings provide an ideal way for some couples to get married. Not all couples want a grand affair, and the opportunity to have a small inexpensive legal marriage is the perfect choice for such couples.

Being allowed to marry in locations which have not undergone a pre-approval process is a win/win situation. Not only can it prove to be less expensive, but the location can be more meaningful to individual couples and, of course it allows for more choice.

Many couples choose to have a separate legally recognised wedding followed by (or after a special, non-legal, ceremony which is more suited to them). Negating the need for a separate legal ceremony by increasing the choice of officiants available to conduct a legal wedding again creates more choice for couples and also would mostly reduce the cost for them. At the moment, the individual needs and desires of couples are not recognised in law. The importance of choice, on a very important and significant occasion in their lives is marginalised and they are either forced to fork out excessive sums of money or to forego the wedding of their dreams.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

There are currently some beautiful, safe and dignified venues for weddings which have not received approval because of unnecessary barriers. I know of one such venue which has not been approved because it is not considered to be a permanent structure. It is a beautiful marquee which has every amenity that couples could wish for. As a Celebrant I am asked to perform Ceremonies there by couples who love the site and would wish to have the whole ceremony take place there. They have to book the cheapest Register Office wedding, so that they are married by the time I conduct the ceremony that they want. They are always made aware that I cannot pronounce them husband and wife, wife and wife, husband and husband (or whichever titles they choose) and that I can make no pretence that the ceremony I conduct is legal.

Such venues cannot compete with venues which are pre-approved and couples have to accept that they will have to pay the higher prices if they want one wedding which encompasses the legal marriage procedure.

The cost of Registration Officer attendance does not cover individually created ceremonies which meet the preferences of some couples, due to the restrictions imposed on what a Registry wedding can include.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

I think that most of this consultation document can be answered by the proposal that couples should have more choice in the way that they get married. Predominantly it boils down to :

- 1) Expanding the variety of ceremonies that can be made available - a simple legal procedure, a legal ceremony which adheres to the beliefs/religion that is important to them or a legal ceremony which is tailored to be more personalised.
- 2) Allowing couples to choose (within the boundaries of safety and dignity) where they marry.

I do believe (particularly in a post-pandemic society) that if the proposals in this document are adopted as law, it may save some of the wedding related businesses which are on the verge of going under. There will almost certainly be an increase in the number of couples wanting to get married - for one thing, it will make it much easier for them to do so.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Currently I believe that local authorities are responsible for the running of Registry services. This would, of course, provide them with a source of revenue.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I am very uncertain about the current role of Local Authorities, but I believe that they are responsible for Registry Offices and Registrars. If the proposals in this document are adopted, I believe that the job of a Registrar will alter slightly in that they will be involved in the administrative process of registering additional Officiants. I think that the number of Registry weddings may be slightly lower, but the revenue gained from the Officiant registrations will go some way to compensate.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Sometimes couples go elsewhere to get married because they cannot have the wedding that they want in England or Wales, under the current law.

Those travelling to England or Wales from overseas are often returning to get married in the presence of their family and friends.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think that the proposals outlined in this document - if adopted by law - will reduce the number of couples who feel the need to go elsewhere to get married. More people will stay at home and marry locally.

I am not sure that there will be much difference in the number of couples travelling to England or Wales, from overseas, to get married.

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current law does not provide any attraction for ships to register in the UK with regards to marriage.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There could be a significant increase in the number of ships registering in the UK if legal marriages are allowed on ships that are registered here - as proposed in the document.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

- 1) Government and local authorities may lose out slightly, but there will be some compensation in the charge made to register Officiants.
- 2) There are a whole load of businesses which have grown up around weddings. These would be set to thrive on the increased number of weddings. There would also be a healthy competition which would protect the couples planning weddings.
- 3) Religious and non-religious belief organisations would benefit from the increased autonomy.
- 4) Independent Officiants would benefit as they would be allowed to conduct the whole wedding (including the legal bit) which would attract more couples to the personalised service that they offer.
- 5) Couples, above all, would benefit. They can make their own choices based on the criteria that are most important to them.

Please share your views below:

I am an independent wedding celebrant who has found the vast majority of my work postponed to 2021 (at least) However the main issue is that celebrants ( independent ones in particular ) are not given parity with the church and registration services when it comes to the law and who can conduct ceremonies at this time of restrictions. There has been so much disparity in who, where and how couples can celebrate a marriage/ wedding ceremony. Also with who can conduct the ceremony and how many are allowed to be at the ceremony. Humanists, it would appear, (1430hrs 30/9/20) to have won a battle to allow their celebrants to have the same number at a ceremony as the church or register office ( as of today that is 15) but independents, who outnumber the humanist are reduced to 6...i put the date and time in this response as I am still waiting for an update to guidelines from the govt following HUK statements made on the 29/9/20. It is a hot mess, and couples are being denied the right to choose. Celebrants are being denied the right to work, and the chancellor seems to think we should all go and get a new job because we are in an unviable industry !

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

the current law discourages and prevents couples from having the type of ceremony they would like but I don't know if it prevents them from marriage

I do think more couples will marry if the proposals come into force as they will be able to have the type of ceremony they want and celebrate their love in their own way.

I do not have any evidence to present

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Post lockdown it is very difficult to get hold of the registration services, and they are offering very limited service. There was limited service for a registration only ceremony beforehand but now it is nigh on impossible in some areas the registration only ceremony is a good price, but is very poorly advertised so most opt for more expensive ceremonies and they vary hugely dependent on area and time of day/ day of week etc

2. Again a massive variation amongst registration districts and celebrants

3. No idea what current costs are

4. Often cheaper on the officiant front

5. can for some double their costs, depending on how and where they decide to have the separate legal ceremony. Law reform will remove this unnecessary cost

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. I think r/o weddings will be easier as more people look elsewhere, so freeing up the time and space at the office for those who still wish to marry there.

2. there will be one cost, the registration for the licence and the officiant cost combined , rather than the 2 separate costs that would double the overall cost of the wedding

3. more money to be put towards the day of their choosing OR to the honeymoon or just an out and out saving from one of the most expensive days of a couple's lives

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

They are overwhelmed and antiquated trying to work in a system that is not fit for purpose

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It can only free people up, i think they are understaffed as it is, so would not result in job losses, but would create the space for diversity of their roles

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

It is a total pain having to travel out of area to marry, i did because my local register office was not open on the day i wanted to marry.

For those coming from overseas, they have to be resident in an area far longer than they might like before a wedding and this cuts down on their honeymoon time afterwards

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Frees up people to travel and to marry where'd they would like, with minimal fuss

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

I think couples will be better off as will venues. Officiants will have to pay a fee, but the potential earnings far outweigh the initial outlay. Govt will get more money as more people will marry

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

My business specializes in processing legal documents, mainly certificates of no impediment to marriage, that are used as part of the necessary documentation to get married overseas. The documents need to be processed through the Foreign Office Consular Services for Apostilles, they then need translation and further Overseas Consular Legalisation services.

The number of couples that marry overseas are in the thousands.

Couples are required to have their documents available and processed 12 weeks ahead of the marriage date.

Certificates of no impediment take 4 weeks to be issued.

The result has been that during Covid 85% of couples have had to cancel their overseas wedding due to not being able to obtain a certificate of no impediment, subsequently further cancellations due to the registry office backlogs.

The latter delays have caused tremendous difficulty to the couples themselves, who have paid for their overseas wedding in full and have a party booking of 50 people traveling abroad all with hotel reservations.

The registration law does not permit for e-applications for this life event.

In these uncertain times I receive hundreds of phone calls from couples asking me what their position is.

I speak on behalf of hundreds of couples, and as a vital link between airlines, hotels, consular services.

Please simplify the procedure of application for Certificates of No Impediment by facilitating e-applications. These documents underpin the decision of where to get married or how.

In the internet age, and with the requirement for social distancing, the registration law should be forward looking, should facilitate life as it has become.

E-applications for certificates of no impediment is a service that is needed, it is not a luxury. The sooner that it can be implemented, the sooner citizens will be able to plan their life event with greater certainty, and the business sector will benefit as a result.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is a stabilizing life circumstance and it is important to know that those who enter it have had a stable living environment for 7 days.

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

People should only be able to give notice online or by post. Personal attendance is not required at all. In the same way that you can apply for a passport online with verification, then it should be possible to give notice of your intention to marry online and for certificates to be dispatched centrally from the General Register Office, in the same way that other life event certificates are dispatched.

Consultation Question 6:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This should apply to notices given in Scotland.

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It is impossible for couples to know who the officiant will be on the day of their civil marriage overseas, this is usually whoever is available either in the local Town Hall as a local councillor, mayor, registrar, or judge.

Consultation Question 12:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The officiant's name is an unnecessary complication on this document. It doesn't serve any purpose and hasn't been a requirement to date because it doesn't serve any purpose. The officiant's name appears on the Marriage Certificate, and the Certificate of No Impediment to marriage expires and is withheld after marriage, therefore the officiant's name is nothing but red tape and bureaucracy and not a simplification at all on this document.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I can assure you that UK couples resident in the UK but getting married overseas have cancelled their weddings due to current registration law obstructing them from obtaining a certificate of no impediment to marriage/ giving notice of their intention to marry electronically.
The lack of e-services makes the current registration law archaic.
E-services should amount to a civic right.
Couples should be facilitated to marry and not obstructed in their choice of location or date as a result of registration law.
The ability to apply online will promote weddings in any setting.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

By providing options, each couple will set a budget. Choice is democratic and so is access.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I cannot emphasize enough, from my professional vantage point as legal document advisor and a hub for travel agents how online application for documents will revolutionize the weddings sector. It will allow couples to plan, to feel that their day matters in law, it will abolish at a stroke the frustration that couples feel at not being able to access a registry office, or of being given dates into the future that do not fall in line with their plans; many UK couples cannot afford a wedding celebration and a honeymoon and the possibility of combining both, and going away with friends on a holiday to celebrate is a very attractive prospect to thousands of couples, 85% of whom have had to cancel their wedding this year, and the majority have done so because of the current registration law. Affordability and ease of access is key. The legal documents are the foundation to any wedding in any location, and obstruction to obtaining the same is uniform to any strata of society.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Local authorities do not have a streamlined national approach to taking applications; they follow and implement guidelines locally, which creates enormous disparity of citizen choice and equity. Online applications are a democratic and equitable and cost efficient method to promoting citizens civil rights. Local authorities will keep their venues safe by conducting interviews online if required and they should have a proportionate return on applications from their jurisdictions made directly to the GRO

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. Covid Safety
2. If the applications for certificates of no impediment to marriage are taken centrally but a percentage return is paid to each jurisdiction it frees up officials to do other meaningful work which is sponsored by that contribution.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

My experience derives from my business which is a hub for weddings involving Consular services, couples, travel agents, etc.
UK couples have been devastated this year by not being able to have access to apply for their certificates of no impediment.
They have cancelled their weddings.
A change in the registration law permitting access online would ensure that couples have control.

I cannot stress how disadvantaged couples are in hitting a wall due to the lack of availability of registration services due to Covid. These documents are long due an overhaul and should be able to be offered online.

Whilst I agree that the wedding ceremony laws may need modernising. I believe that at this time, whilst we are living through a pandemic that has impacted many industries greatly, that this would further hit the wedding venue industry and other wedding suppliers with many at home weddings taking place resulting in a greater loss to the economy.

It will also allow for unregulated events to take place in private homes which are not enforcing COVID guidelines and contributing to the spread of the virus.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I am convinced by the Paper's arguments (as with many of its other proposals ) at paras 4.13-41 in this case.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Covers all bases and reasonable expectations.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

Well. three days would suit wedding tourists here whose time is limited. One would hope that, as with divorce, appropriate thought has been given to the decision before setting it in motion.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

In-person interviews only would spare the need to make 'exception' judgements about possible shams, etc .

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Stet; consistent with the further liberalisation envisaged elsewhere in the Paper.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I take the force of the example provided by para 4.84, but wonder about the procedure for verifying (or not) the alleged risk. However, the proposed exception is consistent with the later proposal for closed door ceremonies.

Consultation Question 10:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

No view.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

it is consistent with the Paper's proposed shift from places to people I suggest that such requirement will, at least at first, come as a surprise to the affianced who will, I suspect, still be more concerned with venue.

(The amendment for a substitute is surely acceptable.)

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Uncontroversial, surely.

Please share your views below:

Not unreasonable for the couple to have a change of mind as to their MC, I suggest.

Consultation Question 16:

1. para 4.144 convinces.
2. Unlike CQ 15 (above) this not merely a private matter for the C of E as it goes to marital suitability and one therefore suggests it be a requirement.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

As for CQ 16, point 2, above

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

I disapprove of perpetuating wedding law's Anglican centrality. But, in the Paper's spirit of choice, if the reading of the Banns (if not common licences) brings pleasure to the parties, congregations and such - not to mention cinema goers and Mills and Boon readers - why not?

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

One would expect no other.

I've read the Intro to Ch 5, but really dislike 'officiant' cos it sounds made up and 'officious' comes to mind. 'Celebrant' on the other hand smacks of 'celebrate' and if one must have one word for the MC, then, despite what one learns from para 5.3, 'celebrant' has a better ring about it.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Can't get too excited, but 'Registration Officer' doesn't sound right for a God gig.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

5.37; 'The responsibility of the superintendent registrar is simply to be present'. I always feel a bit sorry for the redundant one, as 'she' simpers silently. Clearly a waste of public resources.

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It would seem to follow.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It would seem to follow.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems unexceptionable

Please share your views below:

If so, I suggest that, as with the N-RBO issue generally, it be left to Government - let 'them' take the weight, not the Law Commission! Having said that, one would agree with the points raised in paras 5.100-102. Subject to that, one sees no reason why such as political parties should not qualify - they seem to fit the Hodkin definition above.

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

1. If there must be an arbitrary limit than paras 5.96-8 make a good case for 20.
2. Is not 'sincerely' superfluous' here? Isn't the expression 'a sincerely held belief' as tautological as 'an INsincerely held belief' would be oxymoronic?!

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Well, I think we know what the Gov attitude would be. But were the actual wedding gigs themselves not so tainted, I can think of no valid reason to ban them from nominating officiants. And 'promoting purposes that are unlawful' could cover any group which campaigns to de-criminalise the presently illegal, as opposed to encouraging it whilst it remains illegal. 'Contrary to public policy [and certainly] morality simply beg the question.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Suppose so, if the couple are happy.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I'm all for openness in such matters.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I look forward to the day; these currently-supernumary gigs have been among the best 'weddings' I have enjoyed as a guest (and it must have been anticlimactic for the couple to attend the RO as well). Rather more importantly, they seem to have been appropriately and thoughtfully customised by the parties as assisted by the, ugh, 'officiant's' experience. (A bit like like-minded funerals.) It will be a good day for marriages - far more important than for weddings - when they are the real thing. Incidentally, so far as I am aware, there is no research on the fate of marriage by type of opening ceremony chosen - in terms of cost, religious, etc - though I was surprised to read somewhere that an American study claimed to have found that the more spent on the latter, the longer the former.

Consultation Question 30:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure. It would test the libertarianism of allowing the whackier religious/N-RBO a free hand in this respect. What training do, eg, scientology MC's have?

Consultation Question 31:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Does this discriminate in favour of the other groups? I don't understand the argument advanced in the penultimate sentence of para 5.139, so don't see why IO's should be treated differently. As for the last sentence at that para, I'm happy with a given non-affiliated IO if the couple who chose her are. And if a Gillick-competent minor - a chosen child of the couple, perhaps - can satisfy 2 and 3 - then let the 3 people concerned have their way. Why no upper limit if you're going to be against about it?!

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I think this is a non-sequitur - both these groups should be free to 'do well by doing good'. Profit and belief are not necessarily inconsistent. Let the market prevail.

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Two separate points are conflated here

1. What 'conflict of interest' do you have in mind?
2. In the interests of non-discrimination all 3 groups should be permitted to profit financially. Again, let the market prevail. Leave it to the couple (or their parents!).

Consultation Question 34:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

I'm imagining the same chap doing the 3 different gigs in one day -John Cleese when he used to be funny, perhaps. Changing gear in the taxi, scanning the next script -and his watch...

Can't take the question seriously - sorry.

Consultation Question 35:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

How? It begs the question. If a couple of deep-sea divers want to be wed in their gear by a similarly-attired IO - let them.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

What 'guidance'? Would it be obligatory? Nothing wrong with a book of helpful tips, as for reception speeches, certainly.

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems self-evident, but if the parties are happy with the officiant I hope it would satisfy her organisation.

Consultation Question 38:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Where the GRO thinks the organisation has failed to deal justly with a party's complaint, perhaps. What about the converse - should a NO be able to appeal to the GRO after her organisation has sacked her?

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Who else? -but if the parties were happy, and the wedding legal, I would be reluctant to see it as the state's business.

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Well, judges and others reach compulsory retirement age! But, again, if the parties are happy -so be it. Please see my answer to CQ 31.

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No point in CPD otherwise.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

1 , 3 and 4 OK; I am particularly relieved, as a recovering stammerer, by the proposal to remove the 'no impediment' promise!

2. 'should be able'? -not mandatory?

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Can officiants be trusted to ensure that the parties' initial ideas will be tailored down to ensure the required 'dignity and solemnity' and compliance with 'public policy and morality'?

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Innocuous. -and if they want it, why not?

Please share your views below:

Anything they want.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If they want it, why not?

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Well, to do otherwise might deter couples from choosing their own gardens and such. And it might keep the more outre efforts secret - you won't want the press snapping away at S'n'M dungeon weddings. I guess the parties should have a right to privacy. The requirement for witnesses should suffice.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The officiant's duties re solemnity and dignity plus the public policy and morality requirements might limit choice in practice.

Consultation Question 51:

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

'Safe', certainly. As regards 'dignity' the parties will hope to find an officiant to agree to what they want - perhaps the more outre parties will be able to find an equally liberally- inclined officiant.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Guide or instruct?

Consultation Question 53:

No

Please expand on your answer:

An unnecessary bureacratic refinement - it should be easy to find an officiant for a 'frequently' used location

Please share your views below:

If there must be such, the GRO presumably. But an unnecessary layer.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

At the option of the parties, yes.

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Surely unexcpctionable.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It's the future.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Littel point in having such fundamental and desirable rules otherwise. There might be a case for a breach of No 4 (and possibly 3) rendering the event a non-qualifying ceremony - they seem more of an affront than 1 and 2.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sufficiently less fundamental than Q57 above - and the presence of the officiant would compensate for the absence of witnesses - but would there be no consequences at all? If not, what would be the point of the requirements?

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but it would involve difficulties regarding the burden of proof for 1 b i with (usually) the man, seeking to evade such as financial remedies, claiming the woman was equally complicit and the latter deying it.

Consultation Question 59:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Pass!

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Would the parties' own belief(s), , one way or the other, about the status of their relationship be relevant?

Consultation Question 60:

Yes, but with a discretion to reject on the basis of, eg, honest affirmation by initially-reluctant parties.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Such egregious and harmful behaviour should indeed be criminal.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Opinions only (no data evidence) I'm afraid.

1. If the current (wedding) law deters any couples from marrying I suggest that, in most cases, they are unwisely prioritising the kick-off over the match itself. Whilst I respect religiously-inclined same-gender couples who abjure marriage because their Church refuses to wed them*, and hope that N-RBO/Independent Officiant gigs will come, I suggest that, given the possibility of add-ons to current ceremonies and free-standing additional ones, that any fans of, eg the latter two, who won't use the current law are likely to be unduly precious Guardianistas. If they're shacking up/procreating anyway, I hope they're au fait with comparative marriage/cohabitation/parental law and have made an informed choice.

*Some of whom may, admirably you may think, abstain from cohabitation/sex, seeing them as being reserved for marriage

2. I guess there are two issues here.

Firstly, there are those couples who go through a customised ceremony of their own choosing which could only result in a non-qualifying marriage and (unusually, surely) do not do the legal thing as well. I doubt that many of such are labouring under any delusion about its lack of legal recognition, though I suppose some innocents may be being conned by the other party. Maybe some Gúardiastas would find in the new proposals sufficient options for them to wed legally when they wouldn't under the current law, though I guess for some the objection is to marriage itself ('patriarchy...yawn...hetero-normativity...zzzzzz').

Secondly, religious gigs catering to, eg, Moslems. The proposals earlier in the CP would clearly bring more brevity and clarity. But what constitutes a sufficient event - whatever it might be - to make the marriage at least void clearly needs getting through to the relevant communities, particularly perhaps the women therein.

*****

I take this opportunity to make some final points. Firstly, and for what little it may be worth, I think the CP (like the earlier Law Com marriage stuff) is a terrific piece of work; erudite, comprehensive and as accessible to the reader as its inevitable complexity permits. That complexity made the electronic navigation methods supplied particularly helpful to me.

As a student of wedding law the Paper was a treat. The subject is an academic (not a practitioner's) lawyer's paradise. But I'm not convinced its reform is the best use of the Commission's brain power. I say this for two reasons. Firstly, it is only about the entry to marriage, not marriage itself. Secondly, despite its current complexity, very few intended couples encounter difficulty in accessing it validly. The RO/ their 'church/ the owners of the approved premises make sure of that. Finally, I think for many people - perhaps too many! - their main priorities for the event are such as stag and hen nights, clothes, guests, reception (food, drink, speeches, seating arrangements, disco) and honeymoon. These priorities are pretty much currently achievable other than in times of national emergency. Perhaps there was an innocent time when consummation would have been a novel attraction, or - when the couple moved straight from their parents' houses to live together for the first time - a more relaxed opportunity for sex.

I imagine that respondents will be largely made up people like myself and members of special interest groups which latter will supply pro formas for the purpose. I suggest you attach very little weight to any of them -very much including my own - in the final Report because you will know more about the subject than practically any of us!

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

No informed view but I suspect that Marriage Act 1994 use will (continue?) to erode recourse to all the rest.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I think weddings should be available (as an option) at as modest a price as possible and such use encouraged; all-in, the kick-off for my daughter's and son-in-law's happy marriage cost some £400 (including the £200 which, in a moment of weakness, I put behind the bar.) If there's money available, put it to the marriage, not the wedding.

1 Well - perhaps the scheme would enable them to enjoy here the sort of gig that they currently 'have' to go abroad for.

2. Perhaps it would make E and W more attractive than the other contender for weddings where the couples are from different countries.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems outdated and suited to a way of life we no longer follow. It simply doesn't make sense in a modern world where travel and movement are so different to when the original laws etc were framed.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

See above. This seems much more in tune with modern circumstances.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

The only valid constraint for is is the admin time required to ensure procedures can happen.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Yes. If nothing else, COVID has shown how much can be done remotely.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Why ever not in an age where we are increasingly familiar with remote or on-line ways of doing things?

Consultation Question 9:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Again this feels like something from the 18th or 19th century and how would it be displayed on-line?

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This seems wholly reasonable and if reasonableness is a significant requirement, then why not follow it.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again seems reasonable

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why ever not? Again this seems reasonable.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

We are currently facing the option of having 2x ceremonies, the legal wedding and then the handfasting. This to me is sad, and the rules outdated. I want to get married to my partner in a woods, surrounded by the trees, my family and the spirit of my ancestors!

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I have only recently become engaged but at present we are not planning anything as who knows when this situation will end.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I am fairly on the fence with this question.

The current ruling prevents people from total shotgun weddings, but then on the other hand, why should everyone know I am due to be married?!

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems a good idea

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

Perhaps there could be stages/options?

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I think consultations are good to "vet" the couple to prevent sham/forced marriages. But then we already have a consultation and they still happen!

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Sounds good to me

Consultation Question 9:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely need to ensure the safety of the couple. I am worried about my name being on a public forum, especially beside my partners name (as they will then have my new name!) and the internet can be accessed from any country.

Also worried this may help facilitate fraud. I am not sure the information needs to be made public?

Consultation Question 10:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not understand the question!

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, perhaps at the time of consultation, so effectively officiants work in pairs

Please share your views below:

I think as long as the couple are happy as well as the officiant this can only be a good thing.

Consultation Question 13:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

They should either be changed to allow for all religions, or perhaps have a separate publication for non Anglican weddings.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I really don't mind what people do in churches - I just wish to get married, to my partner... IN A WOODS! Not a building. Each to their own!

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

I have no opinion either way, not my religion and I believe they should proceed how their followers choose.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Please see answer for question 16

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

As above - for Anglican weddings please consult people of that religion

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, as long as the officiant can be of a matching religion

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I believe it should be up to the officer themselves... they may be happy with a simple handfasting but disagree if someone wants to be blessed with the blood of a sacrifice.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Unless they are lonely

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is restrictive to those who follow the religion of the Church... there are plenty of us who believe and follow the old religion - and we should be able to honour our religion with our own officiants who also honour and respect our values

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as people are registered it should not matter

Consultation Question 24:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Wow... this would open a whole bag of worms with "Pagans"

Please share your views below:

Well, the list could go on. Perhaps discuss this with the Pagan Federation or equivalent to other "religions"

Non religious people should not be penalised.... they should have the option to legally marry how they chose!

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be good, people can then have access to the officiant list and could then chose their closest by distance or religious beliefs.

(Much like an officiant at a funeral - the lady who did my Mums catered it to our beliefs completely - even though she may not have shared them herself, why can't it just be like that!!!)

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Perfect

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Everyone should do due diligence.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The church requires payment- why can't others!? As long as it doesn't grossly exceed and the couple have agreed to it, then why not enable people to make a business of making other people happy on their big days!

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If someone is happy to officiate a pagan wedding without the views, and the couple agree then I see no problem.

Personally I would seek out someone with my same beliefs to complete the ceremony.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 36:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No - do not make them all the same, else what's the point in asking all these questions!?

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, yes please!

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Allow us to tailor to suit, don't try a one size fits all

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

A handfasting ceremony - its not even a new thing, it was the DONE THING back in the day. It has just been pushed out by the Church (the same church that no doubt sits on a previously sacred ground and they have just bulldozed their way over the belief system)

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Why should I have 2... why can't you recognise my belief system.... ~

Why is this even being discussed?

Why has it not been changed.

(Yes I have now answered too many questions politely and am getting irate at the whole situation, I do not follow a NEW RELIGION - we were all "Pagan" once... I follow the old religion, the religion of your ancestors. But the Church wants to erase all knowledge of their disgusting processes trying to eradicate the knowledge some of us will keep shouting about!)

Consultation Question 47:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't care for other people to know my business. I would be more than happy for it to be me and my partner with an officiant and our dogs. (My partner on the other hand wishes to invite family! each to their own!)

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

IN THE TREES!!!

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

All of the above! Sod a stuffy room - I want to see the sky!

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Indeed, private lands should be allowed (as long as you have permission from the landowner of course)

Consultation Question 50:

Other

Other

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I believe that if the couple, the officiant and the venue are happy with what has been proposed then go for it. If you are Christian and wish to get married in the woods, go for it.

If you are a witch and wish to get married in the church then as long as the church is OK with it then why not (I mean they most likely wouldn't be happy but again - each to their own)

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

yes and no - if our officiant didn't wish to climb a tree to perform the ceremony - I would just try and find a different one!

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Indeed... on the edge of a crumbly cliff - not clever and who defines "dignified"?

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Depends how anal they would be about the rules.

Again - what defines dignified, because I've seen brides in churches wearing virtually lingerie... that to me is not dignified but is allowed to happen!

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Just log where people are getting married, then collate the information and then work out if it would be easier to just say "this place is approved - Ripon Druids Temple for example, in fact all the stone circles and previously used ceremonial grounds should by default be allowed!

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Eurgh - why be so restrictive!?

You can tell this country is ruled by the Church!

Lemme skip off into a daisy field and marry my man!

Other

Please expand on your answer:

- 1 . Who made the mistake? that would affect my answer
2. Why can't our Gods and the officiant be witness?
3. Sure - but make the register available to all religions and allow us to state them

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 59:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Let people be people!

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Do it - or don't

Yes

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

If someone finds themselves in prison then they should not get any benefits, they should have to wait until they have done their time!

terminal illnesses, housebound and hospitalised should have the option to fast track marriages and still be allowed to complete them how they chose (maybe even letting them be in the hospital gardens if they so chose!)

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but with a pinch of salt. Let them have their final wish (as long as the one who will remain is happy with the union)

Consultation Question 75:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

As long as it is within peoples means.

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

Bless them.... fees should be waived - let them have their day!

Consultation Question 77:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 78:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be a one set charge, which should be reasonable and not penalise people for their choices.

Consultation Question 79:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It should remain the same charge as above. Effectively a "venue tax"

Consultation Question 80:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Fine - but I'll take a high priestess any day! (otherwise I'd just go to the registry office!)

Consultation Question 81:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

(How many words in one question?!)

one set fee.... not a high one... one reasonable set bloody fee!

Consultation Question 82:

Yes

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

You have 2 real choices for weddings -

1. religious ceremony in a religious building
2. non religious ceremony in a registry office which cannot incorporate any religious/belief systems.

it is too restrictive and not indicative of modern (or in my case old) views.

Many people chose to not get married which can leave them in a black hole. the second option is to have a fake ceremony and top it up with a trip to the registry office... this is ridiculous and unnecessary!

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Registry offices can be lovely and cheap and allow for those with little to no funds to legally get married. But they are also too restrictive - if the proposed changes are allowed then the costs should be kept to a minimum to prevent only the rich having handfasting ceremonies etc.

Marriages should be reasonably priced and accessible to all... in whatever fashion they wish sod number 3 - let us have the ability to tailor our weddings just the same as we tailor a funeral.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Weddings are ridiculously priced... and therefore many end up taking the cheapest option to them OR borrowing money to pay for a day. (MAD)

Weddings should be a community deal, they should not be so heavily sanctioned by the country!

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

From May 2020 - April 2021, wedding celebration ceremonies have been postponed by couples I am working with. Couples are feeling concerned about not being able to celebrate their marriage in the way they wish. Some couples booking for 2021 are finding it hard to get in touch with registrars to arrange their marriage or get local advice from them.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Some couples may not live together before marriage and be living in different parts of the country. This can make giving notice difficult.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

With our socially-mobile, time-efficient society, this is a much better way of giving notice.

Consultation Question 6:

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

With this year's unprecedented lockdown, it seems that best practice should be to allow couples to have remote interviews via a video link so that the interviewee can check the couple are who they say they are. It would also reduce close contact and promote social distancing. If this could be done by the interviewee from home as well then the problem with the Registrar Office being shut due to a lockdown or other unforeseen set of circumstances would not cause a backlog in preliminaries occurring.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, this seems fair as long as the correct paperwork is completed by the official and couple.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The current system of displaying notices of marriage is incredibly old fashioned and not really fit for purpose.

Consultation Question 10:

If the ceremony is being conducted by an independent officiant rather than a member of a belief or non-belief organisation, I believe the inclusion of a hymn, a religious blessing or prayer, and a nod towards religious rituals should be permitted. For example, lighting a candle to symbolise the light and warmth of marriage and the light and warmth of God (if this is what the couple wish). Seven blessings for the couple if they wish to include Jewish symbolism etc. This could be led by the officiant, family member or a guest, depending on what the couple chooses.

No

Please expand on your answer:

There are some beautiful buildings in this country, especially small country churches which lay pretty much abandoned. If a couple wishes to marry there but not by a religious ceremony, then they should be allowed to. They like the venue and there will be revenue to the Parish. Likewise, a religious couple may wish to marry somewhere other than a church (perhaps so their reception can be in the same place as their ceremony). Why should this not be allowed?

Consultation Question 51:

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There needs to be clarity for what it 'dignified'. If a couple chooses to marry on a plane, then skydive together, this may not be considered dignified by some. I think there needs to be an element of solemnity in the ceremony so it is clear when a couple are married, but to also allow freedom for creativity and personality.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I think there needs to be a bigger discussion around what is safe and dignified by a larger group of people than just the GRO. Once it has been agreed upon, then they could produce guidance for all.

I don't really understand the fourth point. What religious governing body is there in England and Wales? People may be born into a religion, but choose to remain in it or opt-out. It has been disastrous. I was originally invited to 4 weddings ; attended one virtually; one was reduced to 15 with less than 10 days notice; 2 were cancelled.

It is atrocious that this government seems to be so anti-weddings. Their views are based on the fact that most people get drunk at British weddings and they don't make allowance for those of us who don't consume alcohol at all and I am ABSOLUTELY DISGUSTED with the government stance that has destroyed the happiness of so many people because at the end of the day they do not support marriage.

Please share your views below:

The refusal to allow Notices already given to be extended during lockdown and recovery has caused extensive extra work for local authorities and unnecessary extra costs and inconvenience for thousands of customers, including some couples who are now abroad and cannot return to give notice again.

The refusal to allow Notices to be completed partly online during lockdown and recovery has exposed hundreds of registrars across the country to needless exposure to the virus as a result of extended face to face appointments with couples.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The 7-day residency rule is a nonsense as couples can book themselves into a hotel or stay with friends for 7 days to comply with it and this is then sufficient for them to become 'resident' in the area they are staying in.

Consultation Question 5:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This raises potential issues for Section 24 (s24) reporting on potential sham marriages if the first part is done remotely, (although arguably s24 reports don't necessarily stop many marriages going ahead). This could be resolved by a longer period between the in-person interview and the marriage date for foreign nationals.

Some couples would still want to do the first part in person and there is a danger of this option becoming crowded out if there is pressure to do it remotely. As has been the case with certificate ordering online, now this has become mainstream many local authorities have removed the ability for this to be done in person, and a similar situation could arise if the majority of couples opt to do this online.

There is a danger that the first part could be done by one of the couple alone answering for both parties which would play into the forced marriage agenda and may mask safeguarding issues. To that end, if this is agreed, the in-person meeting must include safeguarding questions individually from each other so that both parties confirm they wanted to enter into the marriage.

We are content for British nationals marrying other British nationals to complete the process remotely, but we are not content for this to be done by foreign nationals, although this would create a two-tier system. That said, one already exists now with the 28/70 day waiting period.

Might be more sensible to take a step further and utilise the Verify.Gov service for UK nationals.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

Seven WORKING days minimum - to allow time for the schedule to be issued and sent to the officiant in good time. If a s24 is raised or forced/safeguarding concern at the in-person interview then there will need to be time for the investigation to be undertaken before the marriage takes place and so this may well take longer than 7 working days.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

No - How would we know if sham/forced is an issue without the face to face meeting when much of this is done on a gut feeling in the presence of the couple. Also, by inviting couples to come in only where we have concerns would them tip them off that we harbour suspicions.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes

Consultation Question 9:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only if the information displayed is reduced, ie. Name and Town/District. Personal information (address, age, etc) being displayed online would result in data protection issues and potential identity fraud. It would also encourage unlawful marketing approaches to the couple.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

1) Yes - Provided that recognised groups like DSRs employed by the local authority can be recorded as a generic group, not as individuals.

2) Yes - Provided that:

a. There is provision to charge a full cost-recovery fee for amending the schedule.

b. There is provision for a cut-off date when the schedule can no longer be amended in advance of the wedding/CP – for operational/logistical reasons.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that the local authority issuing the certificates can check that the replacement officiant was authorised to carry out their duties and the couple understand that their marriage/CP will not be legally recognised if not.

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

Universal civil preliminaries should apply to create a level playing field and consistency, provide better control on sham/forced/safeguarding issues and to prevent pressure on ministers of religion.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that there is provision for a 'full cost-recovery' fee to be charged for the attendance of the officiant, even if they are not leading the ceremony, and that the officiant should be properly trained, that training is refreshed regularly, and that the officiant should face sanctions for non-compliance with regulations.

Consultation Question 20:

There should be a time-limited membership fee subject to renewal, and regulations (such as having valid Public Liability Insurance), as with other professional bodies, and a de-authorisation process if inadequate CPD is undertaken. This will also help to keep the list contemporaneous and remove unclean data such as membership of deceased parties, for example.

Consultation Question 41:

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

1. No – we should maintain the status quo:

- a. if physically able, customers should be required to orally express their consent
- b. if physically able, couples should be required to orally confirm no impediment.

2. Yes - provided that the expression of consent and confirmation of no impediment is a universal requirement that makes any marriage ceremony legally recognisable

3. No - parties should sign a declaration, but see point 2 above – they should also have orally expressed consent and confirmed that there is no impediment during the ceremony. The declaration alone should not be sufficient for a marriage.

4. No - the marriage should be formed when the final signature is entered onto the declaration (couple, witnesses and officiant) AND after the couple have orally expressed their consent and confirmed that there is no impediment. All these conditions should need to be met for the marriage to be legally recognised.

Consultation Question 43:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The form and ceremony should be chosen by the parties and agreed to, but the legal requirement for oral consent and confirmation of no impediment, and signing the declaration should be universal (as Q.42 above), to ensure that all marriages are consistently legally recognisable

Consultation Question 44:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The form of the ceremony and who can have one should be a matter for agreement by the religious group concerned, provided that they abide by the same legal requirements as for other groups (as outlined in Q.42 and Q.43 above).

Consultation Question 45:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The legal parts of the ceremony should remain secular and as dictated by current civil registration legislation, however embellishments such as music and readings with religious content - that have no legal standing - should be allowed, provided that they comply with equality and diversity rules.

Please share your views below:

Nothing particular that should definitely be allowed, but anything that could be considered critical of another belief system or a recognised protected characteristic should not be allowed.

Consultation Question 46:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Anyone should be able to celebrate in any way they choose following a legal marriage, but in all cases it should be clear to everyone attending and witnessing such a celebratory ceremony that it is not a legally recognised marriage ceremony and that the couple are already legally married.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The rules re open doors should be consistent for all forms of marriages and the process for objecting to a wedding should be carried out during the notice period or after the marriage if the legal impediment to that marriage is established later.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

However, all venues/locations should need to be licensed (albeit temporarily), encompassing checks on permission from the location/venue owner, a responsible person being present at the venue/location for the duration of the ceremony, appropriate insurance and risk assessments having been completed in line with health & safety regulations.

Licensing regulations would therefore need to be relaxed to include short-term licences (for example for one wedding only) and outside locations. To ensure resources were available for this temporary licensing process a 'full cost recovery' fee would be required.

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

No location should automatically be disqualified, however there would need to be some checks and balances allowing legal guidance on an acceptable level of risk – for example, an officiant should not be required to conduct marriages in a location/venue that is considered high risk (such as in a hot air balloon or whilst bungee jumping for example).

Owners/organisations operating a venue or location for wedding ceremonies should be able to choose what type of ceremony (civil, religious, non-religious) can take place in their venue, and what category or recognised officiant (civil, non-religious, religious) can lead these ceremonies.

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be the decision of the licensing local authority (see Q.48 above).

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

A dynamic risk assessment should be carried out on the day, but the location should already be licensed (albeit temporarily) including a full risk assessment, (as in Q.48 above).

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We believe that licensing should remain with the Local Authority (see Q.48 above) and if this is the case then - yes, GRO should provide guidance on whether a location is to be considered safe and dignified. GRO, or their approved training provider, should also provide such guidance to officiants for their dynamic risk assessment on the day.

Consultation Question 53:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

(See Q.48 above). The pre-approval process would be covered by our proposed licensing process. Local authorities should be responsible and should licence a venue/location for a one-off, or series of, weddings.

Please share your views below:

1. The local authority should be responsible for it

2. Every venue or location should have pre-approval from the local authority before it can be used for a wedding or civil partnership. If not then there will be no confirmation of permission from the land owner, no responsible person to oversee the guests, no health and safety in place, no risk assessments completed, and no public liability insurance in force.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided the details are added before it is signed, after it has been signed it is a legally binding document and should not be amended.

Consultation Question 55:

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that:

- a. Accurate and representative signatures can be recorded
- b. There is a contingency in place if the electronic system fails (many countryside wedding venues have poor internet coverage)
- c. The officiant is responsible for back-capturing the registration if necessary in the event of a system failure

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

1. Yes

2. Yes

3. Other – the marriage should be void if the ceremony was not officiated by an authorised officiant, regardless of whether the couple had knowledge of this or not.

4. Other – as above. If the opt in has not been given the same-sex marriage should be void, regardless of whether the couple has knowledge of this or not.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

1. Other – maintain the status quo – typographical mistakes should not render a marriage void, however a significant mistake that could call into question the identity or marital status of one of the parties, for example, should render it void.

2. No - as previously stated (in Q.42 above), a marriage should not be valid until the declaration is signed by all parties present, including the witnesses and officiant. If the absence of witnesses does not render the marriage void what would be the point of witnesses?

3. No - (see 2 above). The signatures of all parties to the marriage (couple, witnesses and officiant) should be required to make the marriage legally recognised.

Consultation Question 58:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Any one of 1(a), 1(b)(i), 1(b)(ii), or 2 should be enough individually to make the marriage non-qualifying, without the need for two tests to be satisfied.

Consultation Question 59:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We believe that all legal processes must have been fulfilled for a presumption in favour of the validity of the marriage.

We do not believe that the couple should be required to have cohabited for a period after its celebration for it to be legally recognised.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that all forms of marriage are legally recognised then this should be abolished

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems a nonsense that if a party believes they have entered into a marriage without expressing free and informed consent that they only have 3 years within which they can challenge the validity of that marriage.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

Registrars statutory fees for these services are nowhere near commensurate with the costs involved in providing the services, and the statutory fees for each of these services are not in line with each other. These fees should be regularly reviewed so as to represent realistic 'full cost recovery'.

The criteria for a doctor signing off a letter for an RGL should also be more specific. Currently they are very subjective and many customers who continue to attend hospital appointments regularly are being signed off as apparently "on their death-bed".

It is not appropriate for the wider Council Tax-payers to substantially subsidise the marriage of a customer who could potentially afford to pay standard fees for getting married, just because they are terminally ill.

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

And fees for this service should be reviewed to reflect this extra work and represent 'full cost-recovery'.

NB. We are anecdotally aware of cases under the current system where the ill party knows nothing about the application for an RGL because there is not the requirement for the ill party to give notice and so the whole preparation for the event can currently take place without the ill party's knowledge or consent.

Consultation Question 64:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The local authority, rather than GRO, should have the ability to reduce the waiting period, subject to confirmation by the doctor, and this should include the ability to take notice at home or in a clinical setting for the terminally ill patient.

Consultation Question 65:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Conversely, we would propose a shorter timeframe (ideally less than 28 days) for the ceremony to take place and powers given to the local authority to arrange the marriage as soon as practicably possible after the issue of the schedule.

If the schedule expires before the marriage has taken place the full fee should be repaid to restart the process.

If the schedule lasts longer than 28 days then there is no reason for them to have had a reduction in the waiting period.

We are aware of numerous cases under the current regime where once the RGL has been issued the couple prefer to wait for an extended period of time before conducting their marriage and often this leads to a situation where it is too late because the terminally ill party dies before the marriage can take place. Unfortunately, denial of the seriousness of the illness and the imminence of death is commonplace.

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There is no specific urgency in these cases and so the 12-month validity period should remain so as to be consistent with all other civil marriages.

Consultation Question 67:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

1. Yes
2. No - a two-part mainly remote process could work but an in-person part of the process is required to check for safeguarding/sham/forced issues
3. No
4. No

NB. Schedules/authorities should be extended to allow existing arrangements to take place after the national emergency, or couples should be able to marry outdoors to minimise the risk where appropriate.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Doctors can still provide evidence of illness remotely.

Consultation Question 68:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We have no issues with this proposal per se, provided that the technicalities of what district the couple are marrying in, and ensuring they are in UK territorial waters, are very clear and easy to follow. There would be complications with the distinction between English & Welsh, and Scottish law near the Scottish border, for example.

Consultation Question 69:

But it would make sense that the 'port of choice' would be the port of registration of the vessel.

Quite possibly – to our knowledge most commercial vessels already have their own chaplain, but as we are not experts in this area, we are not in a position to comment.

Consultation Question 74:

Electronic copies should be received by the relevant district within 7 days, and the hard copy sent as soon as possible. The marriage could be registered on receipt of the electronic copy but the certificates not be issued until the hard copy has been received.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

This should be set at 'full cost recovery', and should be regularly reviewed to keep pace with increasing costs.

Consultation Question 76:

Please expand on your answer:

It is not appropriate for the wider Council Tax-payers to substantially subsidise the marriage of a customer who could potentially afford to pay standard fees for getting married, just because they are terminally ill.

Consultation Question 77:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The fee should be set district by district, locally agreed on a 'full cost-recovery' basis.

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 79:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We believe it should always be set by the local authority and set at 'full cost recovery'.

Consultation Question 80:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be set at 'full cost-recovery' set by the local authority. 'Full cost recovery' means it should include all of the costs for the full gamut of local authority work in relation to ceremonies, including back office functions, on-costs and other non-direct costs and it should not just be based on the registrar's hourly rate.

Consultation Question 81:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Fees for discretionary services should be dictated by the market alone, and should not be regulated nor related to cost recovery. This income stream can significantly reduce the financial burden on the wider Council Tax-payer and allow local authority registration services to self-fund whilst supporting the provision of free statutory birth and death registrations.

Consultation Question 82:

No

Please expand on your answer:

We do not agree that fees should be prescribed for the registration officer to officiate at any wedding.

NB. Detained weddings in prisons take substantially longer to facilitate and conduct due to delays caused by obtaining Governor's permission, and access and egress into and out of the prison for security reasons. They are also more costly due to their relative infrequency meaning only more senior or longer serving staff are capable of conducting them.

Consultation Question 83:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Neither of the above.

These should be set at a level that is 'full cost recovery'. The vast majority of RGL cases are for couples who are seeking to avoid the payment of inheritance tax upon the death of one of the parties.

Consultation Question 84:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If authorised officiants can operate anywhere within England & Wales then the RG should set the fees nationally on a 'full cost-recovery' basis.

Alternatively, if authorised officiants can only operate in the district where they registered, then the local authority should be able to set the fees on a 'full cost-recovery' basis.

Any fees in either case should include the cost of verifying qualifications are valid and that CPD is up to date.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

1. No
2. No

The proposals will no doubt increase choice, but we have received no anecdotal feedback or evidence that suggests couples are foregoing getting married because of the current legal restrictions. On this basis, we don't see how the deregulation of marriages would increase the number of marriages taking place.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. We are currently only able to offer cost-effective budget options in decommissioned register office rooms because we also receive the income from more costly licensed venue marriages. If we were to potentially lose the licensed venue marriage income this would have a negative effect on our ability to continue to offer the low-cost budget options. For Statutory Register Office marriages these are already being subsidised by the wider Council Tax-payer because the statutory fee has been set far too low for 'full cost recovery' purposes.
2. We are not aware of any feedback that our licensed venue attendance fees are too high. The fees paid are a very small proportion compared to the total cost of a wedding at such a venue. The fees we charge to venues to become a licensed premises are also very low when spread over 3 years.
3. The current statutory fee for sending a registrar where one is required does not cover our costs and should be reviewed regularly.
4. Nonsensical question as couples are not able to marry in locations that are not authorised. If couples wish to have a celebration of marriage this is their choice and the costs incurred are not set by us.
5. See point 4 above. There are a range of affordable options already available for a legally recognised marriage.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. If we were to lose the income from licensing premises and from our attendance at weddings at these premises, due to 'full cost recovery' rules we would have no option but to increase the cost of register office weddings in decommissioned rooms.
2. We don't believe that couples should be able to get married in any location without pre-approval of some kind.
3. Although couples who choose to get married in any location may not need to have a separate legally recognised wedding, the costs of getting married are unlikely to be reduced because a trained, qualified officiant would have to attend to make the marriage legally recognised and the location would have to be assessed at least once prior to the marriage to ensure it is safe and dignified. Venues that are not used regularly would incur additional costs for these pre-ceremony risk assessments, etc, that are required by law to comply with Health & Safety legislation.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

1. Licensed venues that are already operating as public-facing businesses should already be complying with the simple legal regulations regarding planning and health & safety that are required as part of the licensing process. These are not direct costs of being licensed – we invariably find a number of potential venues do not comply with Health & Safety rules, so the current licensing process forces them to comply, and as such we fear that a deregulated marketplace would have the effect of making some of these venues disregard the regulations. The costs of becoming a licensed venue cover the administration and checks that these measures are in place, and ongoing support to the licensed venue from the Local Authority. The cost of being licensed is minimal in comparison to the potential income that venues can generate as a result.
2. The costs of registration officers attendance at a licensed venue are covered by the couple, not the licensed premises. We develop a relationship with our licensed venues and work well in partnership with them. We staff our provision according to demand and rarely turn away couples who want to book with us.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

1. Safety checks would still need to be in place for any officiant to attend a venue.
2. If we were to lose a proportion of our income we would be unable to employ as many registrars in the service and this would have a negative impact on our availability.
3. The proposed scheme would give couples more choice according to their own wishes and beliefs
4. We do not agree that the proposed changes would increase the number of couples getting married in the long term, just the choice of where they marry and who can marry them.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Because of the unfunded free provision of birth and death services, most local authorities subsidise these services with income from marriages (albeit whether this is right or wrong – this is the reality of the status quo). Removing the monopoly on secular marriages from the registration service will inevitably lead to a significant reduction in the range and quality of services offered by local authority registration services.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

If our previous suggestions are taken into account, local authorities would be able to charge 'full cost-recovery' fees for services that are currently under-funded. We would also be able to conduct weddings outdoors, for which there has been growing demand, and be more flexible on ceremony content for those couples with mixed beliefs.

However, a far simpler solution to the whole proposal, which would address the majority of couples' wishes, would be to allow couples to marry anywhere within the footprint of existing licensed venues, including outdoors, and to allow the temporary licensing of venues or locations for one wedding. Retaining the monopoly of local authorities to provide civil marriages would ensure the ongoing quality and high training of staff, adherence to legislation and opportunities to spot sham and forced marriages.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. None. We are required to follow the requirements of the country they are getting married in.
2. Longer waiting period applies but this is necessary and well publicised.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. This could potentially reduce the number of couples who travel abroad to get married but it seems unlikely as we don't have the climate that most of these couples are looking for.
2. There may possibly be a slight increase in people travelling the UK to get married from overseas, however it seems unlikely as, in our experience, most overseas nationals who choose to get married here do so because they either live here or are marrying a UK national. Again, we don't really have the climate to attract people to this country as a destination wedding.

This is, I feel, the most important proposal. The requirement for weddings to be in a licensed venue leads to profiteering by many venues making the cost of a non-religious wedding hugely and prohibitively expensive. The only alternative of a council registry office is, certainly in my area, not a singing as the capacities are too low or opening hours not workable.

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I am sure that many people are dissuaded from marrying as the current arrangement where the only alternative to a church or registry office is a registered venues mean that costs are huge and the thought of spending many thousands of pounds on a wedding would either be off-putting or, at worst, unachievable meaning many couples simply do not get married, often, I feel, without realising the implications of not being married and having property and children.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The current law is certainly discouraging me. Both my fiancé and I have been previously married and would like a simple ceremony and celebration for family and friends.

However, we are not religious so would prefer not to have a church wedding. The alternative is either a registry office or a registered venue. Convenient registry offices do not have the capacity we would like and registered venues are hugely expensive and over-fussy for what we want. The ability to have a ceremony and celebration in, perhaps, the local village hall or a pub room would be great. The capacity would be enough and affordable celebration costs would be achievable. Frankly, as soon as you mention wedding to a venue the costs escalate at an alarming rate.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The proposals would offer choice, convenience and, perhaps most importantly, affordability. There are relatively few register offices now but this would be alleviated by the only other choice being a registered venue as is the case now.

Please share your views below:

Weddings have had an even greater significance than normal. As someone working in the wedding industry I have worked at 3 weddings during the pandemic (normally in the same period I would have worked at around 50). All guests have appreciated the significance of the wedding even more in the circumstances and the days have been incredibly special to the couples marrying and their families.

Consultation Question 9:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is risky for people who have experienced abuse or escaped abusive relationships. Abusers often go to great lengths to track down their former partner and this could be a very easy way for them to find someone again.

Why not just allow individuals to register as officiants, regardless of whether they belong to an organisation? A period of training could be required to ensure they know how to conduct a ceremony legally.

More wedding venues should decrease the cost of wedding venues due to there being more choice

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

How is this currently checked? If it is robustly checked, it could be a barrier to predatory marriage. However, if it is just a token requirement as long as people give an address in the area, then it might as well be abolished, though other safeguards will be needed.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

For the prevention of predatory marriage it is crucial that the couples would both be interviewed separately, and at different times - otherwise giving notice online or by post would just make things easier for predators. We are aware that the current requirement for separate interviews before marriage is not always followed by registrars - it currently says "should" have separate interviews in the guidelines for registrars and this must be changed to "must". Interviews must be recorded so that it can be proved that they took place, with a consequence that if they did not then the marriage is invalid.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

A longer period, perhaps a month, to allow relatives and friends to find and view an online notice of marriage and, in the case of a possible predatory marriage, obtain a caveat or register objections.

This could be reviewed in the case of special circumstances such as terminal illness.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Absolutely not. "Where concerns arise" is far too vague - will those interviewing be trained in assessing capacity, or will there be a set of robust questions that they have to ask? This would just make it easier for predators. How can you tell that the person is not being influenced by someone off-screen? Judging capacity is even more difficult online than face to face.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

No opinion

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, we have been campaigning for this, and also to ensure it is searchable eg Google alerts. This is a vital safeguarding tool. This is just the modern equivalent of the old "publishing the banns on the church door" - the idea always was for anyone to be able to see it. The part about "save where this would expose either of the couple to risk of harm" would need to be carefully considered and defined as a predator could abuse the system by saying so.

Consultation Question 10:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, provided all robust safeguarding checks are met. There should always be two officiants present to safeguard the officials as well as the couple.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, provided that safeguarding checks are met and there should always be TWO officials present to safeguard both the officiants and the couple.

Please share your views below:

Not sure what this means. For safeguarding purposes it must not be possible for one party to the marriage to ask a friend etc to officiate at the last moment.

Consultation Question 13:

Please expand on your answer:

No opinion

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

No - they should always be published online, in an easily searchable national database, for safeguarding purposes.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes, absolutely. This is of vital importance. The marriage should not be valid unless separate interviews have been both conducted and recorded in detail.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, for safeguarding purposes it is vital that both of the couple attend and that they are seen separately.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

This should be the case provided that safeguarding is required equally in both cases. At present safeguarding is often more thorough at Church weddings than at civil ceremonies and this needs to change - there is currently no robust safeguarding at civil ceremonies.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

How is the "freely expressed consent" to be checked? There must be a safeguarding requirement here. At the moment there is almost no safeguarding at marriage. My mother (age 91 with a long-standing diagnosis of dementia) could not remember her address or date of birth at her wedding. One registrar raised this as a query but they took it no further and the other one decided to go ahead. There were no consequences except to my mother and all the family. The registrars thought that because of my mother's "demeanour" (she was apparently smiling) she must understand, which displays a near-total lack of understanding of how dementia can present.

Consultation Question 20:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

No opinion

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely not. There should always be two present to ensure that any concerns can be raised and to safeguard both the couple and the registrars. Registrars have been threatened with everything from physical violence to legal action when trying to stop a marriage. Suggesting only one is needed is a terrible idea and would make it even more difficult than at present for registrars to stop weddings.

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Not unless they have undergone thorough safeguarding training.

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No, because there should be a rule that anyone who can officiate at a wedding must have adequate safeguarding training and use robust questions to assess capacity to marry.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

Organisations which do not respect everyone's human rights, such as fascists, the Ku Klux Klan and similar organisations. Who would create or judge such a list? I suggest a human rights organisation.

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

20 people is a tiny number - the number should be larger to avoid tiny cults etc. BUT it needs a universal requirement for all officiants to undergo thorough safeguarding training and a procedure for referring couples on if there are doubts about capacity. Otherwise the system would be very much open to abuse by anyone.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Who defines this? There would need to be a clause stating that "contrary to public policy or morality" should not just be something defined by Government, but by an independent humanitarian body.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes, BUT with the proviso that ALL officiants should have undergone thorough safeguarding training devised by a national safeguarding organisation, not just that someone with little knowledge thought might do.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, and all should be required to have a minimum level of accredited training (which does not happen now) and pass a safeguarding qualification designed by a safeguarding organisation and not by the General Register Office as this is not their area of expertise. This would safeguard officiants as well as those getting married.

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but this must include checking for an accredited qualification to state that they have undergone thorough safeguarding training. There should be an accredited course which they have to pass, devised by a safeguarding organisation and not by the General Register Office as safeguarding is not their area of expertise.

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, in addition to a proper officiants' qualification which would include safeguarding training devised by a safeguarding organisation and not by the General Register Office as this is not their area of expertise.

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but the content must include safeguarding training that is not designed by the General Register Office, as this is not their area of expertise.

Consultation Question 32:

No

Please expand on your answer:

They should be professionally qualified with an approved qualification in the legal, procedural and safeguarding elements to being an officiant. As such they should be able to make a profit. However, there should also be the option of non-profit municipal weddings service so that costs do not escalate.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as there is also a non-profit service available.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 35:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Unsure exactly what this means.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely - the same level of safeguarding should apply to all weddings. So for example separate interviews at notification of marriage should be compulsory - there must be a distinction between guidance (what should happen) and rules (what must happen, with consequences if they do not, such as the marriage being invalid).

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but the General Register Office should also be able to withdraw authorisation.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely - this must be the case.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but extra resources and training would need to be provided for this, or it would not happen because of constraints of time and cost.

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I suggest that there should be a mandatory refresher course every ten years to avoid people getting into bad habits and not checking properly, plus continuing professional development.

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely - the job needs to be professionalised.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Please expand on your answer:

No - absolutely not! Weddings should not be secret for reasons of safeguarding - for example if someone comes in who knows a valid reason why the marriage should not take place. There should however be a clause allowing the ejection of someone who simply wants to disrupt proceedings.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but officiants would need training, not just advice. Just putting the advice in a handbook is not enough: more discussion is needed and the opportunity to raise questions.

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, this is a sensible option.

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This infrastructure needs to be put in place as soon as possible.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, PLUS the marriage should be void if the required preliminaries (such as separate interviews) have not been correctly followed. Procedures would need to be in place to allow this to be proved. We asked the Local Government Ombudsman to investigate my mother's marriage and she said she could not because "no evidence is kept at marriage". Also, the CPS's main reason for being unable to prosecute the man who married my mother (for Forced Marriage) was that "no evidence is kept at marriage"., even though my mother had a five-year history of diagnosed vascular dementia, and one of the registrars on the day queried whether she had capacity to marry. Evidence needs to be kept and this is why one of the goals of Justice for Joan is that weddings should be audio- or video-recorded.

No

Please expand on your answer:

Numbers 2 and 3 are vital for safeguarding purposes.

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

"Express consent" is not detailed enough and requires further definition. At present it is almost impossible to prove incapacity at marriage and this must be addressed.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This presumption must be abolished for safeguarding purposes.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There is no time period which is helpful here.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, for example failing to explain that a marriage revokes a will should be considered misleading. This information must be included in marriage ceremonies or the notification of marriage so that couples can give fully informed consent to the marriage.

Consultation Question 67:

Please expand on your answer:

No: Absolutely not. This would leave too many holes where fraud could be committed.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Any such provisions should be able to apply to all couples but it is more important to conduct marriages thoroughly and with minimal opportunities for fraud and forced marriage. It is important not to be panicked into changes that have not been thought through.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, definitely.

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, though thorough safeguarding checks must have taken place prior to the wedding.

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, but the officiant must be trained and qualified in safeguarding matters.

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

Yes, but the officiant must be trained and qualified in safeguarding matters.

Consultation Question 71:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

All officiants must be qualified and trained in safeguarding.

Consultation Question 72:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

They would need to be trained and qualified and have safeguarding training. There are many elderly people on cruise ships and some might not have capacity to marry - it is important that any officiant could identify this and not get swept along by the holiday atmosphere. Predators could otherwise take the elderly on a cruise with the express intent of marrying them with fewer checks and no family knowing.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely as they would need to make firm safeguarding checks - it is known that people behave more recklessly when away from home so particularly important to check that each party in a couple has capacity to marry. Those with dementia could be particularly confused, and therefore at risk, on a cruise ship away from their own environment.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Absolutely. Otherwise this is wide open to predatory marriages.

Please expand on your answer:

Below-cost

Consultation Question 84:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Qualifications should be mandatory to professionalise officiants, and a fee should be payable for the checks that are needed.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

These proposals would help many couples to marry but are not sufficient to protect against predatory marriage, unless it is planned to build in safeguarding after the results of this consultation have been collated. The idea of having just one officiant at a marriage is particularly dangerous with regard to predatory marriage, forced marriage and the registrar's personal safety. The idea of marrying in different venues would be very attractive to many couples but the appropriate safeguarding needs to be in place, with consequences if it is not.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

We would expect the proposals - particularly more training and qualification for registrars - to increase the cost of marriage. At present many couples spend a huge amount of money on their wedding but the actual costs of the marriage are small in comparison. Any increase in costs would be justified by increased safeguarding.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I do not think that saving couples money should be a prime consideration - at the moment it is comparatively inexpensive to marry, so adding to the cost to introduce safeguarding and training for registrars is more important. Many couples spend thousands of pounds on weddings so any increase in price caused by safeguarding measures or the recording of weddings would be well justified and would certainly not prevent couples from marrying. The cost of the marriage ceremony itself is not generally a factor in a couple's decision to marry.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There needs to be a national, easily-accessed, searchable and easily-checked, register of proposed weddings online so people can object where there are issues with capacity etc. There is no link with Power of Attorney at marriage either. I had Power of Attorney for my mother as she was incapable of making the simplest decision and yet the marriage allowed her to, unknowingly, revoke her own Will.

A national, searchable database of planned weddings plus link with Power of Attorney would make it both easier and safer for people to marry in different parts of the country.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I am concerned about this - how would those concerns arise in a remote interview? The person may not actually be alone, they may be subject to subtle pressure or overt threats. It can be very hard even in person to assess whether someone is freely consenting - diluting even that contact is a very bad idea in my opinion.

Consultation Question 8:

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree - there is a balancing of risk needed but on the whole I think this must be right. I would suggest that in addition to the caveat process, there should also be a 'wedding alert' form that can be completed online via the GRO. This could operate along the same lines as a 6 month renewable 'standing search' used in probate to discover when/if someone has extracted a grant of probate.

As things stand, a paper caveat can be lodged at a specific Registry office on the grounds that a person, for example, lacks capacity. It is a blunt tool and if it is filed in time, may prevent a wedding but at the risk of a hostile court battle over capacity.

If a wedding can take place anywhere - and given that capacity is fluctuating - a wedding alert would simply notify a concerned family member and they could take whatever action might then be necessary which could potentially at least appear less hostile.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There are currently insufficient safeguards in place to ensure that 1 above can happen; registrars do not have any training on safeguarding. They do not always see parties separately. Even if they do, there are no standard questions to check even cursorily for understanding. Those with dementia, women especially, are often adept at appearing capacious and 'putting on a good show', nodding and smiling.

Given the serious legal consequences of marriage there is astonishingly little protection for the vulnerable elderly (or those with a brain injury/learning disability etc) who can be groomed into marriage. There are no consequences for failure to adhere to the guidance for registrars, which is expressed as 'should' rather than 'must' in any event. I wouldn't want to see registrars being held personally responsible but if there is no accountability - and no evidence kept from a wedding (which may be held secretly if it is a predatory or abusive one - how is any such marriage going to be capable of being annulled?

On the day of the wedding it will be, practically, a very difficult matter even for someone trained in assessing capacity to refuse to marry a couple.

I believe it will open up the wedding venue market to become more dynamic and will offer couples greater scope at what they can have available at their wedding. It will help boost the sector and will enable smaller companies and business to thrive rather than just the large wedding venues. It will help boost the economy in rural areas.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The current law prohibits people from getting married in the place of their choice. Many couples say they would like to marry outside and some do at our venue but still have to do the legal part another time, which most do not like. At the moment couples cannot marry in our marquee, which seems ridiculous as it is a sound structure built to withstand 80 mph winds. We get many couples who believe this can be done at the moment but we have to tell them otherwise.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Anything which helps reduce the cost and the stress for couples getting married is particularly welcome, especially in the light of what has occurred this year.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

We are a small venue, only hosting a few weddings a year. As the law stands at present, the cost of licensing our venue would be prohibitive. We lose a lot of weddings because couples nowadays like to get married and have their reception all at one venue.

The new laws would benefit our business hugely. We are a small country venue running alongside our farming enterprise. If we were able to hold weddings outdoors or in our marquee it would increase our business dramatically.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Will be entering into heterosexual civil ceremony in 2021 after being together for 10 years but didn't want to get married.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not married

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not married

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not always recognised as spouse so get none of the benefits despite being in a committed relationship for 10 years, living together for 8 years.

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

I did not want to enter into a traditional marriage because of the outdated beliefs and laws surrounding the contract. I do not agree with the legacy attached to the marriage ceremony but up until 2019 there were no alternatives in law, until the heterosexual civil ceremony was allowed.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Our ceremony was postponed because the small room could not accommodate more than 10 guests. If ceremonies were allowed outside then more flexibility would be possible. Also, the high costs of venues outside of registry offices would be negated as Ceremonies wouldn't be as constrained to specific locations.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

So long as identity can be proved and safeguards against forced or predatory marriage are better enforced.

Consultation Question 5:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I didn't want to get married and still don't but it's unfair the law doesn't recognise my relationship so comprising with civil partnership. I believe the outdated laws do prevent marriage but I think there should be more alternatives to marriage, like register as a spouse for the legal protection without being married.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

As locations are limited the cost of a wedding ceremony is very expensive outside of registry offices. By opening up locations it would remove the monopoly and lower costs generally which is a good thing as debt shouldn't be accrued for a wedding.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

More competition should lower the cost of a ceremony which is solely needed.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

It will standardise the costs across country as cost of additional ceremony at venues can be much more than hosting reception only which is unreasonable. I was quoted £2000 to have the ceremony at a venue on top of reception cost, plus registrar.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

More place could benefit from weddings without initial outlay and people could marry in meaningful locations and boost local businesses in more locations.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

They will benefit from increased fees from processing and attending more Ceremonies

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

More business in the area so more money, spread more evenly across country and industries.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

More interest as less need to have destination weddings if you wish to marry outdoors.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Small increase in business for wedding parties all staying on same ship

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Popular areas would get inundated with people wishing to marry whilst other areas would lose out. Also, people with something to hide would be able to give false information (such as where they live) to obtain "sham" marriages in order to gain residency in the UK.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with the online part of this proposal as it would be easier for checks to be made by families worried about any family member whom they suspect is being taken advantage of by someone without any scruples.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

If the Registrar has any concerns there must be enough time for them to be addressed before a legally binding marriage contract can be entered into.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

In a "remote" interview a vulnerable person could be coerced into giving the impression they are freely agreeing to the marriage, also an elderly person with memory issues could give answers they do not remember giving. Registrars should be trained to look out for tell tale signs something is not right and have the power to contact relatives if they feel at all suspicious. A marriage licence is a very powerful document.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

That sounds reasonable, provided notice is also given in England or Wales if the other person is resident in either of those countries.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It works both ways. Not publicly displaying this information online could put a vulnerable person at risk too.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided the original officiant was happy that there was no reason this marriage could not proceed it should not matter who was taking the actual service.

Please share your views below:

There should be no instance where a substitute officiant could be brought in to conduct a marriage that another officiant had doubts about and was investigating.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If a marriage is taking place in England or Wales the banns should be published there as being able to publish them elsewhere can offer unscrupulous a way of hiding any criminal activity, i.e. sham marriages, marriage to an elderly person without their family's knowledge.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

War damage seems highly unlikely these days.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Banns should be widely published, preferably online as this is accessible to all.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes to both questions. A marriage contract is legally binding and the Clergy have a huge responsibility to protect vulnerable people.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, both participants should be consulted before a common licence is granted in order to protect both parties.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

Provided the Church accepts its legal responsibility to make sure both parties are indeed entering into this union willingly and are both compos mentis. If the church cannot guarantee that then civil preliminaries should be required before any church wedding.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriages should not be conducted in a quick, conveyor belt system, but undertaken in a manner that reflects the legally binding power a marriage certificate holds.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Church weddings should be conducted by someone with more authority than a clerk.

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A marriage is more than a religious ceremony, it is a legally binding contract and should be recognised as such.

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

A marriage is a legally binding contract and needs to be officiated by a trained Registrar as I doubt anyone without any religious belief would opt for a Church wedding. There is no reason why they cannot be a separate "non-religious" ceremony before or after the legal ceremony at the Registry Office.

Please share your views below:

Marriage is a legally binding contract and should not be entered into lightly, so I see no reason why anyone other than a Registrar or the Church should be given the power to conduct marriages.

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is legal binding and not just about religious or non-religious beliefs. Those without religious belief have always had the option of a Civil Ceremony (Registry Office) so there is no need to hand the power ad hoc to any organisation that wants to set up in business and conduct marriage ceremonies without being answerable to anyone if they "tick" the right boxes.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes, the law should be able to exclude any organisation it considers could be acting unlawfully or not acting in the public's best interests. Weddings are a big money maker and this could be exploited in the wrong hands.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I do not understand this question. I assume the Church controls who conducts weddings in their churches and Registrars are appointed to conduct civil ceremonies in Registry Offices.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

To avoid fraudulent activities, the public should have access to any list of nominated officiants.

Consultation Question 29:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is legally binding and there should be no danger of any unscrupulous persons being able to set themselves up as Officiants. Applying to the General Register Office and having their name added to a public list of officiants would not be sufficient to protect the public.

Consultation Question 30:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

How would such organisations be able to prove these officiants are "fit and proper"? What legal redress would there be if later on any such officiant was proved not to be "fit and proper"?

Consultation Question 31:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I see no reason for "independent officiants" and would question why someone would want to set themselves up as such instead of becoming a Registrar through normal channels. I am sure the Registrar General has a big enough workload without having this added. Also, unscrupulous people always manage to find "legal" loopholes to suit their purposes so strongly believe the business of conducting civil ceremonies should stay within the hands of professional Registrars. Even Registrars can unwittingly conduct ceremonies that should not have taken place so adding a layer of "independent officiants" would only add to the problem.

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

My main worry is that unscrupulous people would see this as just a money spinner with no check and balances in place to make sure the marriage should be taking place, for reasons already stated above (sham marriages, vulnerable people etc.)

Consultation Question 33:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Being able to charge what they what could encourage those criminally inclined to conduct a marriage ceremony even if they suspect such a marriage should not, legally, be taking place.

Consultation Question 34:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not agree with the idea of independent celebrants - this could easily pave the way to criminal activities.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is a very important step and should not be treated lightly, which is why I believe "independent officiants" should not be introduced.

Consultation Question 36:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The General Register Office should offer guidance but the dangerous idea of "independent officiants" should not be pursued.

Consultation Question 37:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If this dangerous "independent officiant" route is taken then this needs to have an official, legal monitoring process with the power to take immediate action when required to do so.

Consultation Question 38:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The General Register Office should have this power without waiting to see if the body who nominated them has itself failed to act.

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The General Register Office must have this power, to ensure no criminal activity can take place.

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If you are going to have "independent officiants" they should be reviewed on an annual basis to make sure they are doing no harm to the public.

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Independent Officiant's would need to be made aware that they will be continually monitored and "struck off" if they did not comply with the rules.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If one of the party is being forced into the marriage, or agreeing to a "sham" marriage, or taking part even though their mental faculties are in doubt, I cannot see the relevance of making a verbal declaration or expressing consent by signing a document other than allowing whoever is conducting the ceremony the ability to say they have proof both parties agreed to the marriage. My concern here would be marriages being conducted by "independent officiants" for material gain being able to wash their hands of any responsibility.

Consultation Question 43:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage is legally binding and this element should be the basis of any marriage, so any "form and ceremony" should be standard and not something conjured up by the parties concerned.

Consultation Question 44:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Any legal requirements must be standard but the other parts of the ceremony can be in accordance with the wishes of the religious groups.

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A devout Christian should not be made feel they cannot include religion in a second marriage just because they had been divorced due to a previous partner's actions.

Please share your views below:

They should be, within reason, whatever those getting married expressly request.

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If someone wants to "seal" their marriage with a religious service after a civil ceremony that should be allowed, especially considering the current climate where small civil ceremonies are taking place because legal restraints are in force because of Covid.19. A church blessing involving larger numbers of family and friends should not be a problem.

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Having a "closed door" approach plays into the hands of those "bending" the law, If there is nothing to hide there is no reason not to keep with the status quo.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This would open the door for unscrupulous "independent officiants" to set themselves up in business. It would be very difficult to oversee this if hundreds, if not thousands, of venues suddenly appeared on the market.

Please share your views below:

I see no problem with the present system.

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The present arrangement does not need changing.

Consultation Question 50:

No

Yes

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the parties want a religious ceremony then why would they opt for anything other than a religious venue? Likewise, if the parties are not religious why would they want a civil ceremony in a religious venue?

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Independent Officiants should not have this power.

Consultation Question 52:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The current officiants (be it Church or Registry Office) already conduct ceremonies in venues meeting these requirements. Independent Officiants should not be given this power.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Should not be necessary for the General Register Office to do this - unless you are referring to Independent Officiants, who should not have the power to conduct a ceremony anywhere that does not currently have the authority to be a suitable venue.

Consultation Question 53:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If the locations already host weddings I fail to see what the problem is?

Please share your views below:

If the venue has been granted permission to hold such ceremonies and the parties booking the wedding have selected it I fail to see what pre-approval process is needed?

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Such details should be recorded at the time of the marriage, not added afterwards.

Consultation Question 55:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The last option, both English and Welsh, sounds the most sensible one.

Consultation Question 56:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The internet is wonderful when it works, but we all know it can be open to fraud, crash when overloaded (i.e. during Covid.19), be totally unreliable in certain areas.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should be witnesses and the marriage document should be signed.

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 59:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Not cohating after such a marriage sounds like a sham marriage.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Either the couple is legally married or not married. What friends and family believe is irrelevant.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If someone has not given their consent to a marriage there should be no time limit on their being able to petition for such a marriage being declared null and void.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A good reason not to introduce "independent officiants"!

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

Marriage is a legal contract and the "law" should continue to govern any wedding taking place, irrespective of the circumstances,

Consultation Question 63:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It depends on the circumstances, i.e. if there is sufficient time for a registration officer to interview the terminally ill party.

Consultation Question 64:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 65:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 67:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with the extension after a national emergency (like Covid.19) but strongly disagree with remote weddings as this could have a bad impact on vulnerable people being coerced into marriage.

No

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If someone is dying their wish to make sure those they love are financially protected should be respected.

Consultation Question 68:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 69:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Ceremonies being conducted under the law of England or Wales should be undertaken either in England or Wales.

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

No. This could pave the way for even more sham marriages.

Consultation Question 71:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

They should give all details so such ceremonies can be checked out beforehand.

Consultation Question 72:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This opens up another loophole for independent officiants.

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not convinced "independent officiants" would not be open to unscrupulous practice so even less impressed with the idea of "maritime officiants"...

Other

Please expand on your answer:

That should be the obvious interpretation.

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

The only demand I can see is for those with criminal intent.

Consultation Question 74:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Always assuming they intend to return to the UK? Cannot see how this could be enforced if left open.

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 76:

(2) a separate fee from other forms of giving notice, set nationally on compassionate grounds at below cost level.

Please expand on your answer:

Compassion in such circumstances should be the standard.

Consultation Question 82:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 83:

(1) the fee should be set by regulation at a level below cost-recovery; or

Please expand on your answer:

This really depends on the financial circumstances of the parties concerned and really should be at the discretion of the registration officer.

Consultation Question 84:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If this is concerning "independent officiants" the fee set to authorise such an application should be sufficiently high to discourage those just looking for an easy way to make money.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I do not think current laws discourages or prevents couples from getting married if that is what they wish to do. The add on costs of weddings (i.e. dress, venue etc) is more likely to put couples with limited finances. The provisional proposal of introducing "independent officiants" might increase the number of marriages - but possibly for the wrong reasons.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

As stated above, I believe the "wedding industry" has hiked the cost of weddings and this is not within the control of the law.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I do not think your proposals have any impact on the true cost of weddings, as stated above there seems to be a huge pressure on people to "splash out" on a very expensive wedding (dress, venue, honeymoon, bucks/hens nights etc.) that has nothing to do with the lawful part of the ceremony. The idea of ceremonies in private homes does play into the hands of those trying to coerce someone into marriage so there would need to be very careful checks and balances here.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

As stated above, I do not believe the current law on venues is the problem. No idea what the fee is for a registration officer is to attend a wedding venue but I guess it pales into insignificance against the fees involved with the venue itself.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

(1) Pre-approval is very necessary to protect the parties involved; (2) if there is a shortage of registration officers for civil weddings would it not make better sense to recruit more rather than the dubious option (3) of non-religious belief organisations/independent officiants and (4) just about sums up the real problem - weddings are seen as a commercial opportunity and have priced many couples out of the market.

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The law must remain the most important aspect with regard to marriage, it is after all a legally binding contract between two people which can only be broken by the intervention of the legal process.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I do not see why local authorities should "benefit". Marriage is a solemn, legal process not just a money spinner.

Consultation Question 89:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

What is important is that the laws of England and Wales are upheld at all times, unfortunately there will always be those that are intent on breaking those laws so in my opinion the current laws need strengthening not weakening in any way.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The proposed schemes would probably make things easier but at the same time risk opening the door for more criminal activity if not properly overseen by those in authority.

Consultation Question 90:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

I am still worried that more marriages at sea runs the risk of more fraudulent activity.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

You need to weigh up any commercial gain from maritime industry against losses within the current venues and the risk of fraudulent activity.

Consultation Question 91:

Please share your views below:

I have no idea what the cost implications are but cannot see that such schemes would make it any cheaper for couples, if that is what your aim is.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Rather than just living together I felt that marriage, in 1977, offered more safeguards and would be better for any children we may have had. I also thought that if there were any difficulties then we would be more likely to work through them than if it was easy to just walk away. And it showed my commitment to my husband. I would probably have chosen a civil partnership had the option been there.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage should be a joyous celebration in a place the couple choose. This may not be where they live and having to reside there for 7 days could be a problem.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as the potential bride and groom have a face to face interview with a person who is aware of things such as forced marriages and marriages of convenience, and has the ability to spot them.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

If no problems are identified then the time until someone can marry is irrelevant. But there should be a length of time after which if the marriage has not taken place then another interview is required.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I do not believe that remote interviews give the best information to ascertain if the marriage should not go ahead. Therefore I would not agree with remote interviews.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

The process could be started.

Consultation Question 9:

Couples should be able to marry where they wish within the United Kingdom.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

This is discriminatory. If you are considering publishing banns online or elsewhere for couples not marrying in an Anglican Church then Anglican marriages should have to do the same.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

No. The Anglican Church should be the same as anywhere else where couples can marry.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Couples should be interviewed separately to avoid intimidation by the other in the case of forced marriages.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I think the current law discourages marriage. This may be due more to the ceremony with the promise to obey and the general idea of marriage as less than a partnership. I think that civil partnerships should be open to any orientation of couple and would probably be more popular than marriage.

Close friend's son's wedding cancelled for a year. Distress and harm to mental health of all concerned.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There may be many good reasons why this may not be practical, and is capable of being 'contrived' anyway, so means little.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is a better solution.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

This is such a serious and binding contract that 7 days gives thinking time. As always, there may be exceptional reasons which justify overriding this, e.g where one partner is very ill.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

No, they should be in person, but with good flexibility of where.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes, agree no change.

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would help reduce the likelihood of pressurised and secret marriages.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nothing to add.

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems sensible.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Definitely. This is sensible.

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nothing to add.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Yes, if it is a church wedding, this makes sense.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes. This is a serious and binding contract, and helps reflection.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Not sure it would help individuals to speak openly if there were any 'threat' from the partner being present.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, this is a solemn and binding contract.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

There are some obvious ones to include, such as humanism, but it cannot be a complete list.

Consultation Question 25:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure this is strong enough.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes, this should not be 'a wedding'.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes. Individuals may change. They should meet a set of criteria, rather than be named.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The proposed overhaul of the system is also tied up with:

- the ease of divorce;
- rules in relation to marriage overruling Wills
- rules in relation to inheritance where no Will.

The widening of rules would be more inclusive, and others will have a better idea than me about to what extent. This is a good principle.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

as a celebrant in training i can only officiate at a ceremony..i would like the registry to perform initial checks and allow whatever officiant to sign marriage schedule at ceremony and allow us to do so so its recognised as legal...i feel that all the checks to give the go ahead for the marriage to take place have been done at the registrars office anyway..

i am at the moment paying for a training course in celebrancy and am also having to look and spend further to conduct at a ceremony legally this would simplify the whole process in my eyes as i would uplift marriage schedule and sign on the day and return to registrar.

Please expand on your answer:

I am concerned about predatory marriages, where a person targets a vulnerable person, marries them in order to be a beneficiary after they die. Registrars need more training to determine whether a couple is in full capacity when they agree to marry, and understand what this means including the current law which makes any Will invalid on marriage.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I think all interviews should be in person with just the Registrar and each person intending to marry separately, so that each can be honest and open, and so that the Registrar can determine whether they know all the implications of marriage, and have the capacity to make such an important decision.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should be two officants/registrars at all eddings as at present - trained and competent.

Consultation Question 20:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Registration officers should continue to be able to officiate at all types of weddings - why on earth limit these people? This is bonkers.

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should ALWAYS be two on duty as at present.

Consultation Question 47:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The existing arrangements allow for public scrutiny and celebration and are an essential part of a wedding.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Just read that question - "anywhere"?

Really? What about safety arrangements?

Public scrutiny?

The chances for this suggestion to allow for abuse of the importance of weddings is vast.

outdoors,

Please share your views below:

Outdoors, with safeguards, is fine.

The other three options are laughable and undermine the importance of the wedding ceremony.

Consultation Question 49:

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

My understanding is that this current requirement is, at the same time both restrictive for most couples but does nothing to safeguard vulnerable individuals from consent issues.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This simplifies the initial process but should ensure an opportunity for competency to be assessed properly.

Consultation Question 6:

another period of time.

Please expand on your answer:

If the process has been shortened by allowing it to be commenced on line there is no reason why there should not be a two week period to allow for all comments, objections, etc to be made in case there are potential issues with the proposed marriage.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Yes this seems reasonable.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Ideally, if it's not already it should be notified in and outside England and Wales. This is after all a public record.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Please share your views below:

No - this introduces a risk of too many variables as to why the officiant could be changed at short notice.

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The banns should be published locally for a specific reason, so that there is transparency. Why would a couple have banns published in Northern Ireland for a wedding to take place in England?

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

A historical scenario, hopefully never to be repeated.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

No - it should be all the churches in the diocese.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Yes, to improve clarity and safeguarding for those involved.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, to avoid obvious undue pressure from either party and again for clarity and audit purposes should an issue arise at a later date.

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, if one wishes to marry in Church there should be some commitment to the process.

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Otherwise it becomes a numbers game, and sadly, the pursuit of profit will become the overriding aim of a minority of individuals and corners will inevitably be cut.

Consultation Question 33:

No

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This must be allowed to avoid later consent issues or concerns having no validity and takes the pressure from officiants being the final arbiters of competence/capacity on the day.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Times have changed people live different more flexible lives these days.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The classic common law marriage misconception should be finally consigned to the bin, a couple is either legally married in an appropriate ceremony with all the appropriate transparency and checks and balances or not.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This should all be completed beforehand.

Consultation Question 61:

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The proposals should, if implemented, increase the number of couples being legally married.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The costs have to cover the services provided. If many couples can afford what seem to many to be exorbitant amounts for dresses, wedding venues, parties and honeymoons that can and should afford to pay for the mechanics of the legal process of marrying.

Chapter 1: Introduction

Consultation Question 1:

No

Please expand on your answer:

We are planned to be married in February 2022

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not applicable

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We are not yet married, it is very important to us to have a humanist legal marriage

Other

Please expand on your answer:

We are not yet married

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

It is very impersonal and less meaningful to have to go through marrying before the actual event. We do not want to have to go to Ireland or Scotland or Wales to get a legal humanist marriage. It seems wrong that England still is not recognising humanist marriages as legal.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

N/a

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would free up the time of the registrar office and makes sense

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Being able to give notice online is a good way forward

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

Seven days is an acceptable amount of time and allows government to do their work

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

This is absolutely a good idea, this will save time of both the registration office and the person applying

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes should still be possible

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Totally agree, online notice is more modern and less expensive

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The schedule should include any humanist celebrant that will be present at the ceremony if necessary.

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, this should account for humanist views also

Please share your views below:

Humanist officiants should have equal standing to any civil ceremony

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agree

Consultation Question 14:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

Agree

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

Churches should adhere to the rules of any other marriage

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Agree

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

Religious weddings no longer have a place in our society in my opinion, all weddings should either be civil ceremonies or humanist marriages, the reason for this is the decline in religious people in England and the reduction in church weddings.

At the very least humanist marriages should be as legal as a church wedding.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Humanist officiants should be legalised to allow couple to have a humanist beliefs wedding.

To not allow this is discriminatory.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree, if a civil wedding then they attend. If a humanist wedding then a celebrant should be allowed to legally marry the couple.

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agree

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Religious weddings no longer have a place in our society. If the church can marry people then so should a humanist celebrant.

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes I agree, humanism is as much as a belief as believing in god. Therefore the government should legalise humanist marriages.

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I agree as a humanist.

Please share your views below:

As long as humanism is listed as a legal marriage.

Peoples beliefs should be recognised along with any religious organisation as to not be discriminatory.

Consultation Question 25:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Meeting regularly in groups does not constitute a belief system, I believe in humanism and would like a humanist wedding.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

I agree, if a belief system is immoral then it should be disallowed from officiating weddings.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I believe that the current laws discourage people including myself from getting married. My belief is humanism and I would prefer not to have a civil marriage although at the moment I don't have a choice.

I believe there will be an increase in people getting married if non religious legal marriages are allowed

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There is a significant extra cost to having a civil marriage prior to a humanist ceremony. This is very discriminatory for couples who can't afford to do both.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

There is a necessity for humanist only marriages as a civil wedding is not representative of couples with non religious beliefs. The benefits would be the conservatives showing a forward thinking policy towards inclusivity and a reduction in costs for couples wanting non religious weddings

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Consultation Question 88:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Local authorities would have increased revenue due to more couples wanting non religious marriages

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Increased revenue, easier access, less work load

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 2:

Please share your views below:

A register office wedding is pretty sterile. 15 minutes only and no opportunity to really participate in it.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I personally have no experience but my daughter is planning her wedding for July 2021 and is finding it very stressful as she has no idea if it can happen and if so how many people can be there. Several of her friends who had planned weddings in 2020 have postponed them twice already.

She is also terribly upset that because her wedding won't be in a church, it is not legally recognised as a marriage.

Even though the venue has a wedding licence there is no framework to include the legal civil part of the ceremony into the wedding as she wants it

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Many couples do not live in the place where they intend to marry. This is an outdated and meaningless requirement

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Because this personal interview issue is currently causing a giant backlog. There must be a simpler way to prove identity : you do not have to have an interview for a passport or driving licence

Consultation Question 6:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

I have no view on this.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Absolutely

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This seems logical, feasible and practical

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems logical that there should be a term beyond which the schedule ( by which I assume you mean period of time during which the marriage can take place) lapses

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, logical

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

I have no view on this

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

They can do this online.

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

It's time we standardised the process. It's iniquitous that non believers cannot include this in their ceremony as a matter of course

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why don't they now?

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why ever not?

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why would you need more than one?

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I thought they already were

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would allow non believers and the god fearing alike to have the kind of ceremony they want

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The ceremony the couple choose, so long as it complies in all respect with British law, should reflect the beliefs and preferences of the couple concerned

Please share your views below:

Any organisation that is classified as extremist in its political or religious beliefs, or promotes behaviour that does not comply with the laws and humanitarian principles of our country

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Provided they are not extremist nut jobs

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Yes yes and yes!!

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

I do not have a view on this

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

These things need to be regulated and monitored

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Again, no nut jobs

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Logical

Consultation Question 32:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I see no reason why the officiants shouldn't charge a modest fee to cover time and expense

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Modest fee. Weddings are very expensive and we should not encourage officiants to over charge

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I do not think that it would be acceptable to a non religious couple to find out their officiant was themselves a member of a church or sect. That negates the reason for choosing a secular service

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

No Elvis impersonators required!

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Marriage, whether secular or religious, is a serious and sacred business and should be taken as such.

Consultation Question 37:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It should be possible for anyone unsuitable to be removed if the nominating body refuses to do so

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As above

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Obviously

Consultation Question 40:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I do not see a reason for this

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Only if vicars have to do the same!

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I cannot imagine why this is not the case already

Consultation Question 44:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Logical

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why not?

Please share your views below:

I have no view on this

Consultation Question 46:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If the reforms go ahead, there should no longer be any need for this

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why ever not?

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

So long as the couple and the officiant agree

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

I have no objection to any of these

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I cannot see a requirement for this

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

Yes

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There is no need to offend the god fearing by profaning their spaces

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The safety of the officiant cannot be comprised

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Avoids arguments

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Logical

Please share your views below:

Must be a government process which is well defined.

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Logical

Consultation Question 55:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is a legal document and must be intelligible in the language of all parts of the UK

Consultation Question 56:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Sooner rather than later

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is sensible and necessary to avoid exploitation

Other

Please expand on your answer:

It should, unless those mistakes are rectified in front of an officiant

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Necessary to prevent exploitation

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Seems logical. There may be good reasons why the couple cannot immediately cohabit

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This has never been legally true and is a common and damaging misconception

Consultation Question 60:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't have an opinion on this

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Obviously

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

I think the legal framework should encourage and facilitate marriage instead of making it a dual process for the non religious. In these pandemic times especially, where weddings are having to be rearranged, postponed, reorganised at the drop of a hat, it makes no sense for registrars to be backed up solidly whilst church weddings can go ahead

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

I am an Independent Celebrant and as such every one of my 2020 booked wedding ceremonies has either cancelled or been postponed to 2021. Some of these were moved to later in the year before moving again to next year.

Of the two ceremonies that were cancelled, in both cases the couples opted to have an intimate legal ceremony only (instead of the personal non legal ceremony they had decided to book) as this was the only option allowed to them at that time in the pandemic.

Some of the others have continued with their legal marriage registration in 2020 and will hold a full personal ceremony with me next year, followed by a full reception.

My business has been strained financially as I have postponed my 2020 ceremonies to 2021 and therefore lots of key dates are already fully booked from any potential couples wishing to book with me for 2021.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I feel the only proof required to be lawfully married in England or Wales should be British Citizenship and ID. Lots of couples return to home towns, or even home countries to be married and this is a very outdated law.

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is in line with current every day expectations and also helpful for those that are working during office hours.

Consultation Question 6:

three days;

Please expand on your answer:

I am assuming by this time all relevant documents and proof are already approved and this is just formality? In which case this works with those couples travelling to be married in another district to the one they reside.

It would be tricky if any further documents are then suddenly required at this time that may then affect whether the wedding will go ahead.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Yes remote interviews would be useful, so long as the couples are aware that further in house interviews may be required and that they have sufficient notice prior to the wedding to be able to hold these.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

Yes absolutely

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, the public should remain to have the right of notice of marriage - doing so online is a modern solution to this.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Is the schedule given after notice or marriage? Yes I think this could be valid for up to 12 months

Consultation Question 11:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, the couples should be aware of who is going to officiate for them

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, this enables the marriage to continue

Please share your views below:

Yes, all couples should be subject to the same checks regardless of which church or if in non religious settings.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes, you must get declarations from both parties

Consultation Question 18:

Anglican preliminaries should continue to be recognised as legal preliminaries to weddings officiated by the Church of England and the Church in Wales;
or

Please expand on your answer:

I think having ALL weddings preceded by civil preliminaries would put too much strain on the Registration Offices countrywide. This system currently works so I see no need to change it.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Ass all the above are what make each marriage legal it is important that the officiant present has these legal duties

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I believe each officiant will attract their own work;
ie a Registrar will conduct Civil Ceremonies
a Vicar will conduct Religious Ceremonies a Celebrant (Humanist, Independent and others) will conduct more personal ceremonies with alternative elements to those offered in Civil or Religious ceremonies

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It seems a waste of resources to require two registrars present at every civil ceremony

Independent Celebrants should also be listed as they offer ceremonies which will include any faith the couple wish. This could be of no faith, single faith or mixed faith to represent a couple who practice differing faiths to each other. Without Independent Celebrants on the list all of these couples will fall outside of a system that will truly reflect who they are and their needs.

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should be a record kept of all officiants that are legally allowed to perform legal marriage and this list should be accessible by the public by way of checking that their chosen officiant is registered as such

Consultation Question 29:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Independent Officiants have a huge following of couples and they should be able to conduct legal marriage as well as faith and belief systems (especially for couples of no faith, no belief or indeed a mixture)

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 31:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, there must be a system of ensuring that all officiants are fit and proper. Training must be completed to be sure of a professional approach

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The belief system should come higher than the profits made

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

By choosing an Independent Officiant it is the couples choice as to whether to pay the fees or not.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Agree - the officiant should only be registered under one "heading" or "type" of officiant

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes, a wedding can be fun and modern but should totally uphold all dignity and solemnity of marriage and the occasion of the commitment must always be priority

Consultation Question 36:

No

Please expand on your answer:

I believe this guidance should be provided by the associating body attached to each type of officiant.

Each associating body would have guidance direct from the General Register Office and all such guidance should be agreed

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

And I would encourage ongoing training and assessment of each officiant from the organisation which nominated them

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 39:

No

Please expand on your answer:

If the Independent Officiant is part of an association - this monitoring should be offered by the association.

The General Register Office should only act in such a way if the officiant is not part of an association or body

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

Yes I do believe the current law discourages couples from marrying as the content does not currently appeal to some of them. This is particularly true if the couple have different faiths. I also feel that there are couples who do not like the formality of current ceremonies set by law and this is also discouraging.

I would hope the proposals will offer far more choice to couples and a much more modern approach to marriage that I feel could facilitate more weddings.

Consultation Question 86:

5. I feel I am qualified to answer this question as I am an Independent Celebrant and this is something that I constantly deal with. There are lots of couples who love the idea of having a Celebrant but are put off by the necessity of having a separate legal wedding at the Register Office. I wouldn't say this is usually down to cost but it is definitely off putting that this often has to happen on a different day to the day of the Ceremony

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

1. unknown
2. There could definitely be a cost saving if the couple are wanting to use their own land or that of a relative / friend and this is very appealing
3. It is more about the time issue of having to take time out on a different day to the ceremony in order to obtain the legal marriage

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

The CV19 pandemic led to an immediate shut down of wedding ceremonies. This was upsetting for many but widely understood. As 'lockdown' was eased the fallout increased as wedding couples were forced to make alternative arrangements to dates, venues, numbers etc. The registration service was at the forefront in ensuring that where possible ceremonies were conducted as near to the wishes of the couple as was legally possible. Through sheer hard work and force of character staff facilitated a large number of ceremonies whilst also maintaining their other legally mandated services to a heightened degree (birth and death registrations). The fact that a recognised, respected organisation like the registration service was dealing with the ever changing, sometimes confusing directives was hugely reassuring to each couple involved. They were assured that whatever the CV19 situation locally they were given accurate, honest and timely advice allowing them to make necessary decisions. This worked because under the current framework the registration service are the subject matter experts on these matters, have vast experience and have a robust organisation to turn to for specialised advice.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This part of the law does seem outdated. Many countries outside of England & Wales have a far shorter period of required residency (I was married in Mauritius where the requirement is just 3 days) without any detrimental effect. I believe that there should be a shortened period or a removal of this criteria.

Consultation Question 5:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The requirement to notify in person in most circumstances is fundamental in the prevention of forced, coerced or sham marriages. The more personal interaction that is required ahead of a marriage does discourage the chances of unscrupulous activity.

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

Seven days does seem to be a reasonable amount of time between interview and marriage. This gives individuals time to provide outstanding information or clarify issues. It also allows registration staff sufficient time to voice concerns and receive advice when necessary.

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

Virtual interviews do seem to be a realistic and sensible option that could be offered alongside face to face interviews. CV19 has proved that this can be successful in other areas. It would be important that specific safeguarding, security and data protection issues are in place and that registrars are empowered adequately to also require a face to face interview should there be any concerns. The provision of suitable IT and associated support would be essential to the success of any such option.

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

It should be possible for notice to be given outside of England & Wales under these circumstances. The world is a smaller more interconnected place and provided there are safeguards in place which ensure that persons giving notice outside of England & Wales are meet all other requirements for a legal marriage then this seems a reasonable way ahead.

Consultation Question 9:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This is a matter for very careful handling. It is not uncommon for online data to be misused and persons put at financial, physical and emotional harm resulting from this misuse. It has to be asked does any benefit of online display outweigh the possible negative impacts. I do not believe that online display would be popular, required or brings any noticeable benefit to either authorities or individuals.

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided there are no significant changes to the schedule then I see no reason as to not extending its validity. CV19 has proved that unexpected interruption to plans lead to a good deal of administrative burden and this simple change could be beneficial to all concerned.

Consultation Question 11:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The allocation of a fully trained and authorised officiate to each ceremony is not as simple as putting a name on a sheet of paper. Last minute, unexpected changes to celebrants are not uncommon and sometimes in an emergency celebrants can change right up to the time of the wedding. This proposed change simply adds an unnecessary level of bureaucracy which after all this consultation is trying to avoid. Again what benefit does this bring to the event and administration - it is difficult to see any.

Consultation Question 12:

No

Please expand on your answer:

As per previous answer the current system allows for these circumstances already without the added bureaucracy. There is no benefit in changing this system.

Please share your views below:

As wedding ceremonies are conducted by two persons each with the same training, skills and knowledge they are already interchangeable as either deputy registrar or deputy superintendent registrar. here should not be any reason why substitute officiants need naming specifically on a schedule or by extension officially further authorised to act in other circumstances - they already can.

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Provided banns published elsewhere in the constituent UK or Ireland are done so legally then there is no benefit to removing their use to authorise an Anglican wedding in England & Wales. Unnecessary bureaucracy and detrimental to the process.

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

In these very explicit circumstances the publishing of banns elsewhere seems a logical and fair solution. Without knowing the specifics relating to the rule it would seem right that banns should be published locally elsewhere.

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

It seems right that the church hosting the event published the banns but in a more secular age it could also be logical to have banns displayed in the registration office which covers the location of the church too. The purpose of banns is to invite those with knowledge that could alter the legality of the marriage so it could be wise to have them displayed alongside civil notifications.

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

The clergy should be required to do the same checks and balances on the couple as happens in the registration office. The marriage (civil or religious) is a legal contract and as such the venue of it should have no bearing on the legal requirement for pre-ceremony checks and assurances. This should extend to the meeting with individuals separately. The majority of sham and forced weddings take place in religious venues where checks are less robust. This loophole needs closing.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Agreed. Anglican weddings should not have any different documentary or attendance requirements to civil ceremonies.

Consultation Question 18:

Not Answered

Please expand on your answer:

Provided the Anglican preliminaries are exactly the same as for civil ceremonies then they should continue to be recognised. However, where religious staff are untrained or unwilling to do the necessary checks (personal and documentary) then the rules should be altered to make civil preliminaries the only acceptable form of legal preliminaries to a wedding.

This could lead to religious staff focussing only on the couples spiritual needs and the legal requirements looked after solely by the registration service which does seem a preferable solution.

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The current provisions are robust.

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Registration officers currently provide a robust service at civil weddings.

Religious weddings should be provided by appropriate religious persons.

Consultation Question 21:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The requirement to have two officers present at each wedding is a fundamental check on the legal requirements of each ceremony. At each stage the 'deputy registrar' whilst compiling the documentation is also paying close attention to contract wording and declarations whilst also providing guidance and support to both their colleague and the couple. Reducing to one member of staff gives rise to undiscovered mistakes, additional stress and strain on individual officials. When suspicious activity is discovered (suspected sham or forced marriage) the fact that there are two members of staff present allows situations to be dealt with safely whilst also complying to the legal requirements. Again there is no benefit to a change to the current law in this respect and there could be an increase in invalid marriages being conducted.

Consultation Question 22:

No

Please expand on your answer:

All registrations and marriage ceremonies should only be done by those who have had training. It is short sighted to change this element of the law.

Consultation Question 23:

No

Please expand on your answer:

For clarity and balance only authorised and trained registration staff should be empowered to conduct legally binding contracts of marriage. This ensures that religious beliefs are not taken into account and that the legality of the marriage contract is upheld and entirely neutral.

Under the current law religious groups other than CofE or CoW can conduct their own ceremonies in accordance with their beliefs but they are not legal ceremonies - they can then go on to have a simple signing of documents in the presence of a registrar to make the contract binding. This seems a fair recognition of both secular and religious beliefs and is consistent with the situation that the Church of England (and Wales) is the recognised state religious organisation of England and Wales and whilst this may not be palatable for many it is a fact.

Permitting any religious organisation to conduct these events which put the couples under significant legal obligations is a dangerous proposal. Some religions have practices surrounding equality, monogamy etc which may not be conducive to other areas of law and could invalidate and damage the sanctity of the institution of the marriage contract.

More work needs to be done before this proposal is given further consideration.

Consultation Question 24:

No

Please expand on your answer:

As per previous answer I do not believe a change in the law is required in this area

Please share your views below:

This is a contentious and inflammatory proposal which will be challenged in the courts should it be enacted.

The current, simple organisation of the civil registration service or a non-binding religious ceremony (followed by a civil contract signing) encompasses all persons wanting to enter marriage and the legal obligations.

By allowing some groups to be defined as religious and some as non religious will cause anger and claims of bias and discrimination.

This is not an area where we need to be visiting.

No

Please expand on your answer:

As per previous answers this proposal is seriously flawed. Simply getting a group of 20 people to agree to a belief system is not difficult. This could lead to thousands of tiny new religious organisations each needing legal checks and balances. The cost would be enormous, the benefit minute and the administration astronomical.

It would lead to further problems such as who keeps a register or members, what happens if a legally recognised groups membership falls to 19 or less, the practices change or beliefs alter.

This proposal is riddled with problems and again brings little or no overall benefit.

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

Agreed. Any organisation or individual that promotes unlawful, immoral or purposes contrary to public policy does not earn the privilege to be involved in any way in the marriage ceremony or contract.

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

No - as per previous answer only fully qualified, trained and authorised staff should officiate at wedding ceremonies

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The GRO should maintain a register of trained and authorised officiants.

Consultation Question 29:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Having experienced two funeral ceremonies conducted by officiants appointed by a funeral director I was horrified as to the commercial bias in what was a very emotional event.

The current situation where local authority staff are recruited, trained, endorsed and monitored by their own organisation and validated randomly by the GRO works efficiently and robustly. There is no commercial incentive placed on staff by venues, retailers or wedding organisers and the focus is on ensuring that the legality of the marriage is forefront on the day. It is highly unlikely (as I have witnessed at funeral ceremonies) that the current standards will be maintained and that persons from outside of the local authority would not treat this as purely a business opportunity.

Currently one of the smallest expenses at a wedding is the legal elements and the services of the registrars. It is likely that the cost of a wedding will be further increased by the use of commercially motivated non-registration service staff.

Consultation Question 30:

No

Please expand on your answer:

It should be the GRO through local Superintendent Registrars that ensure that all staff involved in wedding ceremonies are fit and proper.

Consultation Question 31:

No

Please expand on your answer:

As per previous answer I do not support the appointment of independent officiants. Whilst they may comply with the above proposal there is no provision for checks on training, service quality or cost effectiveness.

What benefit does this bring to the current system - none to the couple. Indeed this could in fact lead to further expense and administration

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nobody should be making money from the officiating of the wedding and contract therein.

I do not support the proposal for 'any tom, dick or harry' officiating at weddings as a reasonable element to updating the current laws.

Consultation Question 33:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As per previous answer.

It would be virtually impossible for checks to be made to enforce this. It would be easy for somebody to charge the 'mandated' sum but then add on unofficial upgrades such as charging for readings or other non-legal elements of the ceremony.

This proposal offers the opportunity for profiteering through the backdoor with the victims being the couple, the sanctity of the contract and confidence in the system of marriage.

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The current system where celebrants are employees of a local authority or employed by the church works well. There are no conflicts of interest or belief. Changing the system is not required but in the event it should not be possible for a person to be independent and nominated, religious and non-religious. This would lead to profiteering and exploitation of the system.

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is the case now and there is no need to change.

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is the case now and there is no need to change

Consultation Question 37:

No

Please expand on your answer:

No - this is marking your own homework. The GRO should be the statutory body which ensures quality, training and standards.

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is the case now and should not be changed

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Should the misguided decision be made on appointing 'tom, dick or harry' to officiate then the GRO should be responsible for their administration and conduct. This will of course lead to greater strains on budgets and personnel.

Consultation Question 40:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Anybody officiating at a ceremony should have mandatory, periodic training to remain in date for their authorisation.

Consultation Question 41:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I do not agree with the proposal to appoint independent officiants. However anybody who does not agree and comply with CPD should no longer be authorised.

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

The preliminaries give each person an opportunity to declare no impediments and this should continue for both civil and religious events. It should also form part of the public declaration which gives other parties an opportunity to object - this is a sensible precaution against sham/forced marriage. The schedule should contain a declaration which is available for those not having a public wedding ceremony. The marriage should be formed when all legal elements (declaration and contract) have been made and consent is given (by signature in the schedule or during the ceremony.)

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided the legal framework is met the conduct of the ceremony is a personal matter to be agreed by all parties whilst upholding the sanctity and dignity of the occasion.

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

During a civil ceremony elements such as religious music and some wording could be agreed in advance provided that it is agreed by all parties involved and it remains clearly a civil service.

Please share your views below:

Music

Non contract / legal wording

Poems and readings

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Once married in a civil service what the couple then go on to do privately is not a matter for the law provided the contract is registered in only the civil register.

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided access can be gained by members of the public who have legitimate reasons to be present then this is an outdated practice.

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There should be limits on where ceremonies take place for health and safety reasons, to uphold the sanctity of the event and to prevent sham/forced marriages.

outdoors,, on inland waters such as lakes or rivers,, in the air, and/or, in private homes.

Please share your views below:

For reasons of health and safety and security weddings should not be conducted in private homes. It is unwise to have staff visiting premises which are so private that should issues arise their own wellbeing could be in jeopardy. Most houses are unsuitable for gatherings of this type, it would be difficult to police issues such as fire compliance, security and issues arising from illegal substances, drink or threatening behaviour.

Weddings on lakes or rivers should be possible provided all health, safety and security regulations are strictly enforced.

Weddings in the air on a large airliner would need to be strictly controlled to ensure that the requirement to have a legal address for the venue were met. Again health and safety implications do arise. Weddings on stunt and other aircraft should not be permitted.

Weddings outdoors in a suitable area of a beach, the grounds of a hotel or stately home or farm should be permitted provided all health, safety and security regulations could be met.

Consultation Question 49:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Public access to weddings is a fundamental pillar in the prevention of sham/forced marriage. Access should be available to all of those who may have legitimate reasons to complain.

Consultation Question 50:

No

No

No

Please expand on your answer:

Provided there is a clear definition within the ceremony itself as to it being a religious or non religious ceremony any authorised venue should be available to solemnise the wedding.

Consultation Question 51:

No

Please expand on your answer:

The responsibility should lie with the GRO and exercised through the local Superintendent Registrar. On the day of the ceremony if the venue is not acting in accordance with its licence then the ceremony officer should be given the delegated authority to postpone or cancel the ceremony.

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is robustly enforced now

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

We should all be singing from the same songsheet!

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes - the local Superintendent Registrar should continue to police all venues to ensure compliance with the approved premises licence. Venues make considerable money from hosting weddings and current requirements are not onerous or difficult and are easy to comply with.

Please share your views below:

All venues hosting weddings should be licenced ahead of the event and inspected by the Superintendent Registrar on the authority of GRO. Anywhere proposing to host an event should apply well in advance, a visit arranged and a licence for the date of the event issued should all health and safety, security and other obligations be met. The licence should not be enduring but should be requested to cover each event for rarely used venues but the current annual licences for venues which host many events should continue. New venues such as river boats etc could request to become an enduring approved premises. Licences should cover all of the property including its gardens and all function areas

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This is an important and historically relevant document and should reflect venue, date and occupations as well as mother, father and parent.

Consultation Question 55:

Please expand on your answer:

This should broaden the appeal in Wales

Consultation Question 56:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

This is a contentious issue and whilst the option should be retained it is not the right time for this step to be taken now.

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

All preliminary information should be correct, all options provided and all documentation and persons involved should be authorised and correct. Any or all issues of this kind should invalidate the contract. This is no different to many areas of contract law.

No

Please expand on your answer:

All aspects should be correct and there should be no erosion of the standard required or the whole system risks collapse.

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As per previous answer - all elements of the preliminaries should be correct.

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Provided there is no suspicion of sham marriage, the preliminaries and contract is signed and the marriage is legal what happens after that is not the business of anybody except the couple.

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

You are either legally married or you aren't - the presumption is open to abuse.

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Nullity based on lack of consent restricted by time is a misnomer - the valid is either valid or it is null - time does not change that fact.

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

For the assurance of the institution of marriage and the seriousness of the marriage contract it is imperative that all those entering into marriage have 100% faith that the wedding is in respects legal and they are aware of the implications of it. Those that mislead in any way should be subject to harsh penalty to preserve this faith.

CV 19 has proved the need to extend schedules when necessary - if they are made valid for 12m then this would avoid the need for short extensions/re-schedules but there should always be scope for national emergency rules to extend these further

Civil preliminaries could be remote if it is impossible for elements to be conducted face to face provided provisions are made for the parties to be required to attend face to face if there is suspicion of sham / forced marriage

Fully remote ceremonies are fraught with problems and should not be permitted.

I do not support the signing of the schedule by all parties remotely or on separate documents as this could lead to marriage fraud and there are no checks in place to prevent sham/forced marriage

Weddings on vessels at sea in the territorial waters should be permitted provided the vessel meets the health and safety and security provisions and that is conducted only by authorised registration service staff.

Opening this up to ships staff or other celebrants brings with it the problems already alluded to in previous answers

Consultation Question 69:

No

Please expand on your answer:

To be married under the protection of the laws of England and Wales should require that the wedding is conducted within that territory only. There could be challenges where the law of England and Wales is broadly in place but there are local laws which contradict or override. It is a costly exercise to explore each such territory and brings limited benefit to the couple but could also lead to commercial exploitation.

Chapter 13: The potential impact of our proposals

Consultation Question 85:

Please share your views below:

The current law is fair and robust although there are some areas which require updating and clarification as my answers in this consultation reflect. I believe that the current law is generally well understood and does not discourage marriage (it is on the increase!). Some of the proposals are sound and should further encourage couples to become legally married.

Consultation Question 86:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

The legal end of the marriage ceremony is one of the smallest cost considerations that couples have to deal with. Marriage has become an enormous business which has led to some significant cost implications - this is what puts people off. The costs of a wedding at a register office is reasonable for the majority of people and most offices are elegant and well presented and a very good place to marry. The costs of marrying in an approved premises can be significant and that is why so many are keen to apply for a licence. Despite the cost couples flock to them and they offer a wide variety of choice - but you do have to pay for it! The cost of marrying in a religious setting is comparable to a register office. Places not currently authorised but could be under the proposals will simply become another place for people to spend more money should they wish to do so. The key is that currently couples have a choice to suit themselves and their budget. The cost of the legal requirements for wedding ceremony are reasonable, straightforward and supportable - the events thereafter are where the commercialisation and pressure to spend lie. Proposals to add additional costs such as independent officiants are unwelcome and will not be appreciated and simply add to yet more criticism of the laws.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it.:

Availability of register office weddings is a key tenet of a couples choice for their ceremony. It is essential that they are quality venues in their own right and offer the best possible standard to each couple. They are affordable for most and offer a range of simple and enhanced options for couples. There is some room for change to current laws surrounding where people can marry but the cost savings of any changes should not counteract the requirement for the prevention of sham and forced marriages, the health, safety and security of staff and attendees and the dignity of the event. I do not believe that marriage in private homes is a sound proposal nor some other proposed venue. However, it has to be said that an approved premises licence should include the whole venue and its grounds as it is unjustifiable for a room to be licenced but not a rose garden at the same address. The necessity to have a separate wedding ceremony is fundamental to the sanctity of the event and underlines the serious nature of the contract which is being undertaken - this can so easily be lost in the rush and hubbub of organising the whole day.

Consultation Question 87:

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

The cost of an approved premises licence is minor when balanced against the revenue that is generated by each event that it leads to. The current costs are reasonable and for premises willing to comply with the criteria - which are simple and not expensive - are a clear investment. Many venues would not be viable without the income generated by holding an approved premises licence. The cost of the attendance of registrars to each premises is small compared to the income generated. For each wedding there are always registration officers available as rotas are closely monitored and fulfilled. For couple AP provide choice but at a significant cost. The danger of using independent ceremony officers is that this cost will simply rise and cannot be checked.

Please share your views below. If you have any evidence to support your answers, or which might help us assess the extent of possible benefits, please provide it. We would also welcome any data on the size of businesses that are affected by the law or will be impacted under our proposed reforms. :

Pre approval is an essential check against sham and forced marriage - changes will encourage people trafficking and exploitation of the vulnerable. I do not see any proposals which are necessary to change the availability of registration officers for civil weddings but I do see proposals which risk a dilution of quality and choice with an increase in expense to each couple if independent officiants are permitted. Venues are well served by quality staff currently - do not try to fix an unbroken system in this area. Extending the use of gardens and other currently not approved venues will undoubtedly bring business opportunity. Provided this is of benefit to marrying couples then this is to be applauded. But anything that increases the costs of a wedding unjustifiably should be avoided.

Costs to local government/LA : redundancy payments and then benefit payments to staff not required if independent replacements are used. Costs outweighed by the revenue generated by making more areas usable for weddings

This has never been an issue for me

I have had a request to officiate at a wedding in the bedroom of a grand parent who was terminally ill so she could witness the wedding. A blessing was offered in that situation as, without seeking a special licence, it could not happen under the current laws.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

Weddings at which I should have officiated during the pandemic have all been postponed due to the very limited number of guests allowed. Couples have been unable to decide which relatives they would invite even if they did not include any friends. Two were rearranging when the limit of 30 was introduced but had to postpone again when the limit dropped to 15.

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

With families now widespread couples want to have a ceremony in a place meaningful to them but to have to be there for 7 days before giving notice can take up most of a years holiday allowance allowing little time off before and after the wedding.

I would therefore favour 'resident in any English or Welsh registration district' rather than just the one in which the ceremony will take place. Whilst this would still cause difficulty for people returning from abroad for the ceremony it may help to avoid some arranged marriages or other marriages of convenience.

Please expand on your answer:

I agree with this, providing the amended schedule is available. My concern would be if the officiant was ill on the day. At present, as a Methodist Minister, another minister registered in the registration district can substitute at very short notice. Could such last minute substitutions be incorporated in some way? (I've now read the next question!)

Consultation Question 12:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Last minute illnesses / disasters happen and need to be covered in some way.

Please share your views below:

I would like to see 'family bereavement' added to the list above. A substitute should be able to act in other circumstances but in that case there should be time for an amended schedule to be issued.

Consultation Question 13:

No

Please expand on your answer:

This would prove very difficult for people close to the borders in particular where the couple may live in different countries but only 10 miles apart.

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I don't know enough about Anglican banns to comment

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

I hesitate to comment as I don't know enough about the Anglican system. I would prefer to see notice given in the same way for all weddings. If all were online then banns read just in the church where the wedding is to take place would be acceptable. If not also published on line then banns in the place of residence as well as where the wedding takes place would seem reasonable

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

I would prefer all couples to give notice by the same means which would make this irrelevant but if it remains at just the clergy authorising then yes to both points, or 'have the power to refer to the local registration office for authorisation before banns are published'.

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

This would seem to be reasonable

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

Given the complexity of possible 'convenience marriages' making an assessment of whether a marriage should take place or not is a lot to put on clergy who at the same time seek to be pastoral to those involved. Having had a situation (as a Methodist Minister) where investigations needed to take place it was good that the registration office were able to deal with that whilst I continued to give pastoral care to the couple. The dual role would have been very difficult.

I have reservations about this. To give one example. The law says we should not discriminate by various things including sexuality. Marriage is a commitment to each other which I believe should mean the couple cohabit. Exceptions should be made in the case of someone who dies before that has happened.

Please expand on your answer:

That has to depend on the nature of the illness. Ideally this should be the case but I think of someone diagnosed with a brain tumour who died 24 hours later. Had that been a weekend it would be unlikely an interview could take place.

Consultation Question 3:

Please share your views below:

A friends wedding plans had to be put on hold as the numbers were so restricted it was not the wedding they had dreamed of

Chapter 4: Preliminaries

Consultation Question 4:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes sometime people work abroad and it is difficult for them to keep coming back to England to sort paperwork out using holidays and the expense of flights

Consultation Question 5:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would allow the process to start while the couple were out of England or busy working and then have an interview at a more convenient time

Consultation Question 6:

seven days; or

Please expand on your answer:

Most people would be back home by this point and it would also allow time to correct any errors if there were any before the day

Consultation Question 7:

Please share your views below:

I don't think this would help prevent forced marriages as it would be difficult to detect if there was anyone else in the background. If this option was not available to everyone and only used for ethnic groups then a prejudice of racism could be perceived

Consultation Question 8:

Please share your views below:

yes

Consultation Question 9:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would be good as then you could view who was getting married regardless of where they had given notices

Consultation Question 10:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

a year seems enough time to be married

Consultation Question 11:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

what if it was a registrar or clergy member that might change could it say registrar , vicar, priest of whatever religion if they are to be given automatic right to conduct weddings if it was someone independent then their name would have to be shown as the list would need to be checked presumably to show they are able to do a legal wedding would having to have a new schedule not create a lot of extra work and running around for the couple and what would happen if they could not get a new one

Consultation Question 12:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

If this is the case who would check that that person was legally able to do the wedding

Please share your views below:

If a substitute could act in any other circumstances how is there any control over if the substitute was legally able to do the wedding would this not be open to fraud and scam

Consultation Question 13:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

all couple should have to follow the same legal preliminaries to get married so no one can say that they are being treated any different, as you have suggested all notices would be published on a data base how could anyone know if a church of England/Wales wedding was happening

Consultation Question 14:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Why would this be necessary if all couple followed the same legal preliminaries to get married no one can say that they are being treated any different, banns could still be called in church if the couple/church wished

Consultation Question 15:

Please share your views below:

All couple should have to follow the same legal preliminaries to get married so no one can say that they are being treated any different, It would be up to the church/couple if they wished to have banns displayed as this would not be the legal entitlement for the wedding to proceed

Consultation Question 16:

Please share your views below:

If the banns are going to be the legal framework then documentary evidence should be mandatory as should a separate meeting to mirror the civil requirement and prevent sham forced marriages

Consultation Question 17:

Please share your views below:

Yes

Consultation Question 18:

all weddings should be preceded by civil preliminaries.

Please expand on your answer:

this would seem a fairer system if all couples followed the same preliminaries recorded on one system/database than having 2 different ways. Allowing the COE COW to have a separate system appears to have a class system entitlement that other faiths could resent

Chapter 5: Officiants

Consultation Question 19:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

this would show that a legal ceremony was taking place to anyone attending

Consultation Question 20:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

They do a great job now so this would seem appropriate as a way to continue they are accountable to the Council they work for and have been thoroughly vetted before employed so trustworthy and easy to contact and have assurance that they are monitored and trained appropriately

Consultation Question 21:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would seem sensible and a potential way to reduce fees the couple pay if only one required

If the council felt some situations would form a Health and safety or duty of care that 2 should be present but this would not be accounted for in any fees

Consultation Question 22:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

would they be named on schedule and would there be a list for couples to check they had the legal status to marry and what would happen if they moved churches

Consultation Question 23:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It would seem all churches have a governing body as do the humanist society so that would be an appropriate route to go down

Consultation Question 24:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as it was recognised

Please share your views below:

Political Organisations

Sects / cults

Racists Organised parties

Consultation Question 25:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

I think that is what happens now

Consultation Question 26:

Please share your views below:

yes it seems inappropriate

Consultation Question 27:

Please share your views below:

Yes this would seem sensible a title could be used clerk in holy orders , priest , vicar, imam etc not sure if independent celebrant Humanist should have this extended to them

Consultation Question 28:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

this would enable everyone to only need to look at one list

Consultation Question 29:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I can understand the humanist society being granted the ability to conduct legal weddings but have reservations around individuals being given the same authority

Individuals may not be so easy to monitor and may have more issues around what happens if that one individual is unable to officiate on the day

Consultation Question 30:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes

Background checks DBS or similar

Non-bankrupt clause

Consultation Question 31:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

I would not advocate independent Officiants being given the authority to conduct a legal wedding however if they are then I would agree stringent measures would need to be in place and they would need to be continually monitored as I believe there is no requirement for them to be a part of a governing body

Consultation Question 32:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

However they should be able to recover all costs related to any marriage from visits , pre wedding training, planning service/script, time on the day , travel costs etc

Consultation Question 33:

No

Please expand on your answer:

There has to be a level playing field for anyone who is going to officiate at a wedding regardless of the status i.e. church, faith group, registrars. So enhancement fees should be able to be charged by all and then it would be up to the couple to choose according to their requirements and budgets. eg register offices have lovely rooms and extra ceremony choices that the couple can use as one of my friends did and another had to pay to use the church bells choir and have flowers

Consultation Question 34:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would seem appropriate and it would give clarity to couples around the choice they were making

Consultation Question 35:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

otherwise marriage is devalued

Consultation Question 36:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

General Register Office have vast expertise in this area

Consultation Question 37:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There should also be an avenue to report a concern to General Register Office

Consultation Question 38:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Necessary measure to have in place

Consultation Question 39:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure that there is a requirement for independents to be part of any governing body if not should this be a requirement

Consultation Question 40:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Provided that they have participated in ongoing training and adopted policy and procedure changes required

Consultation Question 41:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes this is very important to be a requirement if independents are given permission to conduct legal ceremonies although I have strong reservations around independents and the risk of fraud and financial risks to couples

Chapter 6: The wedding ceremony

Consultation Question 42:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It is important that at this final stage that no impediment to the marriage is established in some form in either a written or verbal statement

Consultation Question 43:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes as long as this is upholding the dignity of marriage and clearly shows a legal and binding commitment is being made

Consultation Question 44:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The couple would be required to satisfy the group performing the ceremony

Consultation Question 45:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

There are some things that my friend would have liked including in her wedding that were religious and not able to be part of the script she chose. Lots of people do not go to church but remember readings or songs from childhood that are actually religious

Please share your views below:

My friend wanted to have and to hold in sickness and health till death us do part but I think could not have this as it is used in church so wrote her one vows

Christmas weddings where a carol could be sung like deck the halls verses from the bible Love is patient and kind

Consultation Question 46:

No

Please expand on your answer:

Should that not be available as the choice of the couple

Consultation Question 47:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Think it is important that only invited guests can attend

Chapter 7: Location

Consultation Question 48:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As long as permission is sought for the location to be used and a risk assessment has been done and the dignity of marriage is upheld in the air, and/or

Please share your views below:

If in the air what would be recorded on the schedule as the place of marriage

Is this really a dignified way to uphold the ceremony of ,marriage

If a couple wish to have a ceremony in the air then it should be a celebration and a legal ceremony conducted on land

Consultation Question 49:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Invited guest only should be allowed to attend and it may be a family home that it would be inappropriate for anyone not invited to attend or request it for their wedding

Consultation Question 50:

Yes

Yes

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

If a couple have chosen a religious building presumably they have a belief linked to that building and would want the ceremony to reflect that belief.

I would not think that religious bodies would wish civil ceremonies to take place

Some form of restrictions should be therefore in place to have religious ceremonies in religious buildings and civil ceremonies in non religious buildings and the couple choose which is appropriate for them.

Consultation Question 51:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Guidance from General Register Office on managing a risk assessment
Dignity of the marriage ceremony
Permission to use the building /area has been approved

Consultation Question 52:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Risk assessments in place
Non offensive in dress actions and words

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

yes this should be provided

Consultation Question 53:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It would seem appropriate that venues could have something to promote in their wedding packages to show that they had been pre approved

Please share your views below:

Could the local authority or general register office hold the approval list as I believe happens now

Chapter 8: Registration

Consultation Question 54:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

yes and then this can be recorded

Consultation Question 55:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Couple choice not all marriage taking place in Wales are presumably for couples who speak the welsh language

Consultation Question 56:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Reservations that this would be open to fraud however if enough security assurance then potentially an option

Chapter 10: Validity and offences

Consultation Question 57:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes controls must be in place to protect all parties involved

No

Please expand on your answer:

I understand that measures should be in place to protect those couple who genuinely thought everything had been done correctly however everyone is aware that witnesses are required and that you must sign paperwork so am not sure why this would be required

Consultation Question 58:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

measures should be in place to protect couples

Consultation Question 59:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would appear then to give protection to both parties should the marriage be dissolved and in the case of those persons detained in prison cohabitation may not be an option

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The couple know they have not done any legal preliminaries or been through any form of marriage ceremony regardless of them cohabiting or the assumption friends and family have made

Consultation Question 60:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Why does there need to be a limit

Consultation Question 61:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Must be consequences of this to protect the couple who think they are having a legal wedding

Chapter 11: Special types of wedding

Consultation Question 62:

Please share your views below:

no

Consultation Question 63:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

same requirements should apply to all legal weddings

Consultation Question 64:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

not sure why this is necessary as the system allows a legal wedding to take place with no waiting period which is essential if someone is dying

Consultation Question 65:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Not sure my understanding that this option is already available if no urgency is required

Consultation Question 66:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Would simplify the process and take pressure to do quickly away if this was not a consideration

Consultation Question 67:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Lots of couples have had to delay weddings during the current pandemic and are having to re-do official paperwork causing stress and sometimes extra expense of having to pay again or lose time at work

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Consider who thought this pandemic would last as long and the difficulties to getting married during this year

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Many people were just generally frightened that they were in a vulnerable group and wanted to get married quickly

Consultation Question 68:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

would offer additional options to couples with a maritime connection or an opportunity for a company to start a marriage cruise ship business

Consultation Question 69:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Would give couples additional options

Consultation Question 70:

Please share your views below:

A large yacht or boat that would enable boat owners to diversify their business and generate income

Consultation Question 71:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

It may be a crew member/ captain / the owner who were appointment as officiants of the boat and these may change

Consultation Question 72:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Should be limited to ships crew members

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

This would enable same background checks controls and training to be in place and monitoring to taken

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

would mean that controls would be in place to ensure the protection of all involved

Consultation Question 73:

Please share your views below:

Ships often have a Chaplin so there may be a demand however what controls could be in place I am not sure, so maybe the wedding should be a legal maritime officiant and a blessing if the couple choose

Consultation Question 74:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

As couples may be on an extended cruise or travel it would be difficult to set a time limit of less than 1 year

Chapter 12: Fees

Consultation Question 75:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

The cost recovery would need to take account of the travel time and mileage involved as some areas of the county are very rural the time taken at the location as this paperwork may take much longer to complete especially if involve going into prisons

Consultation Question 76:

(1) the same fee as other cases in which the registration officer must travel to the person giving notice, set nationally on a cost-recovery basis; or

Please expand on your answer:

It is not always the case that those who are terminally ill have financial difficulties however could the council have the facility to reduce in cases of hardship I note the fee at present is a quarter of what a couple getting married pay so if looking at a fee on compassionate grounds then should this be that the one person pays the standard fee and no fee is charged for the terminally ill person.

Consultation Question 77:

Other

Please expand on your answer:

Provided this fee is on a cost recovery basis and does not put a burden on the council and other council tax payers of the area. I don't want to subsidise a wedding out of my council tax paid or have people from another area having a wedding subsidised when they do not pay any council tax at all

Consultation Question 78:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes this should be charged and set as areas of the country are very rural and will take longer to get to and have extra fuel costs

Consultation Question 79:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Yes this should be charged and set as areas of the country are very rural and will take longer to get to and have extra fuel costs. It may however be useful to have a national timeframe for how long the approval would last would it be an annual fee ?

Consultation Question 80:

Yes

Please expand on your answer:

Should this also take into account time meeting couples ,planning the wedding, script preparation and any rehearsals provided

It should be based on what an independent celebrants / humanist could do if they are given the authority to officiate a legal wedding so that healthy competition is created and couples can then make their own choice based on the services offered

Consultation Question 81:

Yes
